WEATHER TO BLAME FOR IT

So Say Several Delinquents in Court, and Others Who Mixed Things Up.

FURNITURE VAN STALLED.

Webley Got Drunk and So Did Charles Clinton—Alexander Is Warned.

The murky weather, fog and rain were responsible for other things besides possible murder and other crimes. For instance, last night at about 7 o'clock a heavily laden furniture van turned into Norwood avenue from East Front street, on its way to the borough. In the dim light the driver, Frank Malone, failed to notice a sink hole caused by the recent heavy rains and drove his van directly toward it. In an instant the two wheels on the off side of the van had sunk up to the hubs in the muddy hole and stuck. The team was unable to extricate the heavy load, so Malone unhitched them and drove them to a nearby stable to shelter and feed them for the night. This morning with the assistance of an automobile the van was hauled out to safe ground and the furniture was taken to its destination.

James Webley was another victim of the rain. Mr. Webley, a colored man, who lives at 608 West Fourth street, became inspired with the idea that whisky was a good thing with which to prevent possible attacks of the grip seein' as how he was working all day cartin' ashes in the rain. So on this principle he imbibed rather freely, so he told the court this morning and became helplessly drunk. He was found by Patrolman Nolan huddled up in the doorway next to the Plainfield theatre and brought to headquarters for safety. This morning Judge Runyon imposed a fine of $5 with the alternative of Webley's becoming the guest of the county for twenty days.

Charles Clinton, 59 years old, giving his address as Newark and his occupation as a florist in search of a job, was gathered in by the police for intoxication, too. He said he was wet through from his long tramp looking for work and when invited to drink by a casual acquaintance could hardly refuse, and as he was not used to liquor the one drink went to the place where his brains ought to have been. He was allowed to go with the understanding that he make his way back to Newark at once.

Isaac Alexander, of 612 East Third street, came in under another head. He was accused of dumping ashes in the street in front of his home without permission from Street Commissioner Andrew J. Gavett. Isaac was allowed to go with a warning.

FUNERAL SERVICES OF JOHN BECKER HELD.

The funeral services of John Becker, Sr., were held from the home of his son, John Becker, Jr., on Watchung avenue, Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock and were largely attended by relatives and friends, including many of the older residents of the city and borough who had known Mr. Becker since he came to Plainfield fifty years ago.

Rev. George Bowers, of Warrenville, a life-long friend of Mr. Becker, conducted the services, and he made eulogistic remarks about the life of Mr. Becker.

The burial was in the North Plainfield and the pall-bearers were Andrew J. Stiglitz, Henry Nischwitz, Stephen Schleif, Jacob Kettenring, J. F. W. Bamberger and Albert Pangborn.

Notice to Public!

Desiring that the public should not be misled by an article recently apeparing in another paper under the heading "R. G. Bush to Make Pier Blocks," in which among other things the article says Mr. Bush made the concrete blocks used in the Brokaw Garage which have shown no signs of weakness after months of severe strain. We desire to say that the blocks used in the Brokaw garage were not made by Mr. Bush, but were made by the Plainfield Cement Stone Co. Mr. Bush then being an employee of said company, but is no longer in its employ, and of course the company will in no manner be responsible for his work.

The Plainfield Cement Stone Company is at its old stand, doing business as heretofore, using the same material as have been used by this firm in the past, and this is our claim to superiority as well as in manufacture.

REV. MR. DORWARD TO GO TO MILWAUKEE CHURCH

Rev. William T. Dorward, pastor of the Stelton Baptist church, has received a hearty and unanimous call to the Tabernacle Baptist church, of Milwaukee, Wis. This is one of the important Baptist churches of that great city, having a membership between 400 and 500 members and offering a wide field for work. The pulpit of the church has been vacant since November.

The call came so urgently to Rev. Mr. Dorward that he consented to go to Milwalkee to look over the field. He has just returned from that city after spending two weeks there. He has told the church that he will take a week to consider the call.

Rev. Dr. Dorward is now in his fifteenth year at Stelton. His people there are most loyal and do not want him to leave. He had a happy and prosperous congregation in a historical church. For 236 years the Stelton Baptist church has been organized and during that time its ministers have served it for long terms.

MISS AGANS' FUNERAL SERVICES THURSDAY

The funeral services of Miss Henrietta Agans, whose death occurred yesterday at the home of her sister, Mrs. John M. Wyman, on East Front street, will be held from the Reformed church, North Branch, Thursday morning at 11:30 o'clock and Rev. John Y. Broek, pastor of Trinity Reformed church, will officiate. The burial will be at North Branch.

Miss Agans was the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Henry Agans, of North Branch, where she was born. Two months ago she went to Elizabeth to live with her sister, Miss Lydie Agans, and four weeks ago she was taken seriously ill with congestion of the brain.

For many years she was a member of the Reformed church at North Branch, but after going to Elizabeth, she identified herself with the Greystone Presbyterian church of that city.

Miss Agans is survived by six sisters, Mrs. John M. Wyman, of this city; Miss Lydie Agans, of Elizabeth; Mrs. Frank Morris, of Gladstone; Mrs. William Stryker, of Neshanic; Mrs. Andrew Price, of Mendham, and Mrs. Cornelius Dalley, of Annandale; also two brothers, John K. Agans, of Trenton, and Aaron T. Agans, of Lawrenceville.

MISS MORRIS TALKS ON PAGEANTRY AND MASQUE

Miss May Morris, daughter of William Morris, the famous English poet, gave an interesting lecture on Pageantry and Masque at the Hartridge School auditorium yesterday afternoon. Despite the rainstorm the hall was well filled, a great majority of the audience being women. The proceeds of the lecture will be given to the management of the tuberculosis camp.

Miss Morris' talk was augumented by stereopticon views. In her lecture the speaker gave in detail the pageantry and displays that marked the ancient drama and functions of the different royal courts of Europe. She told of the drama in England of the fourteenth and fifteenth centuries. An interesting part of her talk was the description of the cost of the gowns and outfits worn by members of the royal families at the ancient masques and functions attending the drama.

Celebration Postponed.

The eighth anniversary celebration of Horace J. Martin, Sr.,'s Sunday school class, which was to have been held at Trinity Reformed church, last night, was postponed on account of the storm. Only a few people met at the church and Mr. Martin decided to plan for another date which will be announced later.

Board of Trade Class.

The Board of Trade class will meet in the class room, top floor of the Woodhull & Martin building, 171 East Front street, tonight. Delegations from Dunellen, Fanwood and five townships are expected.

—Neuman Brothers have received a large shipment of new White Label canned goods, famous for their excellence. The assortment includes whole asparagus, asparagus tips, fancy peas, fancy stringless beans, fancy tiny lima beans, fancy Maine corn and fancy Jersey tomatoes.

ENTERTAIN ARCANUMITES

GRAND SECRETARY SPEAKS.

Music, Magic and Comic Recitations Are Features of Program at the Y. M. C. A. Auditorium.

The entertainment given in Y. M. C. A. hall last night under the auspices of four councils of the Royal Arcanum although started late, because of train delays, was none the less enjoyable, and the large audience which had gathered were patient and were finally rewarded for it. Bridgewater Council of Somerville; Bound Brook Council, of Bound Brook; Greenbrook and Plainfield Councils, of this city, made up the quartet of lodges of the order in charge of the following committee: Charles C. Davis, Herman Moosbrugger, G. H. L. Morton, Charles Beyer, Jr., and H. N. Holder.

Trains on the Central Railroad were anywhere from half an hour to an hour late and as the entertaining talent came from New York it was 9 o'clock before things got underway. When they did start they made everybody take notice of their various abilities. P. H. Baker, of Brooklyn, presided at the piano, William D. Bowen played the banjo, Frank Burton mystified the audience with his tricks, William L. Ward rendered several solos and George W. Duryea, of New York, captivated the audience with some splendid comic recitations.

Robert H. Alberts, grand secretary of the order, made the usual speech in which he gave statistics of the progress of the Royal Arcanum since its organization, and said that during the thirtythree years of its existence benefits to the amount of $7,000,000 had been paid to survivors of members he had no excuses to offer for the organization. He urged those of the male sex who had not yet joined to get aboard the wagon while there was time and make provision for their wives and families. After Mr. Alberts' speech the second part of the entertainment was given.

NO LETTER RECEIVED FROM PASTOR CALLED.

The officers of the Park Avenue Baptist church have not as yet received any further information from Rev. Gabriel R. Maguire, of Cleveland, O., relative to the call accepted at the local church. They are expecting a letter from him and it may reach here in time to be read at the midweek meeting of the church, tomorrow night.

Of course, the members of the local church are anxious that Mr. Maguire should undertake pastoral duties here within a reasonable time and it is possible that he may be able to come to Plainfield about April 1. He will doubtless give the members of his present church in Cleveland sufficient notice so that that pulpit can be supplied until a regular pastor is called.

Fire Committee Meets.

The Councilmanic fire committee met last night to consider details regarding the transfer of the fire alarm whistle from the electric light plant the Spicer Manufacturing Company building. It will take a few days to complete the arrangements, and in the meantime the P. S. C. will continue to furnish the steam for the whistle.

KEELER OFFERED $5,000 TO PLAY WITH GIANTS

Willie Keeler was so highly pleased with the reception and banquet tendered to him in this city last Monday night that when he received the official announcement of his release on the following day he notified a friend in this city that soon as he made a decision as to his further plans he would notify his local friends and admirers in a telegram to The Daily Press. Keeler was always known as "a man of his word" and he maintained his reputation in this case. At noon today The Daily Press received the following telegram from him:

"I am considering numerous offers and will know where I am at in a week I hope. Today I received a bully good offer from Manager John McGraw, offering me $5,000 to play with the Giants."

STENOGRAPHERS SCARED BY UNBALANCED WOMAN

Miss Iva Dayton, stenographer in the law offices of Judge Isaac P. Runyon was clicking away merrily on the typewriter and humming a tune at 10 o'clock this morning when she was interrupted by the entrance of a shabbily dressed woman apparently about sixty years of age. Miss Dayton ceased her work and inquired of the woman, in her customary pleasant manner:

"What can I do for you?"

"Hand me that yellow pencil," replied the woman.

Miss Dayton did as directed and the woman gave the floor a few vigorous stamps with her feet and wrote the following:

"I'm a messenger from the Holy Ghost, I want to know all."

The thought that the visitor was mentally unbalanced began to shoot through Miss Dayton's mind as she read the note. Running to the adjoining private office of Judge Runyon she exclaimed, "Oh, Mr. Runyon, there's a crazy woman in here," and then she ran down the hallway to the offices of Reed and Coddington to tell Miss Florence Haskard.

Judge Runyon, in the meantime, tried to engage the woman in conversation to get her name and place of residence, but all she would exclaim was "I want to know all." "I want to know all." Pounding her fist on the desk she made a bolt through the door and dashed into Reed & Coddington's office.

There she accosted Miss Haskard to whom she wrote another note similar to the one she did in Judge Runyon's office. Then she began to exclaim, "I want to know all, and know it quick."

By this time Miss Dayton recovered her equilibrium and cooly said to the woman: "Well you can find that out on Park avenue."

With this reply the woman dashed down the stairs and out in the pouring rain. She disappeared around the corner of West Second street and Park avenue. Miss Dayton showed great pluck and nerve by following her down stairs and perhaps if the latter had an umbrella at the time there would have been a big tale of "How a brave stenographer made a plucky capture of a crazy woman."

The scare this morning marked Miss Dayton's second thrilling experience in a year. Last spring a burglar entered her bedroom, via a ladder, at her home at New Market and stole a small sum of money. On that occasion Miss Dayton did not lose her presence of mind and when the burglar demanded to know where her pocketbook was she calmly said:

"There it is on the bureau, but leave my commutation ticket." The burglar did as directed and then Miss Dayton added, "Now get out." And he did get out in a jiffy.

LIE PASSED AT HEARING

Heated Debate When Prohibition and License Forces Meet.

STRONG ARGUMENTS MADE.

Anti-Saloon League, W. C. T. U. and Liquor Interests Represented at Hearing at Trenton Yesterday.

After the clearing up of the smoke of the battle yesterday at Trenton, where the fight over the "open Sunday" and Local Option bills was fought, the opinion prevailed that neither of the bills would become a law at this session of the Legislature. Former Governor Glenn, of North Carolina, J. Frank Burke, head of the New Jersey Anti-Saloon League, and Rev. John D. Fox, pastor of the State Street M. E. church, of Trenton, all spoke against the Sunday bill and others urged the passage of the local option law.

There were heated debates between Mayor Roe, of Milwaukee, and J. Frank Burke and a final one between Mr. Roe and Senator Gebhardt in which the lie was passed and threats of bringing the sergeant-at-arms to the front to escort one of the debaters from the floor. The hearing adjourned without any action being taken on either bill.

The W. C. T. U. were much in evidence, hundreds of the temperance advocates crowding into the galleries long before the hour for the opening of the events of the day and they carried their flags and brought their lunches so as to be in at the end.

Those familiar with the attitude of the members of the Legislature on the two important bills do not believe there is the slightest possibility of either measure becoming a law, at least for the present. They consider the present agitation as part of an educational campaign which later may bring to pass what the adherents of both bills so earnestly desire. Two and a half hours were given to each side of the questions in which to present their arguments and after all was over it was allowed that the open Sunday bill might get three votes in the Senate, certainly not more than four.

SPECIAL SERVICES BEGIN AT TEMPLE BAPTIST TONIGHT.

A series of evangelistic services will begin at the Temple Baptist church this evening, conducted by the pastor, Rev. J. W. Musson, and assisted by Rev. L. J. Westfall, of Wilmington, Del. While the meetings are especially intedded for the unconverted, as well as those not now connected with a place of worship, any one interested will be welcome. There will be short gospel talks and good music every night, except Saturday, for the present.

Suspended Sentence.

A charge of assault preferred by Joseph Arvey, a Hungarian, against John Boserach, a fellow-countryman, both employed in a section gang of the Central Railroad, was heard in the city court this morning before Judge William N. Runyon, who after hearing the evidence suspended sentence on Boserach. Counsellor F. J. Blatz appeared for Boserach.

At the request of the Mt. Carmel Lodge, Jerusalem Lodge, No. 26, F. & A. M., took charge of the services here a large number of the members attending the obsequies. Rev. Dr. Charles M. Anderson, pastor of the First M. E. church, conducted the services at the church, and the visiting Masons accompanied the remains to Hillside cemetery, where the burial took place.

A short Masonic service was held at the grave under the direction of Worshipful Master Dr. George D. Herring.

AUTOS COLLIDE IN FOG; BOTH SLIGHTLY DAMAGED

An accident involving the automobiles of two physicians, but doing no serious damage to either although each sought to aid the other, occurred last evening in the fog at the corner of Watchung avenue and Third street. The time, 5:30, was when the fog was densest and neither could see the other distinctly.

Dr. J. C. Anderson, in a Ford runabout, was about to turn into Third street from Watchung avenue, when Dr. T. S. Davis in his Corbin machine loomed up out of the fog and crahsed into the Ford car. The impact forced the smaller car to the curb before the brakes could be applied and the motor stopped. A little clever manoeuvring separated the two cars with a slight damage. Battered mud guards and smashed lamps resulted from the collision.

Both medicos hurried from their cars to offer each other help if needed and upon recognizing each other chatted for a few minutes, resuming their separate ways as if a contretemps of this character were an ordinary every day occurrence. Traffic was delayed in the street for a few minutes and the crowd which had gathered soon melted away into the fog.

MISSIONARY MEETING OF 1ST M.E. CHURCH WOMEN

The Women's Foreign Missionary Society of the First M. E. church, at its annual meeting in Vincent chapel, this morning, raised $30 toward the education of a native girl in Nanking, China, who has been named Grace Todd for a young woman of that name, who was a missionary in China for many years and who was killed in an automobile accident at Albany, N. Y., in November. She was home on a furlough and was in a carriage which was struck by an auto. Among the last addresses made by Miss Todd was at the home of Mrs. G. M. Rittenhouse on Sandford avenue, prior to going to Albany.

Mrs. M. Winter, as president of the society, was in the chair this morning and conducted the devotional exercises. The annual reports were presented, showing that $133.50 was raised during the past year. The society has a membership of forty-two.

These officers were elected for the coming year: President, Mrs. M. Winter; first vice-president, Mrs. William R. Benham; second vice-president, Mrs. Nelson Y. Hull; third vice-president, Mrs. D. E. Davis; fourth vice-president, Mrs. D. B. F. Randolph; corresponding secretary, Mrs. Charles E. Prior; recording secretary, Miss Minie B. Sharp; treasurer, Miss Susie Jackson.

One of the features of the meeting was the presentation of a paper by Mrs. J. Hervey Doane on "The Story of Spain." It was carefully written and was full of interesting data. The society adopted a resolution thanking the press of the city for the courtesies of the past year in publishing notices and arousing interest in missions. Luncheon was served at noon.

This afternoon the foreign missionary society will hold its annual meeting for the presentation of reports and election of officers.

STILETTO USED ON THREE

ROBERTI ONLY SCRATCHED.

Rain, Cards, Beer and an Accusation End in Possible Homicide on Lake Street Last Night.

Drink and murky weather with a charge of cheating at cards were responsible for the possible murder of Tony Bartoletto and the serious cutting of Cramer Lombardi at the home of Nicolas Martone, 1331 Lake street last night at about 7 o'clock. Another man in the scrap was Andrew Roberti, but apparently he escaped with a mere scratch. All three agree that Mike Cortes, an Italian, about 30 years old, did the cutting and Cortes made an effectual getaway. A description of the man has been wired to all the police departments in the State and New York, and it is believed Cortes will be apprehended before night.

According to the stories of the men they had been playing cards all day owing to the fact that they could not work in the open. Cramer and Roberto are employed at Hillside cemetery and Cortes works at a cement works in Dunellen. Beer was freely drunk during th day and towards night the long spree culminated in the fight which led to the stabbing. It is alleged that Bartoletto, the worst injured of the trio, complained that Cortes was cheating. Cortes became infuriated and drawing the ever ready stiletto begain cutting right and left. One lunge of the knife laid open Lombardi's cheek from the eye to the chin; another caught him on the other side of the face. A fierce thrust of the razor-like blade opened a wound in Bartoletto's left side which may prove fatal.

The crime was discovered merely by accident. Nicolas Martone, in whose home the affray took place, works in Newark, and he discovered Bartoletto carefully laid away in his bed rudely bandaged and all traces of the fight cleaned up. When he questioned the injured man the latter told how the injuries were inflicted and who were in the scrap. Martone immediately notified police headquarters and Sergeant Overbaugh and Roundsman Higgins were soon on the spot. They called City Physician Lufburrow, who sent Bartoletto to the hospital in the ambulance, while the officers gathered in Lombardi and Roberto, after they had been patched up by the doctor. Dr. Lufburrow said it would be three or four days before it would be possible to say whether Bartoletto would recover or die.

All the evidences, excepting the wounds of the men, were cleaned up before Marton got home from Newark, but the stories of the men implicating Cortes are all alike.

At the hospital at 2 o'clock this afternoon it was stated that Bartoletto was holding his own and recovery is possible.

BOROUGH PEDESTRIANS WALK TO SOMERVILLE.

Here's a starter for local pedestrians and long distance walkers. Borough Clerk Frederick A. Martin and Stryker Hoagland inhaled the first whiff of spring breezes on Saturday. It furnished an inspiration for a walk to Somerville and the pair covered the distance in three hours. They left this city at 1:50 p. m. and arrived at the Somerset county seat at 4:50 o'clock. This is considered excellent time in view of the soft condition of the roads.

Everything Is Here and Ready for You

Dressmakers are already busy on gowns for spring and summer time, forethoughtful folks having been buying silks and dress fabrics pretty liberally already, indicating that they have made an early start so as to be good and ready when the spring season rightly opens.

This is the wise thing to do. Make a date with your dressmaker so as to be sure of her services when you are ready, and select your fabrics and trimmings, and you will experience a peace of mind that comes only to the wise.

We have never shown a more likable collection of foreign and American dress fabrics than are gathered here today, and no other Newark store begins to match the exhibit.

Many of the weaves and colorings are confined exclusively to us by the makers, who realize that we have by far the greatest output in New Jersey.

We are making an exceptional showing such fabrics as

and other equally pretty fabrics. Amongst the shades are pearl gray, steel, ash of iris, cedar, drab, possum, pistachio, mullein, mignonette, violet, ash, snuff, nutmeg, Julian, walnut, Wilhelmina, the good old standard navy and other staple shades, and black, of course.

Prices here are, as you have the right to expect, very moderate indeed, for our buying facilities make it possible for us to get whatever concessions the manufacturers and importers can make, and our large sales enables us to transact business on the minimum of profit. The prices here quoted you will find by comparison with dress fabrics offered elsewhere at the same price, to be extremely low.

IF BABY WANTS A CARRIAGE

Let It Come From This Store

Of course there are some other stores selling baby carriages, but there is not one in the United States that we know of that shows more styles nor better makes, nor sells at lower prices than we do. Surely that is sufficient reason why you should come here when you want a carriage for baby's comfort and pleasure. Why waste time and take chances picking from a small stock with scant variety, and perhaps questionable makes?

More than fifty different styles are here already, and new ones are arriving almost daily so that there can be hardly anything you might wish forin the way of a carriage or go-cart that we cannot supply you at a moderate price.

Block Baby Carriages, English Perambulators, Pullmans, Sleepers and Collapsible Go-Carts.

Reed and wood bodies, leather and reed hoods; finished in natural colors, oak, blue, green, blue and white enamel; almost all of them have rubber-tired wheels.

Prices run from $10 to $50.

SPORTS HERE AND THERE

GOLF.

On the question of golf reforms the West evidently feels that its influence has been world-wide, as may be judged by the following from the pen of a Chicago man:

"One by one the suggestions in golf that originate in the fertile brain of Crafts W. Higgins are being taken up here and abroad. One of the latest compliments for this deep student of golf rules, regulations and the game is that made by 'Golfing,' of London, England which has started to pound the Royal and Ancient Golf Club because it would not awaken from its lethargy and recognize what is patent to every other golf organization and hundreds of thousands of golfers—that bogie golf is being played on every links in the world except St. Andrews. It seems that the editor of 'Golfing' and a special committee of three prominent English golfers got up a code of bogie rules, revised it and revised it, until they all agreed. They used the Western Golf Association code as the basis to go by—modified match play rules. Of course, one could not expect the Englishmen to adopt the Western Golf Association code word for word, in all cases, but they did in a number of instances.

"The only change they made was to add a rule stating that new holes should be made on the day of the competition, and one about the honor of driving off from the first tee. Those two rules were so well known that the Western Golf Association rules committee did not consider it necessary to put them in the special rules for bogie. All other changes are merely verbal, as the English seem to prefer a long and involved sentence rather than the terse, crisp language used by us. But the idea remains unchanged—the rule itself.

"This latest action on the part of the Britons is a far greater recognition of Western influence than anything else that has ever happened. Some Canadian clubs adopted the Western Golf Association bogie rules last summer, and so did a number of Eastern clubs. With British clubs playing bogie competitions under what practically are Western Golf Association rules, perhaps the United States Golf Association will recognize the bogie form of the game and make a code."

CATHOLICS TO LAY THE CORNER-STONE.

The corner-stone of the Church of the Immaculate Conception, Union avenue and Prince streets, Elizabeth, will be laid Sunday, March 13, with simple ceremonies. This church will be used by the Catholics in the northwestern section of Elizabeth, which has grown rapidly.

For some years the parishioners worshipped in a small building at North Broad and King streets. This was inadequate and was not centrally located. Plans were made for a new structure and work was begun. In the interval the parishioners are worshipping in a temporary chapel in the Elks' Home, in Westfield avenue.

Formerly Catholic recidents in this section worshipped in St. Mary's church, the oldest Catholic parish in Elizabeth. The pastor of the new church, the Rev. Louis J. Bohl, was formerly curate of St. Mary's and since his incumbency the Church of the Immaculate Conception has made great progress. Funds have been contributed liberally by the congregation.

A bazaar has been planned to take place after Lent in aid of the new building fund.

Another cornerstone laying will take place next Sunday, when the completion of the foundation of the Church of St. Peter and St. Paul, in Inslee place, will be marked with impressive ceremonies.

The new German Lutheran parish building is being rapidly completed and plans are being discussed for its occupancy in the spring.

The congregations of Epworth Methodist Episcopal church and Westminster Hope chapel are also planning new church buildings.

AMONG OUR NEIGHBORS

DUNELLEN AND VICINITY.

The Presbyterians will not be able to worship in their church next Sunday as expected owing to the alterations and installation of the pipe organ, but on March 13 it is expected that everything will be in readiness. Prior to the first Sunday service a musicale will be given. Choirmaster M. L. Rarick is now preparing a program which promises to eclipse any entertainment of its nature ever given in the church.

"Who swiped the $500 from the U. S. Express office?" is still the main question of the hour in the borough. Although a number of detectives worked zealously on the case for a week they were unable to establish any clues as to the identity of the thief.

Helen, the little daughter of Rev. and Mrs. Henry N. Jordan, is suffering with an attack of whooping cough.

Rev. A. S. Phelps, rector of Holy Innocents, who has been ill for nearly two weeks with the grip is reported to be on the mend.

Rev. E. O. Brown was in Trenton yesterday where he attended the hearing on the local option bill.

William Jenner is entertaining his sister, Mrs. Fannie Hart, of New York.

Miss Alice Pierce has returned from a visit to Brooklyn.

PLAINS AND FANWOOD.

If we cannot have an arc light on the Park avenue corner of the trolley why not move the small light across the street, where is will do some good? Since Walpole's Hotel has been closed this is one of the darkest corners in town and there is no other place in town that is used more than the corner.

Suckers are beginning to run in Green brook, and the fishermen are beginning to get busy. Lyall Mooney holds the record for size, having landed a 3½-pound fellow yesterday.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Walsh, of Prospect avenue, have returned from Brooklyn, where they were called by the death of Mr. Walsh's mother.

An officer on duty Saturday and Sunday night would do much to curb the boisteriousness on the streets of the town on these nights.

John Mooney, of Valley road, is spending several weeks in Iowa erecting a press for the Walter Scott Co., of Plainfield.

Mr. and Mrs. George Harper, of Front street, have returned from a visit with relatives in New York.

SOUTH PLAINFIELD.

The L. V. R. R. passenger service was slightly handicapped by the fog and storm of yesterday.

A hook and ladder wagon is being constructed for the local fire company.

LOCAL AMUSEMENTS

The announcement of a production bearing the William A. Brady trade mark is always a matter of interest to playgoers. When to the announcement is added Mr. Brady's quoted opinion that a new play is the equal of the greatest of all the popular successes he has ever produced, "Way-Down-East," the coming of the new play is certain to be a matter of importance to the many playgoers who have come to look upon the name of Brady as a guarantee of fine entertainment. The new play in question is "Mother," the work of Jules Eckert Goodman, and will be acted here on Monday night, March 2.

Good Show at Proctor's.

The Atlantic City Four, in a high class musical act, created a sensation at Proctor's last night. The piano, two cellos, mandolins and banjos are used. Percy Waram & Co., present an English sketch, "The Bo'suns Mate;" Powers & Wilson, in a "Poseyville Flirtation," present a charming skit. Miss Powers is a clever toe dancer, while Mr. Wilson is a good comedian. Fred Gilman in songs and impersonations makes a big impression. The pictures are great.

Dave Driscoll Signs.

Dave Driscoll, former Plainfield captain and first baseman, has signed to manage and cover first sack for New Brunswick next season. It is understood that the New Brunswick team will consist of practically the same lineup as last season.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles W. McCutchen, of Rockview avenue, are registered at the hotel "Park in Pines," Aiken, North Carolina, for the month of March.

MOVE AT LAST TO RAISE "THE MAINE"

It now seems certain that Congress will provide for raising the wreck of the battleship Maine and removing it from Havana Harbor. The first step toward that end was taken yesterday when a sub-committee of the House Committee on Naval Affairs voted unanimously in favor of a bill introduced by Representative George A. Loud, of Michigan.

When the full naval committee meets today to vote on Secretary Meyer's program for naval increase it is confidently expected that at the same time the recommendation of the sub-committee will be adopted and the Loud bill favorably reported to the House.

By the terms of the bill the Secretary of the Navy is directed to request immediately bids for the removal of the wreck and for the proper interment of the bodies therein in a national cemetery.

The President is authorized to make the necessary arrangements for a convention with Cuba, in which the Senate must concur, to carry out the provisions of the bill. A sum of money large enough to pay for the work is made immediately available.

MINISTER PREACHES ON MEETING GOD IN HEAVEN.

The subject of the sermon preached by Rev. John Y. Broek on Sunday night which was the seventh in the series on Heaven, was "Meeting God in Heaven." He took for his text Amos 4:12: "Prepare to meet thy God," and said in part:

"We all believe in an intelligent, personal living Being, who is the Creator, upholder and preserver of the universe. The ordinary person does not have brains enough to deny the existence of God. We need only to behold the wonderful mechanism of our body and ask who is the designer of it.

"The scientist can by the aid of the microscope discover the minutest form of life, but all scientists are agreed that they cannot create life. Back of all life is God. We believe in God who possesses personality. He knows all about us, and is all powerful. God exists without actual or possible change. There was no time when He was not and never will He cease to be.

"No mortal man has seen God as yet. He appeared in visions to the patriarchs of old. Man in his imperfect state could not behold the face of God but mortal man glorified will be able to see God's face in Heaven and live in His presence.

"The clear teaching of Scripture is that their life is the time for men to prepare to meet God. If we are not ready to meet Him now have we any ground for belief that we will be ready to appear in His presence in Heaven?"

ALBERT LEDERER SELLS RESCIDENTIAL PROPERTY.

Several realty deals in local property were closed today by Albert Lederer, the real estat broker. He disposed for the Ackerman estate the property on the north corner of Fifth street and Watchung avenue, to Simon Hirsch, the tailor. The consideration was about $11,000. This property was owned by State Senator Ernest R. Ackerman, Marion S. Ackerman, Mrs. Arthur Murphy and Dr. J. Ackerman Coles. It is the intention of Mr. Hirsch to improve the property.

Mr. Lederer also sold for the Mono Investment Company, to George L. Babcock, the residential property on the north corner of Fourth street and Central avenue, 110x170, opposite Truell Court. Unless the property is used in connection with the business of the Spicer Manufacturing Company, Mr. Babcock will erect an apartment house there.

The third deal is the sale of three stores at Watchung avenue and Fourth street, owned by William R. Codington and Walter Manning, to Mrs. Lena Hoester, of the borough. The consideration was about $15,000. Mrs. Hoester purchased this property for investment purposes.

SENATORS TO BE GUESTS OF THE CORRESPONDENTS.

Trenton, March 1.—The premier social event of the legislative session in the form of the annual banquet of the New Jersey Legislative Correspondents' Club will take place at the Hotel Stirling on the evening of Tuesday, March 8. The guests of honor will be Governor Fort, United States Senators Kean and Briggs, President of the Senate Frelinghuysen and Speaker Ward.

Charles A. Ransom, president of the club, will act as toastmaster. The dinner committee, of which James F. Dale is chairman, has prepared a program of novel stunts burlesqueing State officials and lawmaking projects. As has been the case for many years, William Devereaux will be the Heckler-in-chief commissioned to confuse and embarrass the distinguished men who will be called upon to make speeches.

Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Smith, who recently returned from a two months' honeymoon trip in Florida and Cuba, are residing for the present with Mrs. Smith's parents, Mr. and Mrs. F. T. Ostrom, of Albert street.

STATE TO REWARD BOY FOR HIS USEFUL IDEA.

Trenton, Mar. 1.—Emanuel Jaffey is only 13 years old, but he is an important figure about the New Jersey Legislature.

About four years ago Emanuel went to work for the bill clerks, his duties consisting of distributing bills on the desks of the members. Copies of the bills accumulated and were knocked off the desks and frequently lost. One day a member asked Emanuel if there was not some other method of getting the bills. The boy said he would see and that night after he got home he spent several hours thinking over the scheme. He landed one. He got about 100 of the bills in consecutive order numerically and went to a local bookbinder, where he had them done up with a paper binding. These books he distributed to the members at the rate of a dollar a book and during a session Emanual would make several hundred dollars.

About two weeks ago Colonel Falter E. Edge, the majority leader of the House, introduced a resolution providing that the State printer have these bills bound and placed on the desks of the members. Some of the newspaper correspondents went to Colonel Edge and explained that the idea was the invention of the boy and plans are now being made by which young Jaffey will secure some remuneration from the State, even if the State printer does distribute the bills.

ADJOURNS SHEARER TRIAL FOR WANT OF EVIDENCE.

The trial of William J. Shearer, former superintendent of the Elizabeth and Union county schools, on the indictment found for sending out alleged libelous letters attacking his successor, Richard E. Clement, was postponed indefinitely in the Court of Quarter Sessions yesterday.

Shearer was not in court. His counsel, Foster M. Voorhees, moved that the indictment be quashed on the ground that the State would be unable to prove its case. The proprietor of the New York printing house where the letters were said to have been prepared refused to come to New Jersey to testify. The evidence furnished by the other witnesses, he said, was immaterial, and without the New York printer's story it would, he held, be impossible to prove a case against his client.

Prosecutor C. Addison Swift denied that the State was not in a position to prove its case, while admitting the absence of one of the principal witnesses. He declared that it was very likely that the State would be in a position within a short time to back up its allegations. The case was, therefore, on his motion, put over to an indefinite date by Judge E. S. Atwater.

SILZER NOT A CANDIDATE.

"I am not a candidate for United States Representative," said Senator George S. Silzer, of Middlesex county, who has been mentioned as a probable candidate against Benjamin F. Howell in Washington dispatctes. "I am not wealthy enough for that office," he concluded.

Election Law Amendment.

Assemblyman Schwartz secured a favorable report from the committee on elections in the House at Trenton last night, on his bill requiring the county clerk to ze notified within ten days of the acceptance of a nomination made in a direct primary, in order to secure the printed name of the candidate on the official ballot.

Ninth Wedding Anniversary.

Rev. and Mrs. Ernest O. Brown, of Dunellen, observed the ninth anniversary of their wedding at a party given in their honor by relatives in New York last night. Mr. and Mrs. Brown were the recipients of numerous gifts for many congratulations.

Mr. and Mrs. William G. Mangan, of Netherwood avenue, have been spending a few days at Atlantic City.

"If a Great Thing can be done at all, it can be done easily. But it is that kind of ease with which a tree blossoms after long years of gathering strength."

PLAN TO ADVERTISE NEW JERSEY WIDELY

The bureau of statistics of labor and industry, of which Winton C. Garrison is chief, has recently mailed a copy of its industrial directory to every United States consul in the world, with a letter relating to the publication of which the following is a copy:

"With the approval of the United States department of State and the chief of the consular bureau, we have mailed to you, under separate cover, a copy of a publication issued by this department, under the title "Industrial Directory of New Jersey," which we trust will reach you in due time and in good condition. The book, as you will see, is an amplified gazeteer of our State, and also a very complete compendium of information relating to its material affairs and the opportunities open to homeseekers and industrialists who desire to find a location where industry will be most favored by natural conditions, and where enterprise brings the greatest reward.

"The directory is designed to advertise the State, and its advantages generally, and to give the widest possible publicity to its large manufacturing interests to which end a complete list of all manufacturing corporations and firms, with character of goods made and office address, is given in the back part of the book. May we ask you to favor our State by calling the attention of people in your consular jurisdiction to the contents of the directory, if proper occasion should arise for doing so? On our part we beg to assure you that inquiries relating to our State, addressed to this office from your jurisdiction, wil lreceive prompt attention."

Consular offices are established in practically all cities and towns of Europe, Asia, Africa, South America, Canada and the West Indies, and hereafter there will be few, if any, part of the civilized world at which the State of New Jersey and its multitudinous industries will not be thoroughly advertised. Special attention will be paid by the bureau to advertising our manufactures abroad, particularly in the non-manufacturing countries of South America and Asia, where as yet, probably through neglect on our part, English, German and French products are preferred to ours.

Since the distribution of the directory among the consuls, many letters have been received by the bureau from these officials, all commending the book in the highest terms, and stating that its pages afford just the kind of information most often called for in their jurisdictions by persons desirious of establishing American business connections, or who for any other purpose wish to extend their knowledge of our State.

Nothing yet issued in the line of public documents equals the general usefulness and popularity of this book. It is practically in a class by itself, in that it is the only State publication devoted to advertising and extending our manufacturing interests, by introducing a knowledge of the products of our mills and work shops to all the markets of the world, while at the same time presenting the most comprehensive compendium of information relating to all the cities, towns and villages of New Jersey, that has ever been brought together in one volume, and the bureau should be congratulated on the intelligence, energy and perseverance which brought about the production of such a book.

Any reasonable question that can be asked relating to the business interests of the State, or in reference to any one of its hundreds of separate communities, will find an answer in its pages. The directory has been distributed widely throughout the State, and many copies in addition to those sent to the consuls have been, on request, mailed to business firms in other States and in foreign nations.

SOME STATE NEWS BRIEFS

Bishop Scarborough, who has been seriously ill, has recovered and resumed his duties in connection with the Episcopal diocese of New Jersey.

Auto owners will be prevented from storing gasoline on their premises at Atlantic City under a new section to be added to the building law, under the recommendation of Building Chief Gillison.

Cost of living in Atlantic City is to be again increased by a raise in the price of taxicab fares, by a general agreement among owners of machines, to fifty cents a trip instead of the twenty-five cents formerly demanded.

Raiding single-handed a midnight crap game of the "Gas House Gang," in South Burlington, Saturday night, Patrolman Shedaker arrested the alleged ringleaders of the gang, Israel Timbers and Edward Bethard, colored, and lodged them in the city jail after a struggle.

In default of $200 bonds, Mrs. Bertha Madden Baldwin and Edward Sanderlain, who were arrested by Marshal Biggs on the charge of bigamy, in Millville, were taken to Bridgeton jail Saturday. Sanderlain admits having been married three times, but doesnt believe in divorce suits.

The bond of County Clerk-elect A. Carlton Hildreth was signed at Cape May Court House Saturday and he entered upon his duties yesterday. Mr. Hildreth has appointed as his deputy Sterling W. Cole, son of Eugene Cole, of Cape May county, and an attorney-at-law, who has been practising in Camden.

The discovery of a supposed deficit in the accounts of the Board of Education of Gloucester will, it was stated yesterday, be fully explained at the meeting of the board tomorrow night. The deficit is said to be about $2,000, and, it is claimed, may have been due to a bad system of book-keeping, or to the fact that the fiscal year of the schools ends July 1, while that of the city begins January 1.

Atlantic City residents are subscribing for the purchase of a gold medal for Captain Harry S. Wagas, of the steamship Annette, for saving the lives of Fred Driscoll and Edward Andrews, of Atlantic City, who were adrift in a sinking launch on the cod banks, miles off the coast. The young men, who were on a fishing trip when caught in a storm, would have drowned but for their timely rescue, in which Captain Wagas risked both his vessel and crew.

The Trenton police are alarmed by the depredations of what is apparently a gang of professional burglars. Saturday night the home of Mrs. Thomas Maddock, on Greenwood avenue, was looted of nearly $1,000 worth of jewelry and silverware. A skeleton key was used to enter the front door during the absence of the family, and nice discrimination was shown by the burglars in selecting their loot. Only articles that could be readily converted into cash were taken. The thieves left no clue.

The move made by Freeholder Thomas Munyan, of Harrison township, at the last meeting of the Gloucester County Board, looking to the acquirement by the county of the only two toll roads now existing, and making them free, has struck a popular chord among farmers and others of South Jersey. The freeholders are determined that hereafter when the roads are constructed only the best material must be used. The expense may be heavy at the outset, but the cost of repairs will be materially decreased.

Opening the door of his home on South Karren street, Trenton, in response to a ring at the bell late Saturday night, George Santo received a stunning blow on the head from a bottle in the hand of a man standing on the step. Santo was able to call for help, and other occupants of the house ran to his aid. Patrolman Blauth chanced to be passing just as four men started to run from the scene, and he coralled the quartet. They are fellow-countrymen of Santo, but the cause of the attack is not known.

After a lively chase early Sunday morning Policeman Wright Cox arrested Benjamin Welch, twenty years old, and Edward Cromeyn, twenty-one years old, at Third and Benson streets, Camden, on a charge of highway robbery. The complaint was made by Robert E. Allen, of 221 Burns street, who alleges that while he was on his way home he was attacked by the two men who, he says, were about to rob him when the policeman appeared. Allen claims that in treating the men in a saloon late Saturday night he displayed considerable money.

Badly used up Charles and Frederick Blackburn, brothers, were landed in the city jail in Gloucester Sunday afternoon, after a long and exciting battle. Charles was under arrest by Policeman Elliott on a charge of disorderly conduct when Frederick interfered in an effort to rescue him. The officer let Charles go and seized Frederick, when Charles armed himself with some bricks and followed. Frederick all the while making desperate resistance. The struggle continued several blocks when Policeman Baker came to the aid of his brother officer.

Rev. Father Francis McShane, head of the St. Nicholas Roman Catholic parish of Atlantic City, purchased the Rossmore Hotel from the estate of the late Dr. Carberry for $29,900 Saturday. The hotel was sold at auction and will be added to the property of St. Nicholas parish, which it adjoins. The sale was ordered by the courts, which sustained the will of Dr. Carberry, in which he declared that he "had wasted twenty years of his life on knaves and fools," and the money will go to institutions from which his relatives sought to divert it by claims that the man was of unsound mind.

The Eeternal Feminine.

Queen Elizabeth, in a characteristic rage, had proclaimed the doom of the courtier, "Off with his head!"

The culprit courtier was heard to mutter something to himself.

"What said the satiff?" demanded Elizabeth.

"May it please your majesty," faltered one of the guards, "his words were: 'Pretty rought. It is becoming—'"

"Ha! pretty ruff! Truly the fellow hath good taste, and it were a pity—Let sentence be suspended. We have need of men of good judgment and sound discretion about us. I will hear further what he may have to say."—Harper's Magazine

And so matters ran on and on. It needed but a spark to ignite the powder, it would have seemed, and yet a vast cataclysm of nature only brought about the explosion. He had never touched her except to take her hand. Her person had been as inviolate to him as if she had been a star above his head. And she had been careful under no circumstances to allow more than that. Their hands had clasped often. Indeed, with every "Good night" and "Good morning" the circuit of touch was made and broken, but that was all. They usually parted at night on the sands where she had first been thrown ashore. He would stand and watch her as she glided away from him in the darkness toward the cave that was her home. She had impressed upon him how she trusted him, the absolute assurance, the entire confidence that she had that he would respect the agreement between them and he would have died rather than have transgressed the law, stepped over that imaginary barrier, as potent as the circle of Richelieu, which kept them apart.

And yet she would never know what horrible constraint he put upon himself. How he stood with clenched hands and quivering body and stared after her, long after she had gone. She would never know how that intensity of longing grew and grew until sometimes he felt that he could not overmaster it. She would never know how he plunged away staggering through the woods and threw himself down upon the sands on his side of the island, disdaining even the rude shelter of the cave which was his home, and fought it out. Sometimes she saw evidences of internal conflict in his soul the next morning. The calm serenity, the indifference, the animal-like satisfaction with which he had faced life when she first knew him had long since disappeared. There were deepening lines upon his face which told of thought, of struggle, and of character thus developed by these two potent factors in shaping human destiny.

And he could never know wnat was in her mind, either. He never dreamed that she could love him. She was so far above him, so supreme in his eyes that the possibility never occurred so him. If he had known for a moment how she thought of him, the great passion in both hearts would have overleaped every obstacle and in a moment he would have had her in his arms. Well, indeed, it is that the power to read human hearts is reserved for the Mind which towers above human passions because it is divine.

And so these two while drawing together as inevitably and as irresistibly as the tide comes in were still kept apart. Their feelings were in solution as it were. A precipitant must be thrown into the atmosphere in which they moved and lived and had their being to disclose them to each other.

On one certain balmy night, they parted as usual. Was the hand clasp longer, was the glance with which he peered at her under the moonlight more self revealing than usual? Did something in his own breast call to the surface that which beat around her heart? At any rate, it was with a great effort that she tore herself away at last and for the first time in his life, although she knew it not, he followed after her with a few noiseless steps only to stop, his face white in the moonlight, drops of sweat beading his brow in the violence of his effort. Having transgressed even to that degree the law, he turned instantly, without waiting to watch her disappear around the jutting crag that marked the little amphitheater where she slept, and went to his own side of the island resolutely without a moment's hesitation or delay.

CHAPTER X.

Hearts Awakened.

For the moment she forgot where she was and fancied herself back on the ship or more naturally tossing about in that small boat after that long, eventful voyage. Yet no motion to which she had ever been subjected not even the wildest pitch of the storm which had finally cast her away, produced in her such strange emotions as she experienced then. For the earth itself was trembling, quivering, rocking. The cave wall above her, seen dimly by the filtering light of very early dawn which came through the opening, partook of the mad, fantastic motion. In another second she realized that it was an earthquake. The air seemed filled with a peculiar ringing sound of storm.

Her bed, of course, was the soft sand over which grass had been strewn. She lay, therefore, on the floor and could not be thrown down, but she was rolled from side to side in a way which paralyzed her senses. Never in all her experience had she known such a sick feeling of terror. When the foundations of things are shaken, when not merely the great deep but the solid earth is broken up, humanity stands as it in the presence of the power of God. She lay resistless, staring, praying, wondering whether the shaking rock over her head would fall and crush her.

In a moment the instinct of life quickened her to action. She rose to her knees, staggered to her feet and tried to make her way to the entrance. Walking was terrible. The earth seemed to have shaken for hours, and yet the duration of the shock was really less than a minute. Its violence was terrific. Just before she reached the opening, it stopped with one tremendous shock as suddenly as it had begun. The next second, with a roar that sounded like a thousand pieces of artillery, the gray hazy light in front of her was blotted out by a falling mass of rock which just escaped her. The face of the cliff had given away. In deeper, intenser terror than before she threw herself against the barrier. It was as hard and as unyielding as the other walls. No light came to her even. She was imprisoned alive in this rocky sepulcher. She sank down on her knees and buried her face in her hands. She murmured words of prayer.

Her mind flew to the other side of the island, to the man. Was he, too, entombed? Was this the end of her labors? Outside she could hear the wind roar and the waves thundering with awful violence on the shore. Before the earthquake had come the storm. There was still some connection between the cave and the outer air, it seemed, for she was now conscious of lightning flashes. After the storm, came the fire. Her mind went back to what she had read from the Bible a few days before of Elijah's despair. Therefore in like case she listened with all her heart for the still voice of comfort to her awestruck soul. It did not seem to come. She was doomed; she would never see him again, if indeed he were yet alive. She knew her feeling for him now. She slipped forward and fell fainting on the sandy floor of the cave. And still the voice was there. Presently it came to her, as the voice of God usually comes to humanity, through the lips of man.

After a space, how long after she could not tell, she was conscious of a human cry through the wild clamor of the storm. A voice that she knew and loved was calling her by name. Was it some wraithlike fancy of the storm? She rose to her knees, sick and faint, and listened. No, it was a human voice, his voice, her name. The cry was fraught with frantic appeal. It thrilled and vibrated with passion. It told her in that awful moment a story which she had not read. It revealed to her imaginations of which she had not dreamed. She was fascinated with what she heard. She forgot for the moment to answer. All the woman in her, the eternal feminine in her, listened. Her bosom rose and fell, her heart throbbed, her pulses beat. Alone with that wild, passionate, appealing, frantic cry, she forgot the earthquake, she forgot the prison, she forgot the storm, she forgot the world. She only realized that there out in the dawn, a man, the man of all the world, who loved her was calling her name. The old call of manhood to womanhood, of mate to mate.

She rose instantly to her feet. This time it was the beating of her heart that pitched and tossed her body. She leaned against the rock wall and then she called his name.

"Man," she cried, "are you safe?"

"Yes," was the answer. "And you?"

"Entirely so, save for this prison."

"Thank God!" came faintly to her from beyond the wall. "Thank God, I hear your voice. I shall have you out, never fear."

She pressed her ear close to the heap of huge loose stones which filled the opening. She could hear him working outside.

"Don't be afraid," he said at last.

"I fear nothing," she answered, "if you are there."

In one instant the situations of life had been reversed. He was the master now and she hung upon his words and actions even as he had done in days gone by.

She had no knowledge of what task was before him, but she could hear the progress that he was making. It was evident that he was working furiously, and yet he stopped once in every little while to reassure himself as to her presence.

"Woman," he cried, "are you still there?"

"Here and waiting," was the answer.

He needed that assurance of her safety to enable him to achieve his prodigious task. How terrible were the efforts he put forth, she did not know until afterward, but his was the work of a Titan. He was moving mountains with his bare hands. Inspired by love, mightest of passions, he was tearing asunder, like the earthquake, the rocky foundations of the world. Well for him that he was so thewed and sinwed. Well for her that God had added strength and power and energy to all his other spelndid qualities. He had never done any work in his life harder than the climbing of a tree, but no toiler with a heritage of earth's whole experience of labor could have struggled as did he.

He had been awakened at the selfsame instant in his lonely cell upon the other side of the island. With the first shock he remembered that some time in his days of darkness before she came there had been a similar upheaval. He realized instantly what it was. Less timorous than the woman, more agile, he did not lie supine for a single second. His thoughts were instantly for her. He had thrown himself from his cave and had raced across the shaking, quivering island without the hesitation of a moment. Never so long as he might live could he forget the shock that came to him when he saw his way to her barred by that great heap of rock, fallen from the face of the cliff, which lay over the entrance to the cave. For one moment he had stood appalled and then he had got to work. How much time had elapsed before he arrived at her door, how much time it took him to clear it way, he had no idea. He had no thought but that he must open a passage and get to her dead or alive.

BILL IN CONGRESS FOR MILITIA'S PAY

While the New Jersey House of Assembly has under consideration the Moore bill to pay the enlisted men 50 cents for attending drills, and officers a larger sum, Representative Brownlow, in Congress, has put in a bill going Assemblyman Moore 100 per cent. better, and if the bill passes then it would be unnecessary to pass the Moore bill, for the national government would stand the expense instead of the State of New Jersey. It is computed that to pay the enlisted men 50 cents under the Moore bill would cost this State $100,000 a year, and it is said here that the people would not countenance this additional sum of money taken from the public treasury for the National Guard. During the week attention has been called in this part of the State to the larger per capita militia in this State than in Pennsylvania.

The Philadelphia strike has caused the authorities in Pennsylvania to think seriously of calling out the entire Pennsylvania Guard, and the total number of soldiers there is 10,000 men. New Jersey, very much smaller in area and in population, has over 5,000 soldiers. So this larger number of soldiers supported in a smaller State has caused some of the adherents of the Moore bill to pause, and they may vote against it should Mr. Moore get it up for final action this coming week.

The opponents of the Moore bill have gotten hold of the bill in Congress to pay the National Guardsmen for drill attendance, and they think it better for the government to go into its strong box than for the State of New Jersey, especially as the government is working to put the National Guards on a war footing as a military reserve to be used instantly in time of war.

The provisions of the Representative Brownlow bill in Congress are "that on and after the passage and approval of this act commanding officers of battalions and companies; regimental adjutants, battalion adjutants and company officers of the National Guards of the State, Territories and District of Columbia, as defined by the act of January 27, 1908, shall receive a sum equal to 33 1-3 per cent of the amount paid to the officers of the regular army of like rank and service. That first sergeants of companies of the National Guards, as aforesaid, shall receive $2 for each drill attended. All other non-commissioned officers of companies shall receive $1.50 for each drill attended, and all other enlisted men of companies shall receive $1 for each drill attended. Any enlisted man missing one drill during any month without being excused by proper authority shall forfeit his pay for the entire month." This bill is said to have the favorable opinion of many congressmen, and of the war department.

Making a Grate Fire.

There are two great essentials in a good fireplace. One is the relation between the opening into the room and the flue area—the latter should be one-tenth of the former area; the other is what is called the "smokechamber" a part that corresponds to the dome on a fire-engine, which is designed to take up and equalize the force of the stream that is pumped intermittently through it. In much the same way the smoke chamber takes up the inequalities of draft and down draft and keeps the smoke going steadily up the chimney. The brickwork at the top of the fireplace, just above the opening, is drawn forward to form the "throat"—an opening into the smoke chamber three or four inches.

THIEF ROBS CHURCH THEN A POSTOFFICE.

A horse and buggy was found yesterday afternoon near New Vernon which proved to be the one stolen from the stables of Father Ryan in Bernardsville early yesterday morning.

The New Vernon postoffice, which is kept in the store of William Smith of that place, was entered and about $10 worth of stamps stolen.

Police authorities at Morristown are of the opinion that both robberies were committed by the same parties and that the horse ran away from the men while they were effecting an entrance into the postoffice.

Early yesterday morning thieves, presumably the same men, entered the Church of Our Lady of Perpetual Help in Bernardsville, robbed the poor box, and it is believed made off with the communion set, which is said to be of pure gold.

A suspicious character was seen in the neighborhood the preceding afternoon. About 2 o'clock yesterday morning Philip King, an employe of Father Ryan, says that he was awakened by the barking of dogs, and that while he was lying awake he heard a wagon being driven out of the barn.

YOUTHFUL ATHLETES DO WELL IN COMPETITION

A program of rare sport was furnished in the Sunday School Athletic League meet at the Y. M. C. A. last night. The inclement weather held the attendance down, but outside conditions did not interfere in the least with the sport. Six events were contested in the Senior boys' class and three in the Junior class.

Russell Miller, of the First Baptist church, the winner of the potato race in the Senior class, made a notable performance by crossing the line first in 1 minute and 41 1-5 seconds, which is 1 1-5 seconds behind the Senior boys' world's record. The summary:

HOCKEY EXPERTS HAIL PEACOCK AS A WONDER

Jack Peacock, the former North Plainfield athletic star, has made a big name for himself as a member of the Princeton University hockey team. While attending the borough school Peacock ranked high as the pitcher of the N. P. H. S. nine. He was also a speedy basketball player.

Purves T. Knox, the New York Evening Mail's hockey expert, yesterday lauded Peacock in the following words:

"There can be no question about Peacock being the best goal tender in the colleges, and in the estimation of many he is the best man in front of a net in this country. He would rank among the best in the Dominion."

Knox also includes Peacock in the All-Intercollegiate hockey team, which he speaks as follows: Peacock, Princeton, goal; Johnson, Yale, point; Read, Princeton, cover; Martin, Yale, rover; Hicks, Harvard, center; Heron, Yale, left wing; Cresswallace, Cornell, right wing.

Fairviews are Victorious.

The Fairview Cycle Club basketball five defeated the Grace church quintet yesterday in a lively contest by the score of 30 to 25. Frank Dunning played the star game for the Fairviews.

JUDGE HOLDS COURT IN A RAHWAY STREET

John Clark, a trusty at the New Jersey Reformatory, for brutally kicking a horse at noon yesterday at Rahway, was arrested charged with cruelty to animals. Clark had tied the horse to a weight and gone into a store. The horse became frightened and backed, dragging the weight with it. Clark grabbed the horse by the bridle and at the same time kicked the animal several times.

Freeholder Adolph Greuner ordered that the man be arrested. For several minutes there was a lively scene. Clark threatened to harm any who came near him. Justice of the Peace Robert D. Gibby, who was passing, held court in the street and paroled Clark, to appear for trial tomorrow.

Danish Lutheran services will be held tomorrow night at 8 o'clock in the W. C. T. U. rooms, with preaching by Rev. Theodore Beck, of Brooklyn.

WILL PLAINFIELD JOIN NEW JERSEY LEAGUE?

J. W. Dobbins, the baseball league promoter of Newark, has called a meeting to be held next Sunday at the American House, New Brunswick, to organize the New Jersey State Baseball League. Mr. Dobbins has placed Plainfield in the proposed circuit, but no one here appears to know anything definite of the plans of Mr. Dobbins. However, it is possible that Manager Ernest Dorflinger, and other local enthusiasts will attend Sunday's session to hear Dobbins unravel his plans.

In adition to Plainfield being in the circuit the other towns named are Somerville, New Brunswick, Perth Amboy, Rahway, Elizabeth, Newark, Harrison or Summit. It is planned to play games on Saturdays, Sundays and holidays. The promoters it is understood are planning to secure the Plainfield Driving Park to play Sunday games.

NEW BRUNSWICKS POST RECORD SCORE 1,032

New Brunswick Elks rolled in classy style on their home "drives" last night and snowed Plainfield under in three straight contests. In addition to making a clean sweep the Middlesex aggregation topped their brilliant work off by posting a 1,032 score in the final game, the high team score of the league.

The first encounter failed to give a scent to the rooters that anything out of the ordinary was due. Both teams were off their usual form and New Brunswick won by a margin of 70 pins, the score being 874 to 804. It might be added to this chapter, however, that "Papa" Frank Blatz was a bit nervous and turned in a paltry 158, which is his lowest score of the season.

Matters improved for both teams in the second round. New Brunswick boosted its score to 922. Plainfield also did a little better than in the first contest and totaled 861, but it wasn't sufficient to land a winner.

The locals went under by a margin of 98 pins in the last performance. In this record contest Harkins tallied 233, Greenwald 231 and Burton 225 for New Brunswick. Johnny Campbell held up a bit of consolation for the home team by tallying 250, but it went for naught.

In the three games New Brunswick totaled 2,828 pins to the local's 2,595. The scores:

Plainfield.
Blatz	158	181	187

EXPLOSIONS SPREAD TERROR IN NEWARK

Three explosions in quick succession wrecked a four story brick business building at Nos. 68 and 70 Springfield avenue, Newark, about 3 o'clock yesterday morning. The force of the successive explosions was terrific and other buildings in the neighborhood were damaged. Occupants of houses in Springfield avenue, in Stirling street, in the rear of the wrecked building and in other streets were thrown from their beds and badly frightened, while pictures fell from walls and crockery and furniture were thrown about. In Springfield avenue and Stirling street, in houses used for residential purposes, every window was smashed, while not a building for more than a block escaped some damage. Large plate glass windows of the West Side Trust Company, at High street and Springfield avenue, were shattered, as were plate glass windows in half a dozen other stores in the immediate vicinity. The wrecked building was owned by Dr. Joseph Kussy, who valued it at $25,000. He carried insurance of $17,000. The total damage is placed at $50,000.

It is not known whether the explosions were the result of an accumulation of gas following a leak or whether dynamite or some other powerful explosive was placed in the building by enemies of George Pappas, a wealthy Greek candy manufacturer, who occupied part of the wrecked building.

Pastor Changes His Flock.

The Rev. Charles E. Little, pastor of the Verona Methodist Episcopal church, Verona, will retire at the coming Newark Conference, and will devote his time to poultry raising on his farm near Cedar Grove. The Rev. Charles H. Powers, of California, was called to the pastorate, but declined.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Place, of Grove street, are visiting their son, Walter Place, at Waban, Mass.

COMET'S GAS HARMLESS

Halley's Comet May Have a Sting in Its Tail, But it Can't Hurt Us.

ATMOSPHERE PROTECTS EARTH.

Visitor Will Be Seen from End of March to Last of June—Meterorites Expected Too.

Alfred Mitchell, professor of Astronomy at Columbia University, assuaged the fears of the people who are expecting to be asphyxiated by cyanogen gas on the coming visit of Halley's comet when he declared last night in his lecture in the First Presbyterian church that the earth's atmosphere was so dense that the gas could not penetrate it. He also said that the only spectacular display we might expect was an occasional shower of small meteors during the time the comet is making its way into space after May 18 next.

The lecture itself was by far the most interesting of its kind ever given here and the audience was held spell bound by the vivid photographs of the heavens thrown on the screen. Professor Mitchell prefaced his address with a history of the superstitions attached to all comets and while it was safe to predict a war or some other great catastrophe on the announcement of the discovery of a comet it was made so because from one to five or these celestial visitors are discovered every year. Halley's comet, he said had been traced back as far as 11, B. C.

Referring to astronomers of olden times Professor Mitchell said many of them thought the comets were offshoots from the sun and would eventually fall back into the orb of day. But this is fallacious as the gaseous bodies move with such speed through the zenith that the attraction of the sun is not powerful enough to make them deviate from the orbits, although Jupiter is responsible for many of the comets changing or deviating from their original paths through the heavens.

Many comprehensive views of the heavens were shown which to the unprofessional eye were marvelous. After showing the huge telescopes at the Yerkes observatory near Chicago and telling of the methods of handling the instruments, how photographs are taken and the wrath engendered by clouds just when the attronomer expects to do his best work, the lecturer threw on the screen photographs of other comets, notably those of the Brooks, Gales and Halley, other pictures showing ancient woodcuts and drawings which looked like pollywogs, knives, swords and other grotesque figures. A strange feature about Halley's comet is the fact that it is the only one which has its motion in a right hand direction, in other words it follows the same motion as the hands of a clock, while all the others move in the opposite direction.

Another strange feature about comets in general is that their tails invariably point away from the sun. Some of the larger of these comets have heads half a million miles thick yet one of them could be safely stowed away in an ordinary hand bag. The comet of 1852 which so mysteriously disappeared has been accounted for. Shortly after its closest approach to the earth in that year great showers of meteors were observed at sea and it is the belief of all astronomers that this phenomenon revealed the disintegration of that great luminous body which had more than half the world gazing heavenward.

The interest in Halley's comet increases as the time for its nearest approach to earth shortens. While this visitor will be 14,000,000 miles away the tail will be so lengthened that it will sweep over a portion of the earth, but without danger to its inhabitants. On March 26 the comet will become visible to the naked eye shortly before sunrise in the eastern sky. It will gradually grow in brightness until on May 18 it will be at its best. On May 19 the earth will have turned sufficient to make the comet an evening spectacle and in the western sky, thus it will remain until its disappearance into space.

It was unfortunate that there were so few people in the audience last night, not more than fifty being present. This was due, of course, to the weather. After the lecture a discussion was held and several questions put to Professor Mitchell regarding the great comet named after Donnatti and which appeared in 1874 and was extremely bright. Several of the men in the audience remembered this comet and wondered why it was not mentioned among the others. Mr. Mitchell explained that there were others which had not been mentioned, but it was for lack of time.

Augustus V. Searing, Jr., handled the steropoticon splendidly and was a material aid to the lecturer.

IT'S "FOOL POLICY" TO EDIT MY COPY—JEFFERY

William Jeffery, president of the Board of Trade, seriously objects to this paper editing copy that he may see fit to contribute with a request for publication. A couple of weeks ago, he gave his expert opinion on how copy, of interest to him, was handled by our contemporary. Having taken that paper to task, he now contributes this advice to The Daily Press, for which we are deeply grateful, realizing as never before that copy supplied by him does not deserve to be treated with the blue pencil:

"This morning I sent you a notice, copy of which appeared in the Courier-News of today. You printed half of the notice, omitting the invitation to the people of Plainfield to attend this meeting. In the first place, I want you to realize right now that I am giving my services to the city of Plainfield without any compensation, whatever, and there are other people doing the same thing, and if your paper can not muster up sufficient interest in civic affairs of this city to publish a notice which would take up a space of less than two inches in your paper, then indeed, it is much to be regretted.

"You may have a right to refuse to publish a notice of this kind, but you have no right to cut out half of it. You are not serving yourselves or anyone else. It is what I consider a fool policy.

"A proposed meeting of people from so many places, all interested in the same thing, some of these men will drive many miles to get here, is worthy of better treatment."

SHADE TREE COMMISSION OUTLINES ITS PURPOSES

The Shade Tree Commission is empowered by statute to plant, set out, maintain, protect and care for shade trees on the public highways of the municipality.

It is the intention of the board in this city to give to each branch of the work its proportionate part of the money designated for shade tree work.

In commencing operations for the new year, the commission has in view the following work:

First. To raise the status of the fine old trees along the sidewalks by thorough pruning and scientific treatment, including cementing, where necessary.

Second. To take down such trees as are interfering with the growth of others. Cutting the weak ones in each case and allowing the stronger trees a chance to secure more air and moisture, thereby promoting growth.

Third. To plant such trees as are needed in treeless spots and give them proper attention to promote growth.

Fourth. To spray such trees (mostly elms) as are liable to insect attack and in so doing prevent insects from securing a foothold on the trees.

Trees are not mere sticks of wood—they are living organisms, as liable to disease as men, and require careful treatment.

In carrying out the above plans it is obvious that the co-operation of the citizens in having trees on private property attended to is most desirable.

Couple Married in August, but Brides Aunt Just Finds it Out.

Carlton Warwick, son of ex-Councilman W. R. Warwick, and Miss Nellie Griffin, niece of Mrs. John Daly, pupils, both of Long Branch, of the Chattle High School, announced their marriage yesterday. The young couple were married while attending the Asbury Park baby parade last August.

Carlton is nineteen years old and a member of this year's graduating class. His bride is of the same age and is in the junior class in the school. The finding of the marriage certificate by the aunt of the bride led to the disclosure.

M'ALL MISSION PROSPERS

Report of Secretary and Election of Officers at Annual Meeting This Morning.

PRESIDENT MRS. F. G. MEAD.

Treasurer Reports Satisfactory Conditions—Work Among Flood Sufferers in France.

The annual meeting of the Plainfield Auxiliary of the McAll Mission was held this morning in the Public Library building and the reports for the year read, excepting that of the treasurer. The finances of the mission are in a satisfactory condition and the report concerning them will be ready for reading at the next monthly meeting.

Following is the report of the secretary, Mrs. Irene Benham Baright:

"A touch of pity makes the whole world kin," so even those not interested in our McAll work have, these last few days, turned their eyes to Paris and have stretched out helping hands in this extremity of the French people. In a recent letter from Henri Merle D'Aubigne, he speaks of the pitiful losses to the peasants; thousands of homes have been submerged; hundreds of manufactories have been flooded, thus rendering useless for many weeks the machinery; he asks "what will the workmen do?" and makes an appeal for special help for the needy.

For twenty-four years Plainfield has been trying to help the wonderful men and women whose lives have been consecrated to the needs of the French peasants; truly unselfish, heroic lives these workers lead; some one has said of those in Paris that they are fit to stand before kings.

A professor at Harvard recently went abroad to do advance work in French history. Henri Merle D'Aubigne has become his master as he found no other so proficient in his chosen field. Those who have revelled in his father's writings can not wonder. Is there not reason, then, for pride that this scholar should so give his heart, influence and time to the McAll work that he fills the important office of corresponding secrtary for the United States? Other names prominent in Paris are on the committee of direction. It means much that the pastor of the American church, Dr. Chauncey Goodrich, who is on the field and can judge of the benefits of the McAll work is one of the acting vice-presidents. Testimony from our own members comes every year to encourage us. The past year Mrs. Craig Marsh, Mrs. Percy Stewart and Miss Margaret McCutchen have been able to see the work as it is conducted in Paris.

As our own corner of the work, Limoges, is a two days' journey from the metropolis, it is more difficult for Americans to reach, however, most inspiring reports have come in our letters from the station. It was with deep regret that we learned in October, of the resignation of Mlle. de Garis, who had completed her year at Limoges, and felt she must return to Paris. Her letters bore the feminine touch and we learned through her pen more of the details of the work. M. Canet is most efficient and his wife assists in every way possible. Judging from the weekly program of M. Canet there are no idle minutes or even time for recreation. Not only is he the pastor of these people at Limoges, but of an adjoining parish, St. Grieux, besides he looks after the environs to which he goes frequently with a colporteur, distributing Bibles and tracts. He is most active in the educational crusade against alcohol and absinthe, in fact the inception of this work was at Limoges. M. Canet has won his way with the officials and people of the town; a year ago he was stoned and once nearly beaten to death. Now, he says, he is well received everywhere and adds: "There is great need of real religion here, the people love to hear Jesus Christ spoken of."

M. Canet and his wife are vallantly working for the people whom they love. M. Canet writes: "We are alone where we have need of an army; we shall so much the more have need of God's help." M. D'Aubigne writes of Limoges: "It is the most needy city of France yet an easy place to get a hearing for the Gospel." Every letter that has come bringing news of the longing for help and telling of the good our money was enabling the workers to do, has filled the members with fresh zeal. The entertainment of the annual meeting meant a great benefit to the auxiliary. Crescent Avenue church opened its doors and the people of Plainfield their homes to welcome the women who are so vitally interested in the McAll work. Daily sessions were held during the two

ANOTHER CIVIC HOLIDAY

Merchants' Association Plans Demonstration to Boom Plainfield.

A COMMITTEE IS APPOINTED.

The Co-operation of Board of Trade and Fraternal Organizations to Be Solicited.

Plainfield is to have a civic holiday during the latter part of July or early in August is the plans of the Merchants' Association. At a meeting of the association last night the movement was inaugurated by President A. E. Force, of the association and preliminary steps were taken to bring the idea to a successful reality.

In advocating the idea Mr. Force impressed on the members that co-operation was needed by everybody to make the affair a success. The Board of Trade will be invited to unite in the matter and that body has been invited to appoint a committee to confer with a committee of the association to confer on the matter with the idea of organizing a general committee to carry the plans through. The committee appointed by the association consists of A. E. Force, chairman; M. C. Van Arsdale, M. Feinberg, Jacob Fass, Herman Schwed and Herbert Schulderfies.

This committee will introduce the idea to all the fraternal societies and organizations in the city for their co-operation. It is planned to have a general suspension in business in the shops and stores in order to entertain visitors the pageant will attract. Features such as athletic games, automobile and firemen parades will be the attractions.

The banquet committee reported that the affair was a big success. Three new members were elected, G. M. Clark, William R. Causebrook and Nathan Meyer and Son.

J. W. REINHART ESTATE IS SOLD FOR $29,203

The Joseph W. Rhinehart estate on Belvidere avenue was sold today by Sheriff Robert J. Kirkland to the Prudential Insurance Company for $29,203.44. The sale was the result of foreclosure proceedings brought by the insurance company.

The decree of the complainants the insurance company, amounted to $27,680.56, and in addition tax costs of $226.54. There are also the judgments of Rachel S. Wood, $11,092.2; George R. Sutherland, $1,893.39, with interest of $21.82; Rudolph Cohen, $4,302.75, with interest of $38.33, all of which aggregates $35,256.31, which is considered less than half the value of the property.

WALTER DAMROSCH AT THE THEATRE TONIGHT.

At the Walter Damrosch concert at the theatre tonight, a feature of the program will be "Overture Mignon," by Ambroise Thomas. This is one of the characteristically French overtures which show clearly the influence of Gounod, for although Thomas was Gounod's senior by some years, he had fallen entirely under the latter's sway. The introduction consists of an exquisite and plaintive melody for the horn solo taken from the song of Mignon. This leads to the famous Polonaise, the favorite aria of bravura singers. With all its brilliancy of orcestral contrasts the Polonaise is much more effective than when sung by the soprano. The work has a fascination of its own, and a sensuous sentimental color in perfect accord with the touching romance told by Goethe in his Wilhelm Meister. It will be played by the N. Y. Symphony Orchestra by Mr. Damrosch.

Tom Muir in Hospital.

On the advice of Dr. Brodie ,his attending physician at Woodstock, Canada, where he is visiting his cousin, William Muir, Thomas Muir, has gone to the hospital in that place for treatment. Mr. Muir, who is slowly regaining his eyesight lost suddenly about a year ago, suffered a slight set-back ten days ago, when a complication occurred in his left eye. Friends received word yesterday that a marked improvement has been seen since then, but Mr. Muir will not be able to return early this month as he had anticipated.

Not Dr. Davis' Car.

The doctor who was in collision with Dr. Anderson on Monday evening was Dr. E. J. Harrison, of Westfield, and not Dr. T. S. Davis, of Park avenue, as was stated in yesterday's Press. Dr. Davis is recognized as one of the most careful automobile drivers in the city.

GREATER CITY SCHEME

William Jeffery Would Take Slices of Three Counties for Purpose.

A. C. PLEYDELL'S SPEECH.

Rev. A. C. Nickerson and Others Also Talked at Board of Trade Class Meeting Last Night.

A Greater Plainfield—to include Fanwood borough and township, South Plainfield, Dunellen and New Market—was the idea suggested at a meeting of the Board of Trade class at the Plainfield Business College last night. About one hundred men from the localities mentioned were present.

Mr. Jeffery in the opening address said that one of the purposes of the organization would be to pursue a plan of education among the people of the different municipalities represented to bring about a consolidation of all the places named. "All of these places should belong to Plainfield" said Mr. Jeffery," it means better train service, sewers and other beneficial features would result from such a union."

"Fanwood township and borough especially should belong to Plainfield. The growth in this city is toward Fanwood, and unless Plainfield takes care of this territory Westfield is sure to expand and take borough and township in. I would rather see Plainfield go to the Westfield line than Westfield come to the Plainfield line.

"In this movement we want the co-operation of the churches and women. We want the women at these meetings. Their presence always elevates the moral tone of public functions. There are going to be other public questions taken up and the women can help us out in them.

"Some of them are the production and distribution of wealth; the subject of taxation showing what the city man and the farmer receives for their money; to compare school taxes and see what is going on in the High School; to see whether the High School walls are crumbling, whether the schools were originally intended for musical and physical education, or the necessary studies that fit men for this life. There should be more manual schools and an increase of agricultural schools should be established in the rural districts for the benefit of the farmers."

William Jeffery, who presided at the meeting, declared: "Political bosses will come in for a big share of attention from this society and and tonight I venture the prediction that this city will in the near future witness the disruption of bossism. It can be done and we want to get the women interested and help accomplish it."

Arthur C. Pleydell, of the borough, secretary of the New York Tax Reform Association, was also applauded for sentiments echoed in his remarks. Mr. Pleydell said in part:

"I believe in political parties, I believe that public questions have two sides. I believe in being a partisian as long as the men at the heads of the two parties are good and loyal to the principles advocated by their parties, and when they are not honest, I believe it is time to clean house.

"There is more independence in voting nowadays" continued Mr. Pleydell, "this was illustrated in the last election in New York city, when the voters cut loose from the men who were misrepresenting their parties. These meetings are good to keep watch on public officials, some of them need watching, and some don't."

Rev. A. C. Nickerson, pastor of the Unitarian church, was also in line with a speech. It was short but to the point. "In all cities," said Mr. Nickerson, "I think there is too much machinery and the need of more spirit and soul. I received a notice of this meeting and came out with the idea of setting a good example to the members of my congregation. but I look around me and can see none here." Mr. Nickerson endorsed the objects of the meeting and wished the movement God-speed.

Remarks were also made by Robert G. Meggy, of Fanwood borough; P. J. McDonough and William Hamilton, of South Plainfield; Secretary L. C. Parker of the Y. M. C. A.; John Manley, Colonel Robert D. V. Parker, of Berkeley Heights, F. A Dunham and others.

Acting on the suggestion of Mr. Meggy the "class" will in the future be known as the Plainfield Board of Trade Debating Society. Meetings will be held every two weeks. The next session will be held Tuesday night, March 8, when the water question will be the topic for discussion.

ASKS $15,000 DAMAGES FOR ALLEGED INJURIES

Judge Isaac P. Runyon, of this city, acting as counsel for Charles Beale, of Glen Gardner, has instituted suit in the Supreme Court in Hunterdon county, against the Valley Forge Cutlery Co., of Newark, for $15,000 damages for injuries received while at work in the company's factory on September 29, 1910.

At the time of the accident Beale was working at a polishing wheel and without any warning, by reason of defective machinery, it is alleged, the wheel flew out of its place while in motion and struck Beale in the chest with sufficient force to break several of his ribs and puncture his lungs. It is claimed that Beales' injuries are permanent.

C. H. SCHERMERHORN DEAD

Dean of America's Telegraphers Dies of Heart Disease.

ILL BUT HALF AN HOUR.

Became an Operator When Business Was in Experimental Stage—Sent Messages for Grant—Wife Survives Him.

Charles Hill Schermerhorn, who was one of the best known telegraph operators in the country, and who had resided in this city for almost forty-two years, died suddenly about 11 o'clock last night at the home of Mr. and Mrs. William A. Woodruff, of East Second street. Heart trouble was the cause of death and Mr. Schermerhorn passed away quietly and peacefully within a half hour following the attack. Dr. Thomas D. Blair was summoned, and he did all that was possible to save life, but to no purpose.

The late Charles H. Schermerhorn and his wife who survives him.

Mr. and Mrs. Schermerhorn had been living on East Front street, near the Y. W. C. A., but a few days ago they planned a pleasure trip to Mt. Vernon, N. Y. Mr. and Mrs. Woodruff learning of their plans, invited them to spend the time prior to their departure at their home, and they accepted the invitation.

Mr. Schermerhorn was feeling as well as usual during the day and evening, and late in the afternoon he spent some time in The Daily Press office as was his daily custom. Not long after he and Mrs. Schermerhorn retired he was taken suddenly with heart trouble. His death removes a honorable upright citizen and one who had a host of friends and acquaintances. Always genial and obliging, he made many friends, especially during his long and faithful service as telegraph operator at the local Western Union telegraph office. He always had a kind word for everyone and a pleasant smile.

Charles Hill Schermerhorn was the son of the late Abraham S. Schermerhorn, and was born at Hatboro, Pa., April 23, 1833. At the age of seventeen he became an operator in one of the first telegraph offices in this country, a test office established at New Hope, Pa. From New Hope he went to Princeton and later to the Irving House, New York city, where he made the acquaintance of Mrs. Schermerhorn. Later he was transferred to Brooklyn, where he was in charge of the first Western Union tlegraph office in that city.

After his marriage he went to take charge of the office at Burlington, this State. At the opening of the Civil War he went to Beverly, about four miles south of Burlington, where he was in charge of the army office. This was at that time the headquarters of Gen. Sewell and a large recruiting station. His wife was with him, helping in the hospital, writing letters for the sick soldiers, and knitting socks for those at the front. At the time of Lee's surrender, Mr. Schermerhorn got the news unofficially over the wire on a message he was transmitting.

Mr. Schermerhorn was a master mason of the F. & A. M. lodge. He joined as a member of the Burlington lodge, but never became affiliated with the local lodges. He had been a member of the Old Timers' Telegraph Association, of which Andrew Carnegie is a member, since 1873. He was always a faithful member of the company.

Mr. Schermerhorn was married September 2, 1857, at Jersey City, and had been a resident of this city almost forty-two years. The couple came to this city when Mr. Schermerhorn was transferred from Burlington to the local office of the Western Union Company. Mrs. Schermerhorn was Miss Sarah Payne Allen, daughter of John C. Allen, of Schnectady, N. Y. The couple had a

DEMENTED WOMAN VISITS MAYOR CHARLES J. FISK

Miss Dayton, stenographer in the office of Judge Isaac P. Runyon, is not the only one who has had a visit from a demented woman recently. Mayor Charles J. Fisk entertained for a few moments on Monday what he believes to have been the same person who called herself a messenger from the Holy Ghost yesterday.

The mayor said this morning that on Monday a well dressed and apparently respectable woman walked into his office demanding protection from her husband and others who were "making her do queer stunts." She declared that her husband had compelled her to jump from the top of a sen story building, and in so doing she had injured her elbow. Another device she claimed her husband and his friends had used to mortify her was that of making her appear before congregations of young people in the churches and doing acrobatic feats. She was apparently satisfied that her troubles would cease when his honor said he would have her persecutors arrested as she left the office thanking the Mayor.

The woman gave her address as West Sixth street, but her utterance was so thick when giving her name that it was impossible for the Mayor to catch it. The woman is evidently laboring under some hallucination and if she makes her appearance again she will be taken into custody as a precaution.

VICTIM NOT OUT OF DANGER; STABBER STILL AT LIBERTY.

Owing to the continued serious condition of Tony Bartoletto, the Italian who was stabbed in a house on Lake street on Monday evening, the hearing was postponed until tomorrow. Dr. Lufburrow said this morning that Bartoletto was not out of danger and it may be a day or two before it can be said that the man will or will not recover.

Mike Cortes, the alleged user of the stiletto, has disappeared from his usual haunts and the belief is strong that he actually committed the crime. The police have no trace of his whereabouts.

Lamps Without Oil.

The contractor who is building the new garage for Sigmund Frucht on Park avenue will have to account to the police and Street Commissioner A. J. Gavett for the unlighted lamps found last night on the pile of material on the street in front of the new building. When examined by a patrolman last night the lamps were without oil. They were taken to police headquarters and filled and lighted.

Annual Election B. P. O. E.

The annual election of officers of Plainfield Lodge, No. 885, B. P. O. E., will be held in the lodge rooms tonight. It is expected that there will be a lively scramble for the honors.

Gigantic Sale of Granite Ware

The merchandise in this sale will prove the cheapest and largest ever shown in this city. 200 cases of the famous Grey Granite Ware have been bought by us direct from the factory (the Royal Granite, but not so labeled) at 50 per cent. less than regular price, which consists of all kinds of Kettles, Pans, Pots, Pails, Cups, Wash Boilers, etc., as enumerated descriptively below.

On account of the enormous quantity and bulk of these goods, we could not handle the sale successfully in our own store. We have therefore engaged the store next door, 130 West Front Street, for 30 days, where the sale will take place.

Owing to the low prices at which these goods will be sold, the sale will be for cash only. See window display.

KENILWORTH MAN'S VAIN PURSUIT OF HIS WIFE.

Lumbago was given yesterday by H. O. Oscar Schmidt, of Kenilworth, as an excuse for not having paid alimony to his wife, Catherine E. Schmidt, since December 22 last, but it did not prevent him from hurrying after Mrs. Schmidt to get word with her upon the conclusion of contempt proceedings before Vice-Chancellor Emery.

That he didn't overtake her was due to Mrs. Schmidt's fleetness of foot and the strategy she employed to avoid an unwelcome interview. What Mrs. Schmidt, who is young and petite, did was to go hurrying down the corridor and up a couple of flight of stairs, descending finally by means of one of the four elevators in the building. At the portal she gave a quick look up and down Broad street, and, seeing that the coast was clear, she started off almost on a run and disappeared.

Mrs. Schmidt had haled her husband into court, through Nathan R. Leavitt, of Elizabeth, to have him explain his failure to comply with an order made last June directing him to pay his wife $6 a week for the support of herself and her five-year-old daughter pending the trial of her suit for divorce. When the order was made Schmidt was lessee of the Kenilworth Inn, but recently he was sold out.

On the stand, to which he had hobbled with the aid of a cane, he said that as a result of sleeping in a bare, cold room, after the furnishings of it had been taken away, he had contracted lumbago. Recently, he declared, he has been living on sufferance in an otherwise unoccupied and windowless house. One of his neighbors, he explained, loaned him a pot stove, while others had given him coal and food. Other witnesses corroborated Schmidt's story of his mode of living, and as a result the vice-chancellor decided that nothing would be gained by sending the man to jail on the contempt charges.

Mrs. Schmidt did not leave the court room at once. When she finally did leave she found her husband in the corridor and flitted by him as quick as a wink.

ATLANTIC CITY MAYOR REPLIES TO HIS CRITICS.

Mayor F. P. Stoy, of Atlantic City, in his message to the Atlantic City Council, made what many believe to be an indirect reply to Governor Fort's attack on the resort in his message to the Legislature with the statement that "The resort, despite the most virulent, violent and totally unwarranted calumnies heaped upon our city during the last year, has never had a more pronounced development."

Mayor Stoy also recommended that the Boardwalk be widened and the substitution of concrete for steel piling be continued. He urged that the Council take some action toward building a jetty to deepen the water on the inlet bar for yachts and commercial traffic. The federal government, he thought, would take more interest in the demand for inlet improvement if the city would take the lead.

WOULD PROVIDE FOR HOMELESS CHILDREN.

Trenton, March 2.—Assemblyman Pierce, yesterday morning introduced a bill authorizing boards of freeholders to appropriate $3,000 for the purpose of purchasing lands and erecting a building near any house of detention or industrial school, to be used for the care of homeless or neglected children, or children committed thereto by the juvenile courts.

The chief purpose of this bill is to permit the Union County Board of Freeholders, to erect a cottage in connection with the Fairview industrial farm, located at Frenchtown, Hunterdon county, an institution organized to teach boys useful occupations while at the same time giving them proper moral training.

FIRST LAWS THIS TERM MADE BY THE GOVERNOR.

Trenton, March 2.—By his signature Governor Fort made two laws yesterday morning. He signed House bills 157 and 231. These are the first to be indorsed by him since the 1910 session started eight weeks and more ago.

House 157 is by Mr. Crosby, of Ocean, and authorizes boroughs and towns to open and keep open inlets and other public waterways.

House 231 is by Mr. Whyte, of Camden, and cedes to the National Government for an immigrant station a portion of "Duke" William Thompson's property at Gloucester.

Excise in Elizabeth.

The House committee on municipal corporations Monday at Trenton, reported favorably the bill offered by Assemblyman Schwartz repealing those sections of the Elizabeth city charter which gives the Common Council of that city authority to appoint members of an excise commission. The effect of this bill, if it is enacted, would be to put the powers of issuing liquor licenses in Elizabeth in the hands of the county court, in the event of the present elective excise law being declared unconstitutional.

NO DICTATORSHIP, SAYS MAYOR CAIN, OF BAYONNE

Bayonne, March 2.—Mayor John J. Cain yesterday dropped a bombshell into the local Democratic camp when he issued a statement in which he flays the local Democratic leader, Matthew T. Cronin, whom he charges with being a dictator and with being more interested in getting control of the Excise Committee than having proper men appointed to office.

There is a split in the Common Council where the Democratic majority is divided in its support of the Mayor and Cronin.

The Council will meet tonight, and it is said that one of the two factions will form a combine with the four Republicans in the Council and make the sixty appointments being held up.

Mr. Cain says in part:

A week ago I was visited at the city hall by Matthew T. Cronin, who informed me that he controlled four Democratic votes and that he had arranged to meet with four Democratic councilmen at his home prior to a conference to which I had invited all of the seven Democratic councilmen that evening in the city hall. Among other things I was informed by Mr. Cronin that I would have to deal with him before the meeting, otherwise these men would stand by him and vote any way he would want them to.

That night I held the conference with the seven Democratic members of the Council, and in going over matters and planning a policy for the public good and making suggestions for proper appointments to office, I found that the only members who stood by me were George P. Oliver, Dr. Albert Daly and George Russell, while the four others simply voted in accordance with the prearranged plan and the threat previously made to me by Mr. Cronin. I tried to reason with them because I was loath to see a break in the Democratic majority in the Council, but sooner than surrender to a situation which can bode no good to the Democracy and only evil to the public weal and make me the instrument of Cronin and what he stands for, I decided to permit the Council to make a choice and either stand by Cronin or the Mayor elected by the people.

Under no circumstances will I meet or come to any agreement with or be dictated to by Cronin or any of his henchmen as to appointments or the policy of the administration.

I am directly responsible to the people who elected me to office and not to Mr. Cronin, the self-constituted leader. Mr. Cronin does not own the Democratic party, neither does he own me. I think it is time to call a halt on certain interests that seek to own and control the Democratic party. It is time that these self-constituted dictators take a back seat and let Bayonne obtain a healthy growth without their interference. I am willing to confer with my colleagues on questions of appointments, but when I am told by some of them that I will have to see "Mat" before I may have such a conference, then I say I will not see "Mat" under any circumstances or condition.

From the time the Council committees were announced by the president of the Council on January 1, Mr. Cronin has been causing trouble in the Democratic ranks, and it seems plain to me that he is not interested so much in the appointments of proper men to office as he is in the desire to control the Excise Committee of the Council.

We do not know how any woman, whose winter coat shows signs of wear, who could look upon these and not buy one or two of them. National golf championship tournament dates have been assigned by the executive committee of the United States Golf Association. The open, at the Philadelphia Cricket Club, will take place on June 17 and 18; the amateur, at the Country Club of Brookline from Monday, September 12 to Saturday, September 17, and the women's, at the Homewood Country Club, near Chicago, from Monday, October 10, to Saturday, October 15.

At this executive session held at the office of Robert C. Watson, the secretary, Monday, it was announced also that the Louisville Golf Club had resigned as an active member, while the Wilmington Country Club and the Hollywood Golf Club were transferred from allied to active membership. Four new clubs were also elected to allied membership—the Belmont Springs Country Club, Newcastle Country Club, Newton Golf Club and the Thornburg Country Club.

Word has been received at the secretary's office to the effect that a golf team from Australia may visit this country next year. An amateur, of Sydney, says he intends to bring over a team of six amateur golfers and four lawn tennis players, including the Davis cup winners, Brooks and Wilding, to tour the country clubs of the United States for four or five months.

The plan is to begin the tour in Southern California, in 1911, and close at Boston or Newport in August.

Dry Cleaning Talk

Gentlemen's clothes cleaned by a Cleanery with the ability and equipments to produce first-class work, will stay clean longer, as when done by an ordinary suit presser who only brushes the surface dust off and removes the most prominent spots from the surface.

With our process the garments are thoroughly cleaned and disinfected, the linings are cleaned and spots that are removed will stay removed and do not appear again the first time the garments are exposed to the dust and grim of the street.

In the beginning it may cost a little more, but will pay at the end, as the clothes don't have to be at the cleaners every two weeks.

FIRST PRESBYTERIAN'S MISSION WORKERS MEET

The annual meetings of the Women's Foreign and Home Mission Societies of the First Presbyterian church, are being held at the church, today. The foreign society met this morning, received reports, elected officers and listened to an address by Miss Emma Kolfrat, of Warren, Pa., who since 1902, has been a missionary at Hunan, China.

The first part of the meeting was devoted to reports and the election. During the past year $129 was raised for foreign mission work. The society has a membership of about fifty. These officers were elected for the coming year:

President, Miss Julia J. Noll; vice-president, Mrs. J. H. Manning; secretary, Miss Jennie Abbott; treasurer, Mrs. Allen E. Beals secretary of literature, Mrs. E. W. Poinier.

The address by Miss Kolfrat was listened to with interest She told of her work in the Bible School and mission station at Hunan and other points in China and of the great success in reaching the children and educating them. She said that it was difficult at first to persuade the mothers to allow their children to attend the school, but now they are more willing and the children like the work so much that they even want to stay at the school during the summer vacation.

Miss Kolfrat told of the difficulty encountered in getting the parents to consent to removing the bandages from the feet of the children. One girl was in the school for four years before the consent could be obtained and then the child's feet were deformed for life. The speaker said that the missionaries are much encouraged with the progress of the work in China and during the past few years many natives were won to Christ.

After the talk, luncheon was served in the chapel by a committee comprising Mrs. W. W. Dunn, Mrs. E. W. Poinier, Mrs. A. E. Hoagland, Miss Jennie Abbott, Mrs. William H. Thorn and Mrs. John S. Johnston.

This afternoon the home missionary society is holding its annual meeting for the election of officers, reception of reports, while Miss Josephine Petrie, of this city, who is a missionary in the West, will tell of her work there. Mrs. Howard A. Pope is the president of this society and she with the other officers will doubtless be re-elected.

Both societies passed resolutions of condolence regarding the death of James Ross, who was sexton of the church for thirty-five years and copies will be sent to the family.

EXTENDED A CALL TO ROYAL A. STOUT

At a congregational meeting of the Netherwood Reformed church last night a call was extended to Royal A. Stout who is now a senior at the New Brunswick Theological Seminary, to become the first pastor of the congregation. Following the action of the congregation the consistory met and prepared a formal call.

Some time ago the consistory framed a letter to Mr. Stout asking him if he would accept a call. Mr. Stout replied that he would be glad to consider the matter should the congregation extend to him a formal call.

The action taken at last night's meeting is the result of this understanding, and Claude Gonod and Enoch Berry, deacons, were appointed a committee to wait on Mr. Stout with the formal call at New Brunswick on Saturday. It is understood that Mr. Stout will give the committee a formal acceptance, and that he will be ordained and installed as pastor on Wednesday night, June 1.

Mr. Stout is well known among members of the congregation, having been connected with the work of the church since it was organized. The church was started May 24, 1909, dedicated on July 7, 1909, and instituted and admitted to the Newark classis on January 5, 1910.

WEDDING RING IN AFRICA.

There exists a strange custom among the Bayanzi, who live for many miles along the Upper Congo. The custom would seem to make life a good deal of a burden to their married women. Brass rods, which are the favorite currency in the country, are welded into great rings around the necks of the wives. Many of the rings worn by the women whose husbands are well-to-do weigh as much as thirty pounds, and this burden must be carried around the poor women as long as they live. Frequently one sees a poor woman whose neck is raw and sore under the heavy weight, and in places the skin is rubbed off by the ring. This is a sure sign that the ring has been recently welded around her neck, for after a time the skin becomes calloused, and then the strange ornament produces no abrasion. But the weight is an inconvenience; they never get used to it, and it is a perpetual tax upon their energies. In every crowd of women may be seen a number who are supporting the rings with their hands, and thus for a time relieving their weary shoulders of the heavy burden. It may be said that with every movement of their bodies the rings give them discomfort. Once on, it is no easy matter to get it off. The natives have no such thing as a file, and though they can hammer a lot of brass rods into one, it is very difficult for them to cut the thick mass of metal in two. Women who increase largely in flesh after the rings have been fastened on their necks are in danger of strangling to death, and instances of this sort have been known to occur. Yet these women regard the cumbrous ornament with pride, imagine that it enhances their importance and beauty, and wear the burden with light hearts.

INTELLECT VERSUS BEAUTY

"If your fairy godmother were to give you a choice between a gift of beauty or intellect, which would you select?"

This question was thrown with bomb-like force into the midst of a circle of young women, and the conversational ball was juggled and tossed by each in turn.

"Beauty, decidedly," said one maid, who makes it a point to yearn for the unattainable. "I have watched the beautiful woman in all phases and it is she that holds most power. Who has changed the lives of most men? The beautiful woman. Of whom does the poet sing in iambics and all other meters in the catalogue? Is it the woman who is personally unattractive? Never! He chooses the lovely eyes, hair, lips, hands, voice—anything that is beautiful—and tunes his song accordingly. I know—because—well, I, at least, can give an unbiased opinion."

"Yes, I agree with you," added another one of the roundtable, as she thoughtfully threaded her needle. "The woman who is beautiful holds men and women under her sway. You hear your brothers or your men friends positively rave over lovely Jessica, while sensible Jane remains unnoticed. You have listened to remarks with the cat motif as an underlying theme from women. But it means that beauty is important enough to secure recognition, even from enemies."

"I always wished to be beautiful," said the drone of the hive, "because beauty is its own excuse for being. People, for some queer reason, never expect he pretty girl at the picnic to prepare the potato salad. She can drape herself over the tree stump and gurgle out pretty nothings to two of the most interesting men of the party.

"'The beautiful are never desolate. But some one always loves them.'

"Do you think those creatures of the male persuasion ever appreciate Mary-at-the-coffee-pot as the plain, efficient diswasher? Oh, no! Their pulses are beating to the time of a pretty face."

"But do the men marry the pretty girl?" queried the fairest of the lot.

"I am sorry to dash your hopes, but they as a class do not. The foolish, silly one may take a beauty to his heart, but when it enters the masculine mind to settle down to his own fireside he deserts the woman who elicited his verse."

"Give me intellect," said one who had remained silent during beauty's reign. "That, at least, does not become freckled or sunburned; it can withstand the increased years, profiting by age.

"An intellectual woman is a joy to her friends and to herself. If these friends desert her, she has something upon which she can rest besides a pretty hand. There is nothing like the deep, sincere admiration for your learning. Hand in hand you and an intellectual friend can pass through the endless realm of knowledge, and thoroughly will both enjoy the sweet companionship. This is possible between women, too—a great thing in its favor.

"While you are recovering from your last discourse let me add a thought," one sensible girl said. "Did it ever occur to you that beauty as a factor in life destroys, while intellect constructs? I don't like to represent our lovely friends as refined vampires, but the balance is on the hearts, ideals and homes laid waste."

"Again, I wish to ask, do the men marry their intellectual friends?" came from the beauty.

"No! They are afraid of her for a wife. Man always wishes to teach his mate—everything. He enjoys the enlightening of her mind and balks at the thought of his wife's knowing more than he. He must have adulation. His wife must stand at the Pierian spring and receive refreshment from his hand."

"I suppose the woman who has a suggestion of beauty and just enough wisdom to conceal it is the one who is successful with a man, matrimonially speaking."

"I believe you are righ ," each of the contributors agreed.

"Suppose we drown this question and any of our disappointments at our fates in some tea," their hostess suggested.

STORY ABOUT THE KOHINOOR.

The Lawrence brothers, Henry and John, who occupied important posts in the government of India, and who were men of resource and integrity, had at one time the custody of one of the most famous diamonds in the world, says Youth's Companion. In "The Lawrences of the Punjab," F. P. Gibbon gives the story as evidence of the simplicity of the brothers in affairs which, by many, would be considered matters of the highest importance.

Among the State jewels of the Sikh court was the famous "Mountain of Light," which, after passing from the Mogul to the Persian court, and thence to the Afghan, from whom it was wrested by Ranjit Singh was now to be presented to Queen Victoria.

The diamond was placed in charge of Six Henry Lawrence, who, deeming his brother the stronger and more practical guardian, entrusted it to ohn, who pocketed the little box and straightway forgot it.

Some weeks later came an official letter from Lord Dalhousie, ordering that the diamond be sent at once to her majesty. The president received the message during a meeting of the board, and John advised him to send it off promptly.

"Why, you've got it," said the senior member.

John's clear intellect took in the full horror of the situation, and he feared he was a ruined man, for the gem had never been seen by him since the day it had been given into his keping. Crimes without number had been committed for jewels not a quarter its value,' and who would believe his story that he had forgotten its existence and flung it aside in the pocket of an old waistcoat? Of what avail to rely upon his know integrity? His story might be officially believed, but he knew that men would shake their heads and regard him askance.

Yet without a sign of perturbation, he casually replied:

"Oh, yes, of course! I forget all about it," and calmly proceeded to discuss the business before the meeting with all his usual alertness and without a sign of pre-occupation. But one can guess how he longed for the end, how he hurried in search of his servant, who chanced to remember taking a smal box from his masters discarded clothes. He explained where he had put the worthless box containing the bit of glass, and the Kohinoor was safe.

Power in speech comes from patience in silence.

IMPORTANT MEASURES IN THE LEGISLATURE

The House at Trenton yesterday gave its approval to the bill providing that any person who shall expectorate on the floor or platform of a trolley car shall be deemed a disorderly person.

A bit of automobile legislation passed by the House makes it a misdemeanor for any person or persons riding in a motor car to willfully drive or run away from the scene of any accident or mishap in which they have been concerned.

The bill embodying the attack on the law fought through last session by Governor Fort providing for the election of county committees at the September primaries was passed by the House without opposition. It provides that members of county committees shall be elected every two years, except where the by-laws require an annual election. The present law requires the election annually.

days and one evening session at which Dr. Cortlandt Potter, of Hartford, and Mr. Berry spoke.

Mrs. Lawrence Myers and Mrs. Frederick Mead entertained very graciously the delegates at Sunnyside. Letters received later from the officials and many delegates, saying that the meeting was one of the best in the history of the organization, were most gratifying. The influence of the annual meeting has remained during the year as a benediction. It was decided by the auxiliary, because of the entertainment of the annual meeting, to omit the usual birthday tea. Our Christmas offering for the children at Limoges gave them a very happy celebration and a most enthusiastic letter came to thank us for the good time.

In January Mrs. John Gray Foster entertained delightfully the managers at her home. Miss Margaret McCutcheon spoke most graphically of the outlook in France at the present time and the great need of the McAll missions. Mrs. Craig Marsh and Mrs. Percy Stewart also interested those present with accounts of their recent visits to the McAll halls. It was noted that twenty-one years Mrs. Foster has served so faithfully as treasurer of McAll and that it is largely through her efforts that each year there has been an increase in the contributions for Limoges.

Mrs. Field, who has so earnestly solocited subscribers for the Record reports, 52 subscriptions, a gain of several over last year. The meetings have had a better average attendance than they have had in some time. All this sounds a note of encouragement. A great loss has come to the auxiliary in the death of Mrs. Lawrence Myers. To quote from the Record: Mrs. Myers' influence literally girdled the world, for every hour of the 24 in various lands her representatives are telling of Christ's love. She was the founder of the work at Limoges, giving generously for its installation there. She was the first president of the Plainfield auxiliary. Frequently Mrs. Myers visited France and her personal inspiration and example were in the that work, as wherever she went, of far more worth than even her most generous gifts." Some years ago she resigned the presidency of the McAll auriliary. She retained her vice-presidency for New Jersey in the National Association until her death; she also held the position of hon. vice-president in the local auxiliary, which she has upheld by her bountiful gifts, her helpful encouragement and by her prayers.

As we come to the end of this year her words are singing in one ears, "Will you let God's work stand still for lack of energy?" and in the spirit of her Master, who went about doing good, we begin a new year with greater interest in this important work and with greater eagerness to do better the coming year than ever before. M. Beigbeder, the general director of the McAll missions in France, writes: "Continue to sustain us with your gifts and your prayers in order that all the seed sown may bring forth much fruit." When now, after 37 years of efforts France is fully opened to the Gospel and there now exists no hindrance to free preaching in every part of the country, who can measure the responsibility of each one if we fail at this critical period? "Who can say but that we are come to the Kingdom for such a time as this?" Again we wish to express our thanks to the managers of the Public Library for the use of this room and to the Press for their many courtesies."

The following officers were elected: President Mrs. Frederick J. Mead; vice-president, Mrs. Isaac L. Miller; secretary, Mrs. H. E. Baright; treasurer, Mrs. John Gray Foster; secretary of literature, Mrs. Isaac L. Field. Other vice-presidents were elected as follows: Crescent Avenue church, Mrs. John Sheridan Zelie; First Presbyterian, Miss Dietrich; Grace Episcopal, Mrs. Frank O. Herring; First Baptist, Miss Yerkes; Park Avenue Baptist, Miss Walter Freeman; Seventh-Day Baptist, Mrs. I. N. Van Sickle; Trinity Reformed, Mrs. Cornelius Schenck; Congregational, Miss Ethel Millar.

THREE BOYS TRAMP TO SEE PHILA. STRIKE

Commuters at the Grant avenue depot this morning witnessed a pitiable sight. It was three rainsoaked boys, one thirteen years of age and the other two fourteen years old. In answer to queries put to Willie McNamara, the biggest of the trio, by a Daily Press reporter, he explained that they were from Jersey City, and were on the way to Philadelphia to see the big strike.

The tale he told was a recitation of a night of suffering. The party he said, left Jersey City yesterday afternoon at 2 o'clock on a "coaler." When Cranford was reached at midnight they were put off the train by the conductor. From that point they continued their journey on foot along the tracks, reaching Grant avenue shortly after 8 o'clock this morning.

Here they timidily entered and through the kindness of the agent were allowed to remain for a time. Wet through to the skin they put their coats and hats on the stove in an attempt to dry their clothing. While their clothes were steaming they tried to snatch a few minutes of sleep. The youngest and smallest of the trio was in an exhausted condition and was unable to keep awake and while his two pals watched he took a nap. The boys declared they had had nothing to eat since leaving Jersey City.

Chief Kiely was notified of their presence and he dispatched Patrolman O'Keefe to look after them. By the time he arrived at the station, however they had disappeared down the tracks toward the Quaker City.

C. H. SCHERMERHORN DEAD

daughter, Ida, who died in infancy, and a son, Charles Hill Schermerhorn, Jr., who was brought to this city when six months old and died at the age of twenty-four years in 1894.

The couple was active in a quiet way in various church and relief work. Mr. Schermerhorn was retired by the New Jersey Central as operator at the local telegraph office on August 1, 1908, and was pensioned at that time. Afterward he became assistant secretary at the Y. M. C. A. for a time. He gave up that position to become the local agent for the Christian Herald and a life insurance company.

"Broadway marvelled at its first telegraph instrument much as it would today over an aeroplane," said Mr. Schermerhorn one day while in a reminiscent mood. "In the early days of telegraphy, before the Civil War, I was set to work in the front window at 180 Broadway, and I was a curiosity. The instrument, a crude affair, was connected up on a table in front of me. The office occupied part of a rubber store, and it closed promptly at 9 o'clock in the evening, when the line was closed for the night. The wires ran as far west as Chicago and south to New Orleans, which was considered marvellous for those days.

"Some time before the telegraph was in actual operation, in 1855, I started in as a messenger. The 'magnetic telegraph' they called it in those days. Later when I became an operator I was transferred to the main office of the Western Union, in Hanover street, New York. It was the most important telegraph office in the United States at the time and employed six men. When I was transferred to Brooklyn, my office was in the old City Hall on the site of the present Borough Hall. I sent the first message which ever left Brooklyn. It was sent to New York. The wires ran above ground to the river and then by cable to the New York side. In a short time, however, the line was put out of business. The cable was caught by the anchor of some ship and broken. It was a long time before communication was restored again.

"In the meantime I was transferred to New York and put in charge of the telegraph office in the old Barnum Museum in Broadway. My office was on one side of the entrance and the ticket office on the other. I was, in fact, one of the great novelties of the place.

"When I was at Burlington General Grant often came to my office. He would sit for hours beside my instrument. He once introduced me to General Sherman with the remark: 'This man has served his country. He has often kept me in touch with the front.'"

The funeral services will be held from the home of William A. Woodruff, of East Second street, Friday afternoon at 1 o'clock and Rev. Dr. J. S. Zelie, of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church, will be in charge, assisted by Rev. William Newberry, of Brooklyn. The burial will be in Hillside cemetery.

Funeral of Mrs. Moses Schloss.

The funeral services of Mrs. Moses Schloss were held at 1 o'clock this afternoon from the late home on East Front street, and were in charge of a rabbi from Newark, an intimate friend of the family. There was a large attendance of relatives and friends, including many from Newark and New York. The burial was in Evergreen Cemetery, Elizabeth.

Takes a Dive in His Sleep.

A Liverpool man who had read Rider Haggard's "Allan Quatermain" just before going to bed the other night, had such a vivid dream that he was diving from a rock—an incident that figures in the story—that he took a header from the bed to the floor, a deed that nearly resulted in his death from concussion of the brain.

Hazards of Life.

A. T. T. Teetotaler, who had never taken or even smelled a drop in his life, slipped upon a banana skin, cracked his skull and died. Thus fate overtakes us and jests at wisdom. Some of the most prudent have shunned strong waters all their days only to quit from a careless, sleepy fingering of the deadly gas cock or from a wee little bit too much of giblets or fish roe.—New York Press.

Principle Long Known.

Two centuries ago the principle of the taxicab was known. An advertisement in the London Daily Courant of January 13, 1711, announces that at the sign of the Seven Stars, under the piazza of Covent garden, a chariot was on view that would travel without horses and "measure the miles as it goes." It was capable of turning and reversing, and "could go uphill as easily as on level ground."

Not Likely to Become General.

Of course it was the daughter of an American millionaire who appeared at London's famous roller skating rink wearing a pair of heavily jeweled skates! We should all be terribly disappointed if any other girl had thought of such a thing first! But the idea is not likely to be widely imitated, even among the ultra rich, which is also a comfort.

Joy in Being Free from Debt.

Douglas Jerrold said, "He who dines out of debt, though his meal be but a biscuit and an onion, dines in the 'Apollo,'" meaning a fancy London restaurant of the time. The same authority exclaims: "What warmth in a threadbare coat if the tailor's receipt be in the pocket!"

Is World-Wide Problem.

Housewives in Australia are wrestling with the servant problem. Their advertisements make interesting reading. One offers "plenty of outings," another throws out the bait of "Sundays free," while a third goes one better with "Saturday afternoons and Sundays off."

Electric Device to Kill Rats.

One of the latest ideas for killing rats is a trap into which the animal walks, attracted by an electric light and a display of food. Once in he cannot get out and an electric current kills him in 50 or 60 seconds.

Attended To.

The Vicar (to sexton)—Why don't you see that the seats in the church are dusted now and then, Tombs?" Tombs (the sexton)—"I do, sir, the congregation does it every Sunday morning, sir."—Philadelphia Inquirer.

The Brand.

Irate Customer—See here! That student lamp you sold me a week ago is no good. It won't work. Dealer—Beg pardon, sir. I ought to have told you it was a college student lamp.—Puck.

This Isn't True.

"He can't seem to make any money at anything." "No—the poor fellow has a college education."—Cleveland Leader.

What Keeps Him Back.

Many a man would climb higher up the ladder of fame if he didn't spend so much of his time trying to keep some one else from doing it.

Something for Nothing.

The man who gets something for nothing pays the highest price going, and the only price which yields nobody a profit.—Puck.

Aluminum Paper.

Aluminum paper, a cheaper substitute for tinfoil, is made by pressing the powdered metal into a thin coating of resin on parchmentlike paper.

The Two Old Codgers Again.

Fuddy—"So you've taken to wearing a cord on your glasses." Duddy—"Yes, that's my spec-tackle."—Boston Transcript.

Gait of the Horse.

A horse on an average walks 400 yards in four and a half minutes, trots that distance in two minutes, and gallops it in one minute.

All for General Good.

By working for the good of all, we work for the good of ourselves. We only succeed as we work for the good of the whole.

Hard.

It is hard for a man who locks out collectors to be a hero to his own office boy.

Ruling One's Conduct.

Have opinions of your own. When you rule your own conduct, then you are a man.

Fashion Instituted by Men.

Laces were originally made for men's wear.

Success Comes to the Patient.

The Pillow as a Safe Deposit

The good lady who recently discovered the loss of the jewels which for years she had kept under her pillow may have been somewhat consoled by the court's decision that, LEGALLY, they were supposed to be as safe there as in a Safe Deposit box; but it is quite probable that she now is sorry that she had not selected the Safe Deposit in the first place.

THE WAY IT GOES.

"Officer, what is the charge against this negro?"

"He was wearing a blue, red and yellow necktie that was so loud I arrested him for disorderly conduct."

"Good. And the next one?"

"I found him in company with a felon and arrested him as a suspicious character."

"What kind of a felon?"

"A bone felon, sir."

"Quite right. And the third one?"

"Incendiary, sir. He's a stoker, and I found him in the very act of firing the furnace."

"Send 'em all to jail for 30 days. I am determined to protect the public from this dangerous class of criminals."

Anxiously Waiting to Find Out.

Cincinnati Tourist (who for the first time has just entered a restaurant in Paris)—Have you ordered?

St. Louis Tourist (who has reached the table some minutes before, and who looks up from a French bill of fare)—Yes.

Cincinnati Tourist—What did you order?

St. Louis Tourist (impatiently)—How do I know?

Getting in the First Blow.

Martin—Why were you in such a hurry to speak to that man you met across the street a few minutes ago?

Putney—He's my tailor; and if I hadn't gotten in the first word and taken the heart out of him by telling what a botch he had made of my suit he would have struck me for payment."

All Kinds.

"It takes all kinds of people to make a world," said the ready-made philosopher.

"Certainly," said the plain person; "look at explorers. Some of them excel with mathematical instruments and some with typewriters and picture machines."

Quoit Useful.

Young Wife—And you would like my doughnuts better if they were larger? That is very complimentary.

Easeoff Labor—Yes; then me an' me pals could 'ave a game o' quoits down by th' waterin' tanks.—Ideas.

LOOKING FORWARD.

Lady—Poor boy, have you no home to go to?

Kid (who has played hookey)—Yes'm. That's wot's botherin' me.

Just So.

There is no rose without a thorn.
There are speeks on all our peaches.
We never sat at a "banquet" yet
But were bored to death by the speeches.

Instruction.

"Paw, what is a sonnet?"

"Fourteen lines of language, rhyming according to certain established rules."

"It's poetry, isn't it?"

"Not necessarily, my son."

Rubbing It In.

"Yes," said Miss Uppson, proudly, "my ancestors came over in the Mayflower."

"I don't doubt it," rejoined Miss Cutting. "I understand only steerage passengers patronized that boat."

A Cruel Insinuation.

Dealer.—I am looking in this neighborhood of antiques. Can you tell me of any?

Miss Pert.—Why, yes. There's been Miss Oldgirl, who came out the year before I was born.

The Proper Ones.

"I should think fiction writers would be the men to call on for juries."

"Why so?"

"Because they are natural born talesmen."

Waste of Time.

Ethel—How is it you refused to go automobiling with Sloboy again?"

Maude—Oh, what was the use? It took both his hands to steer the machine."

As Early as Possible.

"Did that young man go away early, Mattie?"

"Very early, pa," she answered. "About one in the morning."

Proud of It.

"Gracious! I never heard such a little boy use such language!"

"You bet ye didn't; I'm de champeen of me age."

A Hero.

"Why?"

"Because he has to take chances."

It was not wise for him to expend breath in cries, but until he had some reply he could not keep silent. After that, when her answer came to him, he worked more quietly save for those periods when he felt that he must hear her voice to enable him to go on. Such was the furious energy of his toil that by and by the great mass of rock was cleared away save one huge boulder which fairly blocked the entrance. It was light outside now. A gray dawn and full of storm. Through the wider interstices she could see him plainly. She knew now that her rescue was only a matter of time. A branch of a tree for a lever and his strength would roll the rock away. She started to tell him but he caught a glimpse of her white face pressed against a crevice and the sight inspired him. With a great burst of strength, the like of which possibly had never been compassed by mortal man since Samson pulled apart the pillars of the temple, he rolled the great rock aside and stood in the entrance, gasping, panting, with outstretched arms.

But a step divided them. That step she took. With a sob of relief she fell upon his breast, naturally, inevitably. His splendid arms swept her close to him. Her own hands met about his neck. With upturned face she looked upon him in all the abandonment of perfect passionate surrender. He bent his head and kissed her, the first time in all his years that his lips had been pressed upon another mouth. He clung to her there in that kiss as if to make up in one moment for all the neglected possibilities of the past, as if never in all the bringings forth of the future should such another opportunity be afforded him. He felt for the first time in his life the beat of another human heart against his own, the rise and fall of another human breast, the throbbing of another human soul. Tighter and tighter his arms strained her to him. She gave herself up in that mad, delirious, awful moment to the full flow of long checked passion, and kiss for kiss, pressure for pressure, and heart beat for heart beat, she made repsone.

It was too much. It was the man who broke away. There was nothing, no experience, no remembrance to teach him. It was all surprise. He thrust her from him slowly. Her hands lingered about his neck, but his backward pressure would not be denied. He held her at arms' length, her hands outstretched to him, her bosom panting, her eyes shining, her cheeks aflame in the gray dawn. Yielding, giving up to him absolutely, yet something, the magnificent metal of the man, the restraints through which he had gone, the long battles with his own passion, rose to his soul and gave him mastery once more.

"Woman! woman!" he whispered—no mere local name would represent her now. She was humanity to him—"Woman," he whispered, "my God! my God!"

He turned away, sank down on one of the great boulders that he had thrown aside and buried his face in his hands, his body shaking with emotions he could scarce define but well understood. The woman threw herself down on her knees before him and took him once more in her arms.

"Man," she said, "I love you!"

She drew his hands away from his face; she laid her own face in his bleeding palm and kissed it.

"Man," she said, her lips wet with his own blood in a sort of wild, barbaric sacrament, "man, I love you!"

He stared at her as one distraught. He had dreamed of this, he had imagined it, he had prayed for it, he had hoped for it, but no revelation that had come to him in the years of their association equaled in its blinding brilliancy, in its intense illumination, the revelation in that woman's voice, in that woman's eyes, in that woman's touch.

"Man," she said again, "I love you. Do you understand! Do you know what it means?"

Then he found his voice. He took her hand and pressed it against his heart.

"I know," he whispered. "I understand here."

He rose to his feet, stooped, caught her by the shoulders and lifted her to his level. A piece of rock ill balanced on the edge of the cliff fell crashing. The place was dangerous. Without a word he slipped his arm beneath her, lifted her up as he might have done a child and carried her out upon the sand away from the beetling crags of the rocky wall. She nestled in his arms with a sense of joy and satisfaction and helplessness cared for so exquisite that it was almost pain. He sat her down presently on the sand and knelt before her. The sunlight sprang through the gray haze on the horizon's edge and lighted her face as he peered into it. Suddenly he threw himself prostrate before her and his lips upon her feet.

"Not there," she whispered, laying her hand upon his bent head, "but here, here in my arms, upon my heart, for Man, Man, I love you!"

Then kneeling by her side he took her once more within his arms.

"But you have not said!" she began at last, "that you loved me."

"There is no word," he said, softly, "in that speech that you have taught me which is equal to what I feel. You don't know how I have looked upon you and longed for you ever since you made me know and feel that I was a man with a man's soul. Night after night I have watched you as you went to your nook in the rocks. But that you have taught me honor and consideration, what it is to be a gentleman. I had followed you and caught you in the dark within my arms."

She laid her hand upon his breast and looked at him feelingly, entreatingly, with touching consciousness of his strength and her weakness.

"What I have taught you," she asked, "you will not forget?"

"Never! Never!"

He released her waist and took her hand and kissed it. There was as much passion in the pressure of his lips upon her hand as there was in the beat of his heart against her own, she felt.

"You," he continued, "will say what is to be done."

"Not I," she answered, piteously, "but you. I have no strength when you are by. Since that moment when you kissed me, you are the master and the man, but you will respect me in my helplessness?"

"As if you were God in heaven," cried the man, raising his hand as one who makes a vow. "You are to me everything that is pure, that is holy, that is lovely."

"No! No!" she whispered, a look of terror coming into her face.

"Yes," he said. "Through you I know God, through you I know woman. You are sacred to me. Never again, unless you give me leave, will I press my lips to yours; never again, unless you say I may, will I take you in my arms; never again will I even touch your hand. Indeed, indeed, I cannot do these things. And yet I will love you in ways of which you cannot dream so long as I can draw the breath of life."

He rose to his feet as he spoke and turned away from her and stood with clasped hands and bowed shoulders. In one moment the whole course of their lives had changed. It had taken an earthquake shock to do it, but so terrific had been the submerged fires of mutual passions that a whisper opportunely uttered would have effected the same revolution. She sat and watched him wondering what would be the end of it. She knew at last what love was, not the pale philosophical emotion she had experienced in the cabin of that yacht. God, how she hated that recollection. How she wished that it had never been. If untouched by man she could have been cast upon that island to be given to this man who looked upon her as a goddess. She had told him some of her history, but not the part which was vital. It had been easy not to enlighten him wholly as to that. He knew nothing about conditions. He had never seen a ship or a boat within his recollection, and the story she had settled upon and told him was one that received instant acceptance from him. Indeed there was nothing that she had told him, or could have told him, that he would not implicitly have accepted and believed. The king could do no wrong. She was incarnate truth. And she would have to tell him all now. She would have to put into that pure soul, alive with passionate devotion, admiration, respect, every feeling that can make up the sum of mighty love, this story of evil and shame. There was no help for it. She would have to tell him.

But she could not tell him now, not on this day. She would have a few perfect hours. She would stand for a little while within the vale of Eden. She would look for a little time through the gates of heaven. To-morrow! To-day she would have and she would enjoy to the full. She rose softly to her feet as well and stepped closer to him. She laid her hand upon his shoulder. She could see the muscles in his arm tighten as he clenched his hands the harder. She turned him gently about and lifted her perfect lips to his. She kissed him again. Her hand sought him; her fingers parted his iron grasp. She drew his arm about her and nestled against him.

"I trust you," she said, "as I love you. I shall be safe with you. You shall not draw away from me in such isolation. You have waited long for kisses like this."

And then the man spoke, the man in him.

"Woman," he said, "yours are the only lips that have been pressed upon mine, save perhaps my mother's as a child. Has any other man ever kissed you?"

She could not lie to him.

"Don't ask me," she said, the futile request.

The man had turned away with a groan. No happiness is unalloyed; no joy comes into our lives that some pain does not dog its footsteps. With love came jealousy before the flood.

"At least," she said pressing closer to him and he did not repulse her, "I have loved no man but you."

"Oh!" he said, taking her once more within his arms, "that I might know for one moment what is out there, how you lived, who saw you, who followed you, who loved you!"

"I shall tell you," said the woman.

"But you have told me."

"Not all."

"When the rest then?"

"To-morrow. Meanwhile let us enjoy the day"—the old, old human prayer, let us enjoy the day despite the morrow—"let it suffice that I love you; that I never loved anyone else; that no kisses like to yours have ever been pressed upon my lips, nor I believe not upon the lips of mortal woman. Let us pass the day in happiness together. Come, we must breakfast. We must see what the earthquake has done to our island. We have things to think about, things to do."

"I have nothing to think about but you; nothing to do but to love you."

Hand in hand, they stepped across the sand to the shade of the trees, a royal and a noble couple, the splendid woman nobly planned, fit mate for the godlike man, children of God and Nature, both of them in loose tunics which she had woven from the long soft grass, which left neck and arms bare and fell to knee and were belted in at the waist. Unhampered by any of the debasing or degrading garments of civilization, they were a pair to excite the admiration and envy of the gods.

CHAPTER XI.

The Conscience Quickened.

They had spent the morning together, but not as usual. Things were different, conditions had changed. For the first time in years the daily lesson which she had given him was intermitted. To-day they were both at school with Love for preceptor and such willingness in their hearts as made them ideal pupils. The storm had died away as suddenly as it had arisen. No visible evidence of it was left save the tremendous thunder of the long undulating seas upon the outward barrier. The earthquake had not greatly damaged the island, the fallen cliff, a few prostrate palms here and there, that was all. But there was visible evidence in them of the storm through which they had passed and which still held them in its throes, in the tumult of their souls.

To the man the experience of the morning was absolutely new and to the woman it was so different from what had hitherto transpired that it was practically so. They luxuriated in their emotions. They sat side by side, hand in hand; they walked together, hand in hand. Yet it was the woman who was the bolder, the woman who made the advances. The man was not passive. Kiss for kiss, look for look, word for word, touch for touch, he gave, but the initiative was hers not his. He was putting a constraint of steel upon himself. She saw that and was glad. It made her bold. Womanlike she tried and tested the blade that she had forged again and again, growing daring in her immunity, braver in her trust.

They stood in one part of their wanderings before the door of what had been her cave. Hand in hand they looked down upon the heap of rocks that he had torn away. It was nothing to him; to her it was incredible. She could better estimate what human strength was capable of than he. She had standards of comparison which he lacked.

"It cannot be possible that you lifted that boulder and that one, alone?" she said, gazing at him wonderingly.

"At that moment, to release you, I could have torn the rock asunder," he cried, throwing out his arms in a magnificent gesture of strength and force.

"I don't know how to say how much I love you," she cried.

"Say that you will try to care as much for me as I for you and I will be content," he answered.

And so there was a pretty rivalry between them as to which loved the more. In the midst of the strife of tongues the woman spoke. She could not keep away from the subject.

"You love me," she said at last, "because you think me more than I am, because," she ran on in spite of his protesting gesture, checking his denying word, "because you have seen no other woman, because—"

"I will not hear another word," he cried, finding voice at last and stopping her. "I know not woman or man save as I know you and myself, save as you have taught me by the women of whom you have read me in that single book we have, the women of whom you have told me who have played their parts in the world. All of them together are not like you."

"That is because I am alive and here and they are dead and away."

"If they all stood here by me on the sand, if all their excellencies and virtues were centered upon one and she stood by you on the sand, my heart would turn to you. It isn't because you are beautiful. You are beautiful, are you not?"

Poor man, he had no standards of comparison, only the instinct for the lovely.

"Men said so," she answered, smiling at him and blushing in confusion.

"Men!" he cried. "What men?"

"I will tell you to-morrow."

She sighed deeply at the thought of the revelation.

"Well then," he continued, "it isn't because you are beautiful, or because you are wise, or because you are learned, or because you are kind; it is because you are you that I love you."

"And if I were none of these things?"

"I would love you just the same."

"But I am not what you think me in some ways."

"I could never think highly enough of you, I know that."

"No, no, it isn't that. When I tell you—"

GOOD WORK.

Done Daily in Plainfield, Many Citizens Tell of It.

Nearly every reader has heard of Doan's Kidney Pills. Their good work in Plainfield still continues, and our citizens are constantly adding endorsement by public testimony. No better proof of merit can be had than the experience of friends and neighbors. Read this case:

Mrs. W. W. Mills, 304 West Second street, Plainfield, N. J., says: "A dull, heavy, bearing-down pain in my back bothered me a great deal, especially when I caught cold. I also had frequent headaches and was at times so dizzy that I could scarcely see. If I did much stooping or lifting, my back became very lame and though I used plasters, I was relieved only for the time being. Finally on the advise of a friend, I procured a box of Doan's Kidney Pills at Randolph's Pharmacy and began their use. They acted in every way as represented and in a short time rid me of all symptoms of kidney trouble. I am pleased to recommend a remedy of such undoubted merit."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

FEBRUARY'S WEATHER STATISTICS REPORTED

The month of February developed some interesting facts as regards weather, furnished by Weather Prophet John Neagle. The mean temperature was 1.7 degrees above normal, while the precipitation was 0.23 inches below the normal. The normal amount of snowfall from November first to April inclusive was 34.6 inches. For November and December of 1909 and for January and February, 1910, there was 47.9 inches recorded, an excess of 13.3 inches. By eliminating the normals of March and April, 6.9 inches, there was an excess for the four months of 20.2 inches. This data for February is furnished by Mr. Neagle:

Highest temperature, 59 degrees, date, 28th; lowest temperature, 1, 7th; mean temperature, 20.2 degrees; normal, 28.5; mean maximum, 38.8; mean minimum, 21.6; mean daily range, 17.2; monthly range, 58.0; greatest daily range, 29.0; total precipitation, 3.79 inches; normal precipitation, 4.02 inches; greatest in 24 hours, 1.22, 28th; total snowfall, 6.5 inches; normal snowfall, 11.4 inches; prevailing wind, southwest; number of rainy days, 10; days clear, 10; partly cloudy, 9; cloudy, 9; thunder, 28th.

LEGISLATION TO DECIDE OWNERSHIP OF SILVER.

Trenton, March 1.—The Court of Errors and Appeals, in an opinion by Justice Bergen, has held that Dr. Joseph N. Rector, of Jersey City, and his wife, Mrs. Emily M. Rector, who is suing him for divorce, must determine by litigation who is entitled to a box of silverware deposited by Dr. Rector with the New Jersey Title Guarantee and Trust Company.

The suit over the ownership of the silverware, which is valued at $500, was indirectly the outcome of the divorce proceedings, which resulted in the complete estrangement of Dr. and Mrs. Rector. Mrs. Rector claimed to be the owner of the silver and although her husband held the receipt she notified the trust company not to deliver the box or its contents to Dr. Rector. The latter also demanded delivery and each threatened to bring suit against the trust company to recover the contents of the box.

Under these circumstances the trust company instituted proceedings against both Dr. Rector and his wife, calling upon them to interplead for the purpose of determining the legal owner of the silverware. Dr. Rector interposed a general demurrer claiming want of equity, the demurrer being sustained by Vice-Chancellor Learning. The vice-chancellor held that the trust company had not complied with the law relating to warehousemen in giving its receipt to Dr. Rector and in other technical particulars. He ruled, therefore, that the company could not invoke the aid of the act concerning warehouse receipts and requiring opposing claimants to interplead for the purpose of proving ownership.

The Court of Errors held that this construction of the act was too narrow and pointed out that the failure to give a receipt in the exact form prescribed by law had not resulted in injury to any of the parties in interest. The court, therefore, reversed the decision of the vice-chancellor and directed that both Dr. Rector and his wife should interplead.

WHEN SURPRISE PARTY IS NOT SURPRISE PARTY.

The Sunday-school class of Trinity Reformed church, of which Philip A. Vroom is the teacher, went to the home of Mrs. Sarah E. VanArsdale, 8 Verdon street, a member of the class, last night for the purpose of giving her a surprise. There were fourteen members in the party. When they arrived at Mrs. VanArsdale's home, they learned that she had gone out for the evening.

Mrs. Addison Hoffman, another tenant in the house, invited the company to visit her until Mrs. VanArsdale's return. The latter did not come home until a late hour, and the class spent a pleasant evening with Mrs. Hoffman. All took their own lunch and this was enjoyed during the festivities.

Special Musical Service.

The monthly musical service of the First M. E. church choir will be held Sunday night. The cantata, "Faith and Praise," by West, will be sung with the following soloists, Miss Bertha vanNuis Willis, soprano; Miss Jessie Haynes, contralto; J. E. Skiff, tenor; Charles Barlow, baritone. Mrs. L. R. Howard will assist at the organ.

THE PARK GOLF CLUB HOLDS ANNUAL SESSION

The reports presented at the annual meeting of the Park Golf Club, at the Park Club last night, showed that the past year was the most prosperous in the history of the organization. A year ago the membership was sixty-four, while today it is 109, fifty-seven new members being elected during the year. There is a small, but satisfactory balance in the treasury.

It was planned to build another tennis court this year, and the work of putting the golf course in condition for the summer will be started this month.

These directors were elected last night: Charles W. McCutchen, Samuel St. John McCutchen, Alexander Gilbert, George A. Chapman, Miss Lydie Loizeaux, Reuben Knox and Charles B. Morse. After the meeting the directors met and elected these officers: President, Charles W. McCutchen; vice-president, Alexander Gilbert; secretary-treasurer, Charles B. Morse.

ALFRED SPEER'S WILL HAS AN ODD PREFACE.

Passaic, March 2.—An odd will, in which Alfred Speer, "Father of Passaic," disposes of his $100,000 estate, was made public here Monday, following its presentation in the surrogate's office at Paterson. It begins thus:

I am in my room alone and writing this, my last will and testament. There is no one to influence me, unduly or otherwise. I shall have it typewritten, then read it over carefully, after which I will sign it in the presence of witnesses.

I take this course because I want no trouble after my death. I have good reasons—not necessary to mention as they are my business only—but my will is more favorable to some than to others. I declare that I am in my right mind.

The bequests made to the widow, the sons and daughters and servant are all in the form of shares in the Speer New Jersey Wine Company and the Speer Vine Culture Company. The estate is worth $100,000. The servant who is remembered is Ida Cogan, who has been employed by the family since 1889. She receives thirty shares in the two companies combined. The nurse, Mrs. Mary Raeder, who attended the deceased during his last illness, receives forty shares. The executors, John Ackerman and William W. Watson, each receive four shares.

Wealthy Montclair Resident Put on the Force in Self-Defense.

Charles E. VanVleck, one of Montclair's wealthiest residents, has been appointed a town policeman there. However, he will not patrol a beat and will serve only temporarily.

He is having a $60,000 residence built at North Mountain avenue and Van Vleck street, in that place, and as the workmen have been annoyed by prowlers, Mr. Van Vleck wanted to have authority to make arrests if the occasion required. As a policeman he will wear one of the badges of the Montclair department.

Charges have been preferred against Michael Mee, a patrolman, by Chief Gallagher, and the Montclair Town Council will meet in special session next Monday night to act on the case. Mee is accused of having indulged in intoxicating liquors while on duty and of having left town without permission of the chief.

VICTIM'S WIDOW SUES FOR $15,000 DAMAGES.

Hackensack, March 1.—Charged with murder, convicted of manslaughter, and fined $1,000 for killing Louis J. Seimer, Charles Streeter, of Peetzburgh, now occupies the uique position in the history of New Jersey jurisprudence, so far as known, of being the first person ever sued by a victim's widow for damages.

Streeter was arrested Monday by Deputy Sheriff Joseph Winters on a capias issued by Supreme Court Commissioner Maxmillian P. Rosenburg, of Jersey City, in connection with a suit brought by Mrs. Anna T. Seimer, widow of the victim, to recover $15,000 damages for her loss.

The bail, which was fixed at $4,000, was furnished by John G. Demarest, of Oradell.

Alexander H. G. Maidment, of the firm of Mabie & Maidment, who were retained by the defendant Monday, in speaking of the case, stated that it was the first of its kind in New Jersey and perhaps in the United States.

Streeter was tried at the last term of the Supreme Court, found guilty and fined $1,000 by Justice Charles Parker. The evidence produced at the trial showed that Seimer met his death as the result of a fractured skull, which he received when he fell against a curbstone, after being struck by Streeter during a fight over a ball game.

ELIZABETH JUDGE PUNISHES RAILROAD.

Judge Owen P. Mahon, in the City Criminal Court at Elizabeth yesterday, gave judgment of $25 against the Central Railroad of New Jersey in the civil action instituted by the city of Elizabeth on account of blocking the crossings. Charles E. Miller, attorney for the railroad, announced that the case would be appealed.

The action was the result of a decision reached by the City Council after complaint had been filed by Theodore Pfarrer, who said that he was delayed at the Long Branch crossin, in East Jersey street, for twenty-three minutes on the evening of January 18. Similar complaints have been made to the City Council by residents living in the lower part of Elizabeth.

The objection raised by the company's attorney, that the Court had jurisdiction only over cases where the defendant could be brought into court, was overruled by Judge Mahon. City Attorney James C. Connolly, representing the city, scored the railroad, saying, in part:

"The ordinances must stand. We will fight and keep on fighting until the roadroad respects the citizens of the city of Elizabeth."

DANCING SCHOOL PUPILS HAVE ENJOYABLE SESSION

The dancing class of which Miss Margaret Florence, of Elizabeth, is the teacher, and in which several Plainfield women are interested, held its closing session for the season at the Hartridge School auditorium yesterday afternoon. There was a large attendance of mothers of the children in the class and the little folks were applauded as they went through the numerous fancy dances.

The first part of the program was given up entirely to the little folks and at the conclusion of the different dances, favors of all sorts were distributed by Mrs. F. W. Butler and Mrs. S. D. Lounsbery, assisted by Miss Emelyn B. Hartridge. There were several pretty solo dances, one called the "Folly dance" by Stella Butler, who wore a blue dress, arranged with bells and a folly cap. Another attractive dance was the Tyrolean, in costume, by Miss Helen Lounsbery and Allan Heely.

Between the dances of the little folks and the older ones, the former class presented Miss Florence with a handsome shopping bag. She also received a profusion of floral gifts. The adult class will hold its last dance of the season on Saturday night.

LOCAL AMUSEMENTS

"Mother," the new Goodman play which William A. Brady will show here on Monday evening, March 7, in the Plainfield theatre, is the one hundredth play produced by that manager. By "produced" is meant the one hundredth play he has placed on the stage, although some of the one hundred have been in the nature of revivals, such as the tragedies of Shakespeare he has staged for Robert Mantell, his great revival of "Uncle Tom's Cabin," ditto of "Trilby" and "The Two Orphans," etc. Notable, indeed, in the way of popular success, have some of these productions been. Among them may be listed "The Pit," "'Way Down East," "The Man of the Hour," "A Gentleman from Mississippi," "The Shepherd King," "As Ye Sow," "The New South," "A Woman's Way," "Pretty Peggy," "Clothes," "Yunder Southern Skies" and "The Cotton King." Mr. Brady, himself, has gone on record as saying that he regards "Mother" as one of the most important plays he has ever placed on the stage.

REVIVAL SERVICES BRING OUT LARGE CONGREGATION.

In spite of the stormy weather a large audience assembled at the Temple Baptist church last night to hear the sweet Gospel singers, Rev. C. E. Lewis and Mrs. Lewis and their daughter Vera, the latter a marvelous contralto for her age. Miss Vera is but twelve years old, but her voice is that of a woman.

These evangelists will sing tonight and every night this week except Saturday. The pastor, Rev. J. W. Musson, conducted the opening exercises and Rev. L. J. Westfall, of Wilmington, Del., preached on "The season of refreshing which we expect from the Lord."

Rev. Mr. Westfall gave two reasons why this season of refreshing might be delayed—unbelief and friendship for the world. Mr. Westfall's subject tonight will be "Removing Hindrances." A cordial invitation is extended to everybody to attend these services.

RESULTS OF MONTH'S WORK.

Thirty Cases of Communicable Diseases Reported 38 Births and 35 Deaths and 15 Marriages.

A draft of the new milk ordinance was submitted to the board for their consideration. This ordinance will probably go into effect abou. the first of June.

Forty-two dairies and ten bottling places were inspected during the month, according to the reports submitted at the monthly meeting of the city Board of Health yesterday afternoon. Improvements are being made in the majority of the dairies. One dairy was shut off from supplying milk in the city as the owner refused to make the necessary improvements. Twenty-eigh milk wagons were also inspected and the majority were found to be in a good condition. Thirty-three stores from which milk is sold, were inspected during the month, in addition to the above, and the conditions under which the milk is kept, were found to be very gratifying.

Four samples of cream and sixty-five samples of milk were analyzed, thirty-three of the latter were from stores, thirty from the regular dealers, one from Muhlenberg Hospital and one brought to the office. The analysis shows the milk to be of very good quality.

During the past month, a number fo bakeries were inspected and inspections given to the employes to read and live up to the requirements of the State law. One bakery was found to be especially dirty and unsanitary and fifteen days were given the owners to comply with the State law; otherwise the product of this bakery will be prohibited from being sold in the city.

A sample of city water was taken and sent to the laboratory of hygiene at Trenton, for analysis, which proved it to be of the usual good quantity. The posting of the anti-spitting notices in conspicuous places was continued during the month. Although no arrests have been made up to the present time, several persons have been warned that a second offense would result in their arrest.

All barber shops were inspected during the month and conditions found were good. The number inspections made in connection with plumbing, were 59; number inspections made in connection with milk supply, 113; number miscellaneous inspections made, 295; total, 467. Number houses disinfected during month, 22; number of rooms disinfected during month, 110.

The bonds submitted by the following plumbers were received and ordered filed: P. E. Neylon, Nicholas Cody, James M. Frazee, A. L. Carney, Vail Bros. and Daniel W. Hibbitts; A. R. Mills and oseph Heath, foreman for Mr. Mills.

The following returns were made during February: Marriages, 15; births, 38; still-births, 2; deaths, 35. The following table gives the deaths at all ages: Under one month, 2; one month to one year, 5; one year to five years, 2; five years to twenty years, 0; twenty years to forty, 9; forty years to sixty years, 3; over sixty years, 14.

RECORD TRIP OF A BOTTLE THAT WENT TO ENGLAND

When John Kelly, the former patrolman, sailed for Ireland some months ago and while off Sandy Hook he threw overboard a bottle containing the history of the event and gave his address. This missive after traveling some three thousand miles has been picked up off the coast of Cornwall, England, and indicates that the ocean currents are sometimes faster than the sailing ships which all too infrequently leave our shores for European ports.

The finder of the bottle is Willem Duffy, of Cornwall, and he says he picked up the bottle just three months after it was given into Neptune's keeping. Sailing vessels have been known to consume four, five and six months in making such a trip which makes the trip of the bottle a remarkable drifting record.

Mr. Duffy in sending his greetings to Mr. Kelly congratulates him on the fact that the bottle has undoubtedly broken all records for ocean travel and he hopes the sender and his friends and family are well.

Among the numerous floral tributes was a sheaf of wheat and lillies from the officials of the church. Interment was made in the North Plainfield cemetery, the bearers being siv nephews of the deceasd: L. W. Randolph, John and Charles Ross, of this city; George Ross and Mr. Randolph, of Newark, and George Terry, of Montclair.

BAIL FOR STABBING AFFRAY WITNESSES

Clemento Lombardi and Andrew Roberto, the two Italians implicated in the stabbing of Tony Bartelotto, on Monday night, were released this morning under $500 bonds each. These men will have to appear before the May Grand Jury and tell what they know of the fracas in which Bartoletto received his wounds. James Eatz went on Roberto's bond, while Michael Constadino furnished surety for Lombardi. Both qualified as to property and the bonds were accepted by Assistant Prosecutor Walter Hetfield, Jr. F. J. Blatz appeared for the men.

Lombardi and Roberto are held as material witnesses only as it is not believed that either of them had any hand in the stabbing of Bartoletto. However, nothing is certain in cases where this class of men is involved and as yet no statement has been secured from the man in the hospital. In the meantime the police are bending every energy toward apprehending one Mike Cortes, who, it is claimed, committed the crime. Up to now no trace has been found of the fugitive.

WELLS STRUCK BY TRAIN; NOT SERIOUSLY HURT

Frank Wells, thirty-five, a colored man, who claims residence at Clarksburg, Pa., was struck by a westbound passenger train between Plainfield avenue and Waynewood place last night shortly after 8 o'clock and badly injured. Wells was discovered lying on the tracks by Patrolman Messler just after the passing of two trains, one a coal train going east the other the westbound passenger train.

As far as could be ascertained Wells had been walking east on the tracks and had stepped out of the way of the freight when he was struck by the other train. Messler heard the man's cries after the noise had subsided and running in the direction from whence they came discovered Wells lying on the track in agony. The Patrolman requested W. S. Angleman to telephone for the patrol wagon asking the driver to stop on the way and pick up City Physician Lufburrow. Dr. Lufburrow saw immediately that the man was in a bad way and sent him to the hospital, where it was said this morning that his injuries are not as severe as was at first supposed.

MARKED INTEREST TAKEN IN SPECIAL SERVICES.

The interest continues to increase both in attendance and spirit at the special meetings at Temple Baptist church. Last night the singing was helpful, being accompanied by the sweet toned meloharp played by Mrs. C. E. Lewis. As usual the pastor, Rev. J. W. Musson, conducted the opening exercises and Rev. L. J. Westfall preached on "Removing Hindrances," the text being, "Take ye away the stone."

The stone referred to was that placed before the tomb of Lazarus and before Jesus raised Lazarus to life the stone had to be removed. The subject was presented in the following manner: First, where human power is sufficient, divine power will not intervene; second, the stone limited the promise of Christ; third, the stone obstructed his power and limited his glory.

The subject tonight will be, "Bringing Sinners to Jesus."

A Burglar Scare.

Neighbors in the vicinity of W. R. Codington's residence on Sandford avenue thought they saw a light on the top floor of Mr. Codington's home last night and knowing that the family was out of town immediately thought burglars were ransacking the house. A call to police headquarters was promptly answered and an investigation showed that nobody was in the house. The light was accounted for in a reflection from a street lamp which shone directly on the shutterless window of the house.

District Court Trials.

Business was dull in the District Court this morning, only minor cases being disposed of. The suit of the New Jersey Produce Co. against Michael Mango was referred to J. Henry Crane for a hearing. F. J. Blatz appeared for Mango and Robert Newton Crane for the produce company. Several landlord and tenant cases were summarily disposed of.

GRACE CHURCH LENTEN SERVICES INTERESTING

The series of special services for men which have been arranged by the rector at Grace church have been fairly popular during this season. These services are held every Wednesday evening at 8 o'clock and are in every way designed to meet the approval of the worshippers. A very brief religious service is held in which the full vested choir take part. The singing of the bright strong hymns is a special feature.

Already several very able speakers have been heard in this course and more are to follow. Last night Rev. Carl S. Smith, rector of Christ Church Brooklyn, N. Y., delivered an able address upon the Bible in human life as a source of authority in human actions. On Wednesday evening, March 9, those who wish may hear an address by the Very Rev. Dr. Du Moulin, dean of Trinity Cathedral, Cleveland, Ohio. Dr. Du Moulin is the son of a very distinguished Canadian preacher and he, himself, is regarded in the church throughout the middle west as one of their strongest speakers. While these services are especially designed for the benefit of men, women are always made welcome.

MAY ISSUE BONDS FOR STORM SEWERS

Assemlyban Thompson's bill providing that towns and townships may issue bonds to cover the cost of installing storm sewers as against the assessment of the abutting property owners as now required, was passed unanimously by the House at Trenton yesterday afternoon. The act applies particularly to Westfield, where the work of installing storm sewers has oftentimes been hindered by the fact that it was impossible to collect assessments against the abutting property owners.

Thompson also succeeded in securing the passage of his bill providing that violations of the excise laws in towns and townships should be punished by fines of $100 for the first offense and $250 for subsequent offenses, as against $20 and $100 as provided under the present law.

ARTHUR BRISBANE WILL BE THE CHIEF SPEAKER TONIGHT AT THE BOARD OF TRADE BANQUET

Arthur Brisbane, America's Foremost Journalist.

Arthur Brisbane, editor and president of the New York Evening Journal, will be the magnet to draw several hundred business and professional men to the Board of Trade banquet at Truell hall tonight, the distinguished journalist having been announced as the chief speaker for that occasion. He is a graduate of the famous old Hand school in Fanwood township, which had a reputation in this locality in the olden days, and is now the owner of that property and therefore a taxpayer in Union county. What Mr. Brisbane will talk about no one knows; not even the famed man himself. Sure it is, however, that what he will say will be characteristic of the man—of public interest, straight to the point and in forceful delivery.

William G. MacAdoo, another self-made man of international reputation, the builder of the Hudson tunnels, is also announced by the committee of arrangements as a speaker. Still others to respond to toasts include State Senator Edmund Wakelee, of Bergen county, and Assemblyman Mark A. Sullivan, of Hudson county. Congressman William W. Cocks, of Long Island, is likewise announced. As no local function is considered complete without a few words from "Farmer-orator" James E. Martine and former Assemblyman Samuel S. Swackhamer, these twin oratorical giants will have something to say. The toastmaster will be Mayor Charles J. Fisk.

Edmund Rushmore, chairman of the committee on arrangements, wishes it understood that the dinner will begin promptly at 7 o'clock.

KINGS' DAUGHTERS PLAN FOR ANOTHER TAG DAY

The executive board of The City Union of The King's Daughters at a meeting in the Charity Organized Aid rooms, this morning, discussed plans for a "Tag Day," to be held the last of May or the first of June. It is believed that a considerable sum can be realized in this way for the King's Daughters work in the city and borough.

Mrs. Anna M. Most, treasurer, reported a balance of $43.04 on hand and during February 269 children were cared for at The Nursery. Miss Oliver DeLany, the city nurse, reported having made 109 visits in February. Mrs. Frank W. Jones, president of the Union, presided at the meeting.

RESIGNS AS COUNCILMAN

William L. Smalley Jr., to Quit as a Borough Father Tomorrow Night.

WILL MAKE TWO VACANCIES.

G. T. Rogers to Succeed C. L. Nichols and Alexander Milne Probable for Smalley's Place.

William L. Smalley, Jr., has sent his resignation to President Lemuel B. Woolston as a member of the North Plainfield Council. No reason is given by him for desiring to retire at this time, but it is generally believed that his private business interests will not permit him to devote the necessary time to the borough's affairs. The resignation will be read at the regular meeting of the Council tomorrow night. He has made a splendid record as a borough father and his colleagues will be reluctant to lose his services.

Only one man has been mentioned as his probable successor. He is Alexander Milne, a contractor, who has taken a marked interest in the borough's welfare. Should he be selected, the appointment, it is said, will meet with the general approval of the taxpayers.

It is not probable that a successor to fill the unexpired term of Councilman Smalley, who is a brother of Mayor Newton B. Smalley, will be named at tomorrow night's meeting. At that time, however, it is expected that one to fill the unexpired term of Charles L. Nichols will be chosen. Mr. Nichols resigned a month ago because ill health compelled him to go west for an indefinite period. According to reliable report former Councilman George T. Rogers will be the unanimous choice for the place.

Gigantic Sale of Granite Ware

The merchandise in this sale will prove the cheapest and largest ever shown in this city. 200 cases of the famous Grey Granite Ware have been bought by us direct from the factory (the Royal Granite, but not so labeled) at 50 per cent. less than regular price, which consists of all kinds of Kettles, Pans, Pots, Pails, Cups, Wash Boilers, etc., as enumerated descriptively below.

On account of the enormous quantity and bulk of these goods, we could not handle the sale successfully in our own store. We have therefore engaged the store next door, 130 West Front Street, for 30 days, where the sale will take place.

Owing to the low prices at which these goods will be sold, the sale will be for cash only. See window display.

MANY WOULD WED EDITOR'S WIDOW.

Passaic, March 3.—A New York lawyer, a Montreal physician and a retired merchant living in Brooklyn, have written Mrs. Marie Lindenstruth, editor and publisher of the Passaic Wochenblatt, a German weekly newspaper, asking for her hand in marriage. The proposals are the result of a newspaper story telling of Mrs. Lindenstruth's application for naturalization.

She is the first woman in New Jersey to ask for citizenship under the law of 1906, which gives the widow or children of any man who has filed his declaration of intention the right to become naturalized without themselves filing a declaration. She is the widow of Moritz Lindenstruth, who declared his intention of becoming a citizen in 1904, and will receive her final papers in May.

Mrs. Lindenstruth says she will meet the New York admirers, but will pay no attention to the Montreal doctor. She declares she will never marry any but a wealthy man.

"While I am alone" she declared, "I am boss, but if married I wouldn't be."

Since her husband's death she has conducted the newspaper, which he formerly published.

SHOT BROTHER IN EYE WHEN HE REFUSED ORDER.

Trenton, March 3.—Because his eleven-year-old brother did not cease pegging stones at an abandoned factory's windows when commanded, James Reading, eighteen years old, shot his brother John in the right eye, and the victim likely will be permanently blind. He was taken to St. Francis' Hospital.

High water from recent rain made muskrat hunting an exciting sport, and the brothers set out together. John Reading climbed up an embankment near Perrine avenue and started to throw stones at an old factory's windows. His brother told him to cease or be shot, but the younger boy laughed and continued his pastime. The elder brother pointed his gun, and pulled the trigger. The victim fell with a cry. Upon being raised it was found his eye had been hit and should have immediate treatment if possible. The brothers deny there was any intention of having the bullet strike any one.

STATE BOARD TO TRY OFFENDING ASSESSOR.

The State Board of Equalization of Taxes Tuesday at Trenton, was called on for the first time in the history of the board to try an assessor under the county board act of 1906.

The act of 1906 empowers county boards of taxation to indict assessors who may violate the tax laws in reference to making assessments, either by omitting to assess property or by making the assessments wrongfully. These charges are made by the Bergen County Tax Board after an investigation of the assessments made by Mr. Mallon.

SOME STATE NEWS BRIEFS

Tomorrow Company I of Woodbury will celebrate its thirieth anniversary.

Struck in the eye with a steel sliver at the New York shipbuilding plant, Peter Franklin, twenty-one years old, of 732 Van Buren street, had the eye removed at the Cooper Hospital, Camden, Tuesday.

Atlantic City labor unions are back of the bill introduced in City Council Monday night, under which none but union men can be employed on city work. The bill, fathered by Councilman Freisinger, orders City Comptroller Heston to refuse payment of bills, unless vouchers show that union men did the work. A big delegation of union men will be on hand when the bill comes up for passage.

The Friendly Institution, formed in Burlington in 1796, as one of the first charitable organizations in New Jersey, has issued its annual report, showing the good work that is being done by descendants of the founders of the society. In addition to money distributed, 262 families have received new garments, presented by the Needlework Guild, and a trained nurse employed by the organization has made 1,429 visits.

Arrested on suspicion of knowing something about the doings of her "gang," sixteen-year-old Mary Lewis betrayed her underlings Tuesday by divulging to the Camden police the names of two, who are alleged to have been robbing houses belonging to George Jessup of lead pipe. The youthful defendants, George McBride and James McDonnell, both fifteen years old, were committed to the county jail by Recorder Stackhouse in default of $300 bail.

Atlantic City visitors, who "go broke" during seashore sojourns, and leave watches or other valuables with shore pawnbrokers, must go through the formality of being listed, under a new city law, which orders that both name and description of every patron of local "uncles" be filed with the police. Police officials who backed the bill, claim that it is for the purpose of tracing stolen articles and their possessors, and declare that the lists will be kept far from prying eyes, to prevent discomfiture of innocent borrowers.

NEW VIEW OF STOKES' HOPE.

Trenton, March 3.—Admirers of former Governor Edward Casper Stokes, who have considered Mr. Stokes only in the light of a candidate for the United States Senate to succeed John Kean, of Elizabeth, may find that the Cumberland politician is looking for another office also, and that the Governorship office again. The possibility at least of this has been made evident by a story going the rounds yesterday at the State house. Governor Fort figures in the story, but laughed at it when asked concerning it, although he did not deny the tale.

The story deals principally with the long-time efforts of Stokes to retire Assemblyman Isaac T. Nichols politically. Nichols has superseded the former Governor as leader of Cumberland. Stokes has done about everything he could to defeat Nichols' political aspirations, but in each instance has failed. Nichols has beaten him at every turn, especially last fall, in Stokes' native county.

As the latest story goes—and it must be remembered that much of it is so, if not all—an emissary from Stokes called on Governor Fort during the early hours of the present session of the Legislature "in behalf of Nichols." The Executive was informed that if he would appoint Nichols to the Court of Errors and Appeals in place of Judge Vredenburgh, the political horizon in Cumberland would be cleared beautifully. As an incentive to the proposition assurance was given Governor Fort that Stokes would reappoint him (Fort) to the Supreme Court bench if he (Stokes) was nominated and elected Governor again this year, as he expected he would be. Governor Fort refused to swallow the suggestion, and, to quote the story, sent the messenger back to Stokes with the information that while he (Fort) had the greatest admiration for Nichols, he was nevertheless going to reappoint Judge Vredenburgh. The visitor was also requested, still quoting the story, to inform Stokes that so far as Governor Fort was concerned, he was looking for no other position and that he would be especially thankful if he was allowed to end his term in peace and quiet without interference from outside sources. All he hoped to do at the completion of his term, it is said he said, was to take a year's trip abroad. The messenger so reported, and that's where the story ends.

That is the story the Governor laughed at yesterday afternoon, but he did not deny it. In fact, he wondered where it had come from.

SPORTS HERE AND THERE

GOLF.

Some months ago it was reported from abroad that conditions were likely to be altered with regard to the method of holding the open championship tournament of Great Britain. Word has now been received that the proposed changes have been made, the most important being that which relates to the qualifying rounds.

Hereafter these preliminary tests are to be included in the grand total of a player's score for the championship, so that the first sixty players at the end of the thirty-six holes, including any players who tie for the sixtieth place, will play an additional thirty-six holes on the last day to decide the winner. This new system of scoring will take effect at the championship meeting at St. Andrews in June. In commenting on this "The London Field" says:

With characteristic promptness the Montclair Golf Club has issued its schedule of competitive fixtures for the coming season. Most conspicuous in the tournament line will be an invitation affair to be held on June 16, 17 and 18, and it is also announced that the championship tournament of the Womens Metropolitan Golf Association will in all probability be held there the latter part of May.

The club membership is now full, but there may be a few vacancies about April 1 because of removals. The tournament committee consists of Jason Rogers, chairman and captain, W. B. Perley and A. Laurence Pierson.

WHY SALVES FAIL TO CURE ECZEMA.

Scientists are now agreed that the eczema germs are lodged not in the outer skin or epidermis, but in the inner skin. Hence, a penetrating liquid is required, not an outward salve that clogs the pores.

We recommend to all eczema patients the standard prescription Oil of Wintergreen as compounded in liquid form known as D. D. D. Prescription. A trial bottle of this D. D. D. Prescription, at only 25 cents, will instantly relieve the itch. We have sold and recommended this remedy for years, and know of wonderful cures from its use. We recommend it to our patrons.

Plainfield, N. J., March 3, 1910.

Go hear Arthur Brisbane tonight. He speaks at the Board of Trade banquet. The place is Truell hall; the time is 7 o'clock. Take the Netherwood trolley, or the Jersey Central Railroad. Get there on time. Don't be late just because you want to change your everyday clothes for evening duds after you have finished your day's work. Go as you are for you'll want a full dinner to stomach the good dose of bullseye truths that he's going to place on the oratorical target.

Possibly you don't agree with the way Arthur Brisbane handles human problems. That's all the more reason you should hear what he will have to say. No benefit comes from listening to a man with whom you thoroughly agree. That's a waste of time and, in this case, money. You'll admit that Mr. Brisbane's daily audience is "larger by many thousands" than that of any living soul. He preaches to the biggest congregation in America; or, in fact, in the whole world. His influence is correspondingly great.

Arthur Brisbane is not a victim of "predatory" wealth; he's not a victim of "influence." He's a self-made man who honestly earns the salary that he gets—the greatest paid to any newspaper man in the world. He's the kind of a man who does not subscribe to the doctrine that the "world owes me a living." He can get his living, and a fine one at that—by devoting his life in the cause of the people, or in working for the masses if you choose it.

Arthur Brisbane has got brains and they are not for sale. He owns them and he uses them rightly—A God-given possession that is consecrated to the cause of his fellow-man. Go hear this man tonight; it will be a refreshing relief after you have been bored by the other kind in this world.

HIS ONLY TROUSERS BURNED.

Stang Tells of Loss Through a Keyhole and Landlady Borrows a Pair.

While Henry Stang slept soundly Tuesday night at Newton some matches in his trousers pocket took fire and burned up the garments, along with $26. The blaze did not spread and Stang knew nothing of it until he awoke to find his trousers ashes.

Although Stang was deeply grieved about the loss of the money, which represented a month's pay, he was too occupied at first in negotiations for the acquirement of some substitute covering, which was difficult to obtain, owing to the fact that he was boarding with a spinster and was her only guest.

Blushingly, and with great hesitation, he managed to convey through the keyhole the depleted state of his wardrobe. Miss Smith, his landlady, with the help of Mrs. John Jones, next door, was able, after some delay, to supply the want.

Of the money no vestige remained.

—F. E. Smith and family have removed from West Fourth street to their new residence at 607 Central avenue.

MISS DUNN BURNED UP HER WARDROBE

Miss Emma Dunn, who appears at the Plainfield theatre on Monday night in William A. Brady's new production, "Mother," tells with great feeling of the time she came to New York and burned up her stock wardrobe. She had played in stock in Boston, Chicago, Kansas City and Pittsburg and had even had a fling at the work in Brooklyn, but after ten years of stock experience and traveling back and forth from New York to San Francisco the little lady thought it abou time to get acquainted with New York.

Her work had been good and she had received the commendation of a number of New York managers and finally received word from David Belasco that he would see her. The result of her call was a promise from the great David that, although he had nothing at the moment, he would use her soon.

"This was enough," says Miss Dunn, "to make me burn my stock wardrobe at once. After it had all gone up in smoke I took a modest little apartment and waited! I had then learned the philosophy of waiting. Now I have learned not to take myself too seriously. If I can't get the engagement I want, I want the engagement I can get and am happy in its possession.

"But that first waiting! But never once did my courage fail me, never once did I doubt that I would get what I desired, and when it came I was glad that I waited, glad that I trusted, glad that I had not lost heart and hope, glad that I had burned my bridges behind me, glad I had said good bye to stock work forever."

BUSINESS MEETING OF HOME MISSIONARY SOCIETY.

The annual meeting of the Women's Women's Home Missionary Society of the First Presbyterian church was held in the chapel of the church, yesterday afternoon, when reports were presented, officers elected, and there was a missionary address by Miss Josephine Petrie, of this city. Mrs. Howard A. Pope, president, presided at this meeting. The reports showed the past year to be the most successful in the history of the society, more than $163 being raised for the work, while the membership has increased.

These officers were elected for the coming year: President, Mrs. Howard A. Pope; vice-president, Mrs. T. C. Bodine; secretary, Mrs. Alvin E. Hoagland; treasurer, Mrs. William H. Thorn; secretary of literature, Mrs. John S. Johnston; superintendent sewing work, Mrs. W. R. Causebrook; secretary and treasurer of sewing work, Mrs. E. W. Poinier.

After the business, Miss Petrie gave an interesting talk concerning her work among the Indians in Alaska and at the "Good Will Mission" in that part of the country. She related numerous incidents to show the progress of the work among these people. Miss Petrie's remarks aroused considerable interest among the members of the society to greater effort in the coming year.

ORATORS ANNOUNCED FOR ELIZABETH DINNER

Plans which have been completed for the annual dinner of the Friendly Sons of St. Patrick at Elizabeth indicate that the program to be presented this year will rank with the most successful ever preapred by the organization. The demand for tickets has forced the committee to limit their sale as usual in view of the fact that only 120 diners can be accommodated in the Y. M. C. L. A. hall in that place, where the affair has been given for years past. It is evident that there would be an immediate demand for three times this number of tickets if they were to be disposed of, and never in the history of the local branch of the Friendly Sons has greater interest been manifested in the St. Patrick's Day program.

As in the past special attention has been given to the selection of speakers for the affair and the list of those who will respond to toasts include some of the best known orators in this section of the country. The opening toast, "Our Country," will be responded to by Thomas A. Davis, of Orange, a judge of the Court of Common Pleas. Peter A. O'Boyle, of Wilkesbarre, Pa., will speak on "the Influence of Irish Character on Our National Destiny." Joseph S. Frelinghuysen, president of the Senate, will respond to the toast, "New Jersey;" the Rev. Joseph J. Kirklin, of Philadelphia, one of the most eloquent speakers among the clergy of the Pennsylvania city, will speak on "The Day We Celebrate," and John J. Tracy, of Jersey City, will have "The Women of Erin" as the theme for his address.

There will be impromptu addresses as usual by officers and past officers of the organization as well as by guests, and the committee looks forward to another of the oratorical feats which in the past have helped to lift the social affairs of the Friendly Sons of Elizabeth out of the rut of ordinary banquets.

The menu will be in charge of Purcell, of Orange, as usual, the floral decorations will be provided by Leahy, Laggren Brothers will have the decorating of the banquet chamber and music will be furnished by Professor Wetten. T. Arthur Baker, the New York comedian who has endeared himself to the Friendly Sons by his artistic handling of the entertainment programs in the past, will be on hand again to lead the choruses.

GIRL HEROINE IN FIRE.

Sees Smoke Pouring from Windows and Awakens Inmates.

Jersey City, March 3.—During a fire in the cellar of the Golden flat, 256 Ninth street, late Tuesday night, Miss Lillian Callaghan, who lives with her parents just across the street, proved herself a heroine. The Golden flats are occupied by ten families.

Miss Callaghan, from the window in her home, noticed smoke pouring from the basement of the flats opposite. A few moments later she saw smoke issuing from windows on the lower floors. She hastened to the telephone in her home and notified fire headquarters. Then she ran to the Golden flats and assisted in arousing the sleeping tenants, nearly all of whom had been notified before the firemen arrived.

The fire did slight damage.

"Is the pen really mightier than the sword?"

"Nothing to it. You don't see any homes for disabled poets."

SUNDAY BILL ADVANCED.

Substitute for Olwell Measure Is Favorably Reported.

Trenton, March 3.—A substitute measure for Assemblyman Olwell's Sunday baseball bill was reported by the judiciary committee in the House yesterday. The original bill provided that unless the governing bodies of municipalities objected baseball might be played on Sunday

The substitute provides that before baseball may be lawfully played on Sunday a permit must be procured from the municipal governing body. The substitute was favorably reported and ordered to a second reading. It has a chance to pass the House but the outlook in the Senate is no brighter than a year ago.

The bill will not be effective unless its provisions are adopted by ordinance of municipal governing bodies.

SENTENCE SERMONS.

Men seek for honors often because they have lost honor.

Forgetting self is the secret of finding satisfaction in life.

Sorrow is heaven's school, where we learn the alphabet of love.

He soon loses faith in the poor who tries to feed them with fine words.

One of the blessings of being needy is that there are always some who are more so.

Some think they are standing by the faith when they are but frozen in their tracks.

It is no use prescribing the Gospel to a sick world unless you commend it by a healthy life.

People who run around in a circle usually hire a calliope to call attention to their progress.

Heaven is going to be a strenuous place for some who have spent their lives running after best.

There is a lot of difference between the people who take a front row at the feast and those who hold it in the fight.

Some sinners do not repent because they fear there would not be enough joy in heaven over the event to satisfy them.—Chicago Tribune.

Changes Contemplated.

Among the reports handed in to the Navy Department recently was one recommending certain changes to be made to the uniform shirt for the enlisted men. As a matter of briefness, it was headed:

"Commander-in-chief desires to change shirts."—Harper's Magazine.

A Hard Knock.

Proud Father— Bless me, it's really marvelous about that baby of mine. You'll hardly credit it, but every time it looks up into my face it smiles—positively smiles.

With our process the garments are thoroughly cleaned and disinfected, the linings are cleaned and spots that are removed will stay removed and do not appear again the first time the garments are exposed to the dust and grim of the street.

In the beginning it may cost a little more, but will pay at the end, as the clothes don't have to be at the cleaners every two weeks.

HOME TRADE

SUCH a shop as Milani's superb delicatessen store is just the kind of a shop that Plainfield's particular people have long wanted. This is amply shown by the splendid patronage accorded it by the discerning ones; those who know the genuine Italian, French and Spanish foodstuffs from the countless imitations—the dangerous so-called "just as good."

If you are not already a customer, we respectfully invite you to call and see what a fine assortment of table delicacies and necessities we have.

AMONG OUR NEIGHBORS

DUNELLEN AND VICINITY.

The Dunellen A. C. will probably hold a meeting next week to formulate plans for the coming ball season. As William Harkins will organize a team in New Market it is evident that there will be a renewal of the old spirit of rivalry between the two places. Five years ago when Fred Vail steered the borough team and Fred Dayton handled the reins for New Market, fans witnessed the hottest games of their lives, and everybody is hoping for a revival of interest.

The sociable given by the Christian Endeavor Society of the Presbyterian church at the home of Robert Bogardus on Monday night was a big success. Despite the inclement weather more than thirty were in attendance.

The W. C. T. U. at a meeting in Junior O. U. A. M. hall today discussed the local option bill now before the Legislature, and all the members were disposed to believe that the measure would pass.

The condition of Mrs Dunphy, mother of Father Dunphy, who has been ill with penumonia, is slightly improved, and hopes are entertained for her recovery.

The Board of Trade will meet tonight when a number of suggestions will be framed to present to the Council next Monday night.

Mrs. Emily Apgar has been entertaining relatives from Westfield and Philadelphia.

Mrs. Ella Kennery has recovered from an illness that threatened pneumonia.

'PLAINS AND FANWOOD.

The regular Quarterly Conference meeting will be held tomorrow night at the Methodist church. Presiding Elder Rev. Dr. Randolph, of Plainfield, will be in charge of the meeting.

James Gillotti, of Forest avenue, expects to leave the latter part of the coming week for an extended stay in Idaho and other parts of the west.

Miss Alyra and Miss Farse, who have been visiting Mrs. Augusta Miller, of Front street, have returned to their home in Newark.

Only the regular order of business was transacted at the monthly meeting of B. and E. Co. held last night in the company's rooms.

Mrs. William Hull, of Westfield avenue, is visiting her daughter, Mrs. Arbie Price, at Forty Forts, Pa.

New Bill at Proctor's.

"The Advance Agent," presented by Selma Romaine & Company, is an act that's a sure winner. It tells the story of an advance agent who finds his long lost daughter while stopping one cold winter's night in a small village, where he has gone to advertise his show. There are many pathetic little scenes, but plenty of comedy to balance up. Wilson and Rich, a pair of clever comedians, keep the fun ball rolling. Freeman & Fiske, clever singers and dancers, and Adeline Francis, a classy comedienne and singer, completes an all around good program.

Cleaning Somerset Street.

Street Commissioner John Y. Barret, of the borough, began clearing Somerset street of ice this morning. In some parts of the thoroughfare the ice registered a thickness of six inches.

Y. M. C. A. Directors Meeting.

The regular monthly meeting of the board of directors of the Y. M. C. A. will be held this evening at 8 o'clock. Officers will be chosen for the coming year.

CHILD LABOR MEASURE PASSES THE ASSEMBLY

The only bill of any importance passing the House at Trenton at the afternoon session yesterday was the Olwell child labor bill. The measure forbids the employment of children under 16 years of age in factories between 6 p. m. and 6 a. m.

This bill was to have been opposed vigorously by the South Jersey manufacturers, but at the last committee hearing on the bill no opposition to the measure appeared, and it was openly stated that those against the measure were sure they had smothered the bill in committee. It was reported out of committee at once.

Other bills passed in the House were:

House 285, by Mr. Smalley, repeals an obsele law of 1885, relating to Somerset county and its former law judges; Senate 58, and its former lay judgs; Senate 58, by Senator Mathis, repeals the oyster tongers' license act applying to Ocean county; House 90, by Mr. Minard, provides for the service of interrogatories in district court cases; House 266, by Mr. Smalley, the Somerset county hospital bill; House 161, by Mr. Ramsay, cures defective deeds; House 213, by Mr. Minard, relates to offsets and appeals in district courts; House 282, by Mr. Thompson, permits towns to construct a storm sewer; House 56, by Mr. DeUnger, the Camden public dock bill; House 281, by Mr. Thompson, increases penalty for violation of excise ordinance in towns; House 215, by Mr. Kissam, relates to bonds issued by the Passaic Valley Sewage Commission; House 248, by Mr. Kenny, fixes salary of councilmen of Harrison at $300 a year; House 20, by Mr. Olwell, increases the salary of the deputy comptroller and deputy treasurer of Jersey City to $2,000 a year.

STATE IS ECONOMICAL.

Many Appropriations Are Treated to Blue Pencil Process.

Trenton, March 3.—The blue pencil is being used freely in the tentative decisions of the joint legislative committee on appropriations, and veterans of the Civil War, including department officers of the Grand Army of the Republic, were incensed to learn today that the economies included cutting an item out of the annual appropriatioi bill for an elevator in the home for disabled soldiers, sailors, marines and their wives in Vineland. The elevator there is worn out and some of the aged inmates are so feeble that they cannot climb the stairs and are forced to sleep in the corridors.

Another item to receive the official blue pencil was that of a scale for weighing coal purchased for the Vineland home. The $1,000 worth of pork, sold last year by the home, was weighed on the scales of the purchasers.

Efforts are being made to get from $3,000 to $5,000 from the State for pasting silk on the back of the priceless regimental rosters of Civil War troops. These records are now in the keeping of the Department of State Adjutant General Wilbur F. Sadler. It has long been the desire of the department to have a vault in the cellar of the State House, not now in use, set aside for the storage of the records. The appropriation being sought would enable the department to back the records with silk, to repair the wear and tear of age and constant reference to them and to enclose them in tin cases for storage.

Department Commander James F. Connelly and other officers of the G. A. R. spent yesterday here urging the immediate appropriation of $50,000 for enlarging the Soldiers' Home at Vineland. There are thirty couples now awaiting admission to that crowded institution.

Death of an Infant.

Edward T., the infant son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry O. Bogert, of 1437 Bradford a venue, died yesterday. The funeral will be held tomorrow afternoon at 2:30 o'clock and will be conducted by the Rev. Charles S. Kemble, pastor of the Monroe Avenue M. E. church. Interment will be made at Hillside.

DIED ON HER UPPER PORCH.

Finding of Jersey Recluse's Body Disposes of Murder Theories.

The disappearance of Mrs. Annie Gill, an aged recluse living alone in a dilapidated house at Hiltons between Atlantic Highlands and Highlands, was cleared up yesterday afternoon by the finding of the woman's body on the edge of an upper porch by County Detective Elwood Minugh, of Prosecutor John S. Applegate, Jr.'s, office.

A subsequent autopsy at Atlantic Highlands by Dr. Harry A. Hendrickson, assisted by Dr. John H. Vanmater, revealed that death had resulted from organic heart trouble, superinduced by acute indigestion.

Mrs. Gill had evidently been taken ill and gone outside for air, and had died alone before she could get assistance from neighbors. She had been dead probably a month.

The peculiar feature of the case is the disordered condition of the house after being entered yesterday by an unknown man, who ransacked it from top to bottom. Alex Marten, who lives at Hiltons, was passing the house when he noticed a man peering from a window. Later he saw him jump and hurry away in a wagon. Marten notified Chief Snedeker of Atlantic Highlands, who found the house had been raided by robbers.

While the aged woman was reputed to be wealthy it is understood by the will she recently made that she was in only moderate circumstances. What money or booty was stolen by the robbers is unknown. The body will be buried tomorrow, and an effort will be made to send word to a nephew, who is said to be a lawyer in Cincinnati.

"SOUND" CAUSES ALARM.

Town Thinks is Denotes Trouble With Pavement.

Morristown, March 3.—Much comment has been aroused among the citizens of this place because of the hollow rumbling sound made by carriages passing over the vitrified brick pavement in Washington street. Some attribute it to the caving in of the sewer, which was laid a short time before the pavement was put down.

Street Commissioner Howard J. Cole said that the sound might be due to frost acting upon the bricks, or because of the settlement of dirt over the sewer ditches. Great care, however, he said, had been taken in packing the dirt thoroughly over the ditches before the roadway was laid. A ten-ton roller was used in this work.

Accuse Treasurer of Forgery.

Ira S. Champion, City Treasurer at Ocean City for ten years, was arraigned yesterday in that place before ustice Rush on a charge of forgery. He waived a hearing and was held in $10,000 bail. Champion is alleged to have forged the name of Mayor Cresse to two notes, one for $6,500 and the other for $3,500. The name of City Clerk Garrison was also signed to these notes, according to the complaint.

Woman Gets 5-Year Sentence.

After a deliberation lasting two and a half hours the jury in the trial of Carmine Della Salla returned yesterday afternoon at Morristown, a verdict of manslaughter and recommended mercy. Justice Parker, who tried the case, at once sentenced her to five years in State prison at hard labor. The woman was accused of murdering Philipo De Pietro at Madison by stabbing him in the heart with a knife.

Telephone Extortion Probe.

Without reference to what the Senate Judiciary Committee may decide about the proposition to conduct an investigation into the Bell Telephone monopoly in New Jersey, the House committee on municipal affairs at Trenton yesterday afternoon presented a report declaring that there was need of such a probe, and recommended that a committee to conduct it should be appointed with proper authority.

EX-BLUEJACKET ASKS JOB AS PATROLMAN.

Peter Buckley and John J. Talbot petitioned the Elizabeth Council at Tuesday night's meeting, asking to be appointed patrolmen. Talbot was a former blue jacket on the cruiser Baltimore and was nearly stabbed to death in Valparaiso, Chili, before the Spanish-American War in a street riot between part of the Baltimore's crew and a mob of enraged Chilians. For his injuries he was paid an indemnity of $4,000 from the Chilian Government, but lost all this money in running a saloon at Elizabethport.

The two applications were referred to the police committee.

A communication from the Democratic Club condemning grade crossings at Elizabethport was referred to the railroad committee.

City Treasurer John J. McGrath was reappointed Tuesday night by an unanimous vote for a term of three years. This was foreshadowed at the previous meeting, when the Democratic and Republican members jointly agreed to fix the treasurer's salary at $2,500 a year, an increase of $500 over what he has been getting. This is Mr. McGrath's third term.

The new code of rules prepared by the police committee of the board was submitted. The new regulations also provide for the installation of a bureau of identification with the Bertillion system.

RAHWAY ALARMED AT SWAY OF TYPHOID FEVER.

Rahway, March 3.—Continued assurance on the part of those in power that there was no danger of a typhoid epidemic in Rahway has kept many from taking steps of prevention that they would otherwise have taken. The death of Miss Margaret B. Kirkman, the eighteen-year-old girl, has awakened people to the danger.

A public school order has been issued whereby pupils are not allowed to drink the city water and are advised to drink only water at home that has been boiled.

A taste of some foreign substance has been noticeable in the water from the filters for some time, and the water has made a grayish tint, as though from a few drops of milk in it, and a glassful would bubble as if gas impregnated it.

Miss Clara B. Cornell, teacher of English, has gone to her home at Braintree, ill, and showing evidences of typhoid.

There are about a dozen cases in town, although no new cases have developed since Tuesday. The cure of the seven will probably quiet the people greatly.

SCHOOL TEACHER SUES FOR ESTATE.

Elizabeth, March 3.—Further testimony was taken in Chancery Court, Newark, yesterday in the case of Miss Sadie E. Chapman, a local school teacher, who is defendant in a will contest started by the relatives of the late George L. Kallert.

Miss Chapman was a niece of Kallert's wife, who died in 1904. After her death Miss Chapman became a ward of Kallert's, and he promised her, she said, to leave her all his property if she would improve it. This promise was made orally. Kallert died recently. His estate is valued at $12,000, and included property in Union street and De Hart place, which is constantly improving in value.

All the witnesses have now been heard but one, whose testimony will be taken in Brookline, Mass. Kallert's children are the contestants.

Court Convicts Rival of a Soda Water Bottler.

Passaic, March 3.—Morris Liebermann, of this city, was convicted yesterday in the County Court of conspiracy to burn the stables of Morris Rinzler in President street. Liebermann and his brother, Louis, are soda water bottlers. Rinzler was a business rival. An attempt to burn Rinzler's barn in November, 1908, was discovered just in time. Oil had been poured about the building and over three horses in the stable. A slow burning fuse leading to the building had been lighted. Detectives traced the attempt to Philip Goldberg, who recently served a long term in State prison, and he admitted the crime, but declared he had been promised $200 by the Liebermanns to fire the building.

Goldberg turned State's evidence. The Liebermann brothers were tried some months ago, but the jury disagreed. At the second trial, which ended yesterday afternoon, Louis Liebermann was acquitted and his brother convicted.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Prayer Meeting Topic For the Week Beginning March 6, 1910.

Topic.—Christ our guide.—Luke i, 76-79; John xvi, 13; Rev. vii, 16, 17. (Consecration meeting.) Comment by Rev. Sherman H. Doyle, D. D.

There are two general senses in which the word guide is used. First, it is used to designate one who goes before and leads others in certain ways and courses. There are mountain guides who direct the footsteps of tourists up the dangerous sides of famous mountains. In our large cities there are guides who direct visitors through the principal parts of the city and point out the places of especial interest. Until the compass was invented and other nautical instruments sailors used stars, and especially the north star, to guide them in their course across the sea. In the second place, a guide is one who directs the conduct of another, a moral or a spiritual guide. It is in this sense that Jesus Christ is our guide. It is His province as a guide to direct us along the moral pathway of life and to lead us into the deeper spiritual truths that are so necessary that we may avoid the various dangers that beset us in the moral and spiritual life.

The need of a moral and spiritual guide is of tremendous importance. It is only exceptionally that we need one to conduct us along any way or road of life, because we are usually familiar with the ways we travel or may be our own guides and can readily find our way. But in the moral and spiritual life it is almost the opposite. Here there is often gross darkness and doubtful ways, and an infallible guide is a great necessity. Christ is an infallible guide. Wreckers often place false lights and lead vessels into danger, but Christ is never a false guide. The pathway He points out is always the correct one, and if by faith we follow His guidance, obey His commandments, we shall never go astray. He has guided His people in all generations and is still the same unchangeable leader and able and willing to direct us along moral and spiritual lines.

The topical references present Christ as our guide in three phases. In the first place, He is represented as a guide to the way of peace or to peace itself (Luke i, 76-79). Zacharias here presents Him as the day spring from on high, who giveth light to them that sit in darkness * * * and guides "our feet into the way of peace." Who does not desire peace? And yet how few find it! Why? Because they seek it in wrong ways. Some seek it in themselves, others in worldly wealth or fame or pleasure. But Christ alone can light us along the path of peace—peace with ourselves, peace with our fellow men and peace with God. Again Christ through the Holy Spirit is our guide to truth (John xvi, 13. "Howbeit, when He, the Spirit of Truth, is come, He will guide you into all truth"). All truth—perfect truth—who does not desire it? The word of God, inspired by the Holy Ghost and applied by Him alone, can give it. In the third place, Christ is our eternal and heavenly guide (Rev. vii, 16, 17).

BIBLE READINGS.

Gen. xix, 1-3, 15-22; Ex. xiii, 20-22; Ps. xxxii, 8; xlviii, 14; Isa. lviii, 11; John x, 9-11, 27; xvi, 7-5; I Cor. xv, 58; Jude 24, 25.

Work of Alaskan Endeavorers.

In the Alaskan woods at Kasaan a little chapel was built chiefly by the labors of the Rev. Edward Marsden, the well known Indian Christian Endeavorer, and Henry Haldane, a native, who began in 1909 for the first time to minister to his fellow Indians. The building stands in the midst of the great Alaskan trees. The Salvation Army has done a good deal in southeastern Alaska, and one of its chief attractions to the natives, who are much like children in their present state of untraining, is their outward symbol. For this reason in many of our native fields the missionaries have found Christian Endeavor badges a strong help. "For Christ and the church" is a slogan that finds its response in the hearts of the Alaskan natives.—Christian Endeavor World.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR CHAPEL AT KASAAN.

How to Improve.

How shall we improve our Christian Endeavor society? Why, by just improving ourselves. King Alfred of England said, "The soul of all improvement is improvement of soul." "I wish you godspeed in your work," said ex-President Roosevelt, "because Christian Endeavor stands for the things that are vital to the soul." Then live for the things that touch the soul, Endeavorers!

Follow the Christ, the King;
Live pure, speak true, right wrong;
Follow the King.
Else wherefore born?

She stopped and looked at him pa-ling. After all the greater test was to come then. "To err," she remembered the ancient Latin proverb, "was human; to forgive divine." Would he be human or divine in this trial? Had she so trained him that he could forgive the unforgiveable? In more ways than one her happiness depended upon what would be his course. If he forgave her and condoned her fault, their love could have free course if ever opportunity for benison upon it presented. But if he followed the common course of men, not only would any future union between them on the only terms to which she could consent be impossible, but he would kill her heart, her trust in man—sometimes, she wildly believed, her trust in God.

"Nothing, nothing," he repeated, "that you could tell me would make any difference."

So lovers have protested, she recalled, since time and the world began. And yet things told have made differences. What would it do for their future, this revelation of the morrow?

And again she realized that the test, if she herself were compelled to make it, would not be exactly fair, for she would be at once prosecuting attorney, advocate for the defense, even in some phase the passer of judgment. She would be the criminal and the world to him. It would hardly be possible for him to arrive at a correct view and come to a determination unbiased and free. If she could have transported him by some magic power among the children of men, and with them for auditory have told her story, the test would be a true one. What he would do then after having heard the world's voices, the world's appeals, the world's mockeries, would truly determine what he was, and in no other way could that determination be arrived at. Though she strove to be as impartial as divinity, she could not but make her defense coincident with her revelation, her justification at the same time with her condemnation. He knew nothing of life but what she and instinct had taught him, and neither would be safe guides in this emergency. He could protest and she could believe his protests, but unless they were uttered not merely before high heaven but before surrounding men, they would be of little value.

She put this by resolutely at last. We are the creatures of circumstance and environment. She would have to do the best that she could on the morrow. Meanwhile she would, as she had said, enjoy the day. And so the morning hours wore away until the time came for the customary parting. At first she would have abandoned, in the luxury of the new passion, or the new revelation of the old passion, the customary rule, but she still preserved some lingering remains of her common sense and she clearly perceived that it was necessary to go on as they had. Society cannot proceed without its conventions and these simple regulations were their conventions which had to be obeyed. And so they parted. But parted as they had never parted before, torn asunder by their own compliance with their own petty rules, their hearts protesting.

Long before the earthquake they had erected on the topmost hill of the island a huge pile of dead wood from the groves beneath.

When they had parted she had suggested to him—and it was significant that now it was a suggestion; yesterday it would have been a command—that he should take time to ascend the hill and rearrange the great heap of wood which they had builded. During all the time that had elapsed since she had been there no sail had whitened the horizon, no curl of smoke had betokened the distant passing of a steamer. But no spot of the globe could forever remain unvisited, she thought, and some day that pile of wood might make a beacon light to call civilization to them. He was glad to comply with her suggestion, glad for occupation, and so he promised and went his way.

When he had disappeared, she turned the edge of the cliff in the secluded amphitheater where her cave fronted the ocean. She threw aside her tunic of woven grass and plunged into the cool, delightful pool, which fortunately the earthquake had not disturbed. Her clothes, the scanty garments she had improvised from her underclothing, had long since worn out. It had not been difficult, however, to plait of certain pliable rushes which grew in plenty upon the island, the loose and shapeless garments they both wore. She had used strips torn from what had remained of her clothing for binding and edging and practice had made her dextrous and skillful in the rude weaving. She still preserved, however, the blouse and skirt of serge, her only pair of stockings and the canvas boating shoes. Sometimes in idle moments she tried those shoes on. Fortunately for her, they were loose and easy. Going barefoot three years had enlarged her small and slender feet to something like those human and proper proportions which, from the standpoint of nature at least, had greatly enhanced their beauty. She kept these clothes, she hardly knew why, perhaps for one reason since she had been able to weave the wattled garment so well suited to her needs she had had no use for them; perhaps against the day of the arrival of other civilization than her own.

Greatly refreshed by her bath—and it shows her absolute confidence in him and his worth that interruption never occurred to her; it had never come and therefore it never would—she resumed her tunic and walked toward the cave. The tide was very low. The sands terminated on one side in a rocky ledge where a long arm of the lagoon ran to the foot of the cliff. The cliff had been tremendously shaken, apparently, and she noticed just above the water line a narrow opening. She had thought from noises during storms that there was a hidden cave in the cliff with an opening under the water. She had imagined that possibly she could enter it by diving, but she had never cared to make the attempt, although by this time she had become as much at home in the water or under it as if she had been a native of the south seas. Sometimes in the morning they swam in the lagoon together, oftentimes she swam alone. It was a great pleasure to her and a necessity as well in that low latitude.

Curiosity induced her to inspect more closely this opening near the water's edge. Again throwing aside her garment, she plunged into the arm of the sea and swam boldly toward the cliff. There was just room enough between the water's level and the top of the opening for her head. She found herself in a straight passageway perhaps eight or 10 feet long and as many wide. Cautiously she swam through it and discovered herself in an immense cave. Light filtered through the opening and one or two fissures had been opened here and there, by the earthquake or by some convulsion of nature before, through the rocky wall, invisible on the face of the cliff from the outside but quite distinct within. There was even a stretch of sandy beach on one side. She swam to it, clambered upon it and sat down to rest.

Here was an excellent haven of refuge, instinctively occurred to her, although a refuge from what she scarcely knew. Except at the very lowest of the ebb the entrance would be covered, and even then it would take a curious and familiar eye to discover the entrance or to imagine it anything more than a deep rift in the face of the sea wall. At any other hour the entrance would be invisible, and even at low tide if the wind blew from the sea which it generally did, the breaking waves would cover the entrance completely. Off to one side, quite accessible from the sand strip, which rose sufficiently high to afford full shelter above the high water mark, a little stream plunged down the cliff. She tasted the water and found it fresh and sweet. All that one would lack would be food and the hiding place could be occupied indefinitely.

She stayed in the cave some little time, and when she finally decided to return to the outer world she discovered that the tide had turned and that the entrance was now completely under water. This gave her no disquiet. Light still came from the outside to mark the way. She had acquired the faculty of swimming beneath the surface with her eyes open and the distance was short. She dove into it confidently and presently emerged in the lagoon outside. It was the one place on the island, so far as she had discovered—she had always thought there was a cave there but had never been able to verify her knowledge—which provided her with a shelter absolutely secure and inaccessible, as she believed. She had no less trust in her man than she had before, but the knowledge gave her a strange comfort.

When she met him that night she did not impart her secret to him. Whatever happened now, she had a place of refuge, she realized, and she was glad. It was a gorgeous golden night in the South Pacific. They wandered and played and loved together under the tropic moon and stars in the gem-like island. Yet when they parted each was unaccountably sad; she because of what she must tell him on the morrow, and he because of what he had begun to fancy he must hear.

There were more things to happen on that morrow than either she in her philosophy or he in his inexperience could have dreamed of when they kissed again at parting and together said good night.

CHAPTER XII.

The Ship on the Horizon.

Yesterday morning she had been awakened by an earthquake. To-day it was the call of a voice, his voice. There was none other on the island. It came to her through the open doorway. By turning her head she could see the bright expanse of sand and sea and sky beyond. Yet no figure darkened the entrance. He stood out of sight, but within hearing, calling her name. She rose to her feet, gathered the tunic about her waist by a cincture of plaited grass, thrust the knife within a rude sheath she had made for it, and stepped out upon the sand. She had an instinct that something unusual had happened, for never before had he ventured to come to the cave and thus awaken her. The change in their relations might have moved him to this extraordinary course, yet she did not believe that it had. She found him in a great state of excitement. As she cleared the entrance he ran toward her waving his hands.

"There is something," he cried, his voice thrilling with new and strange emotions, "on the other side of the island."

"Is it something of enough importance," she said, softly, laying her had upon his shoulder, "to keep you from kissing me good morning?"

Evidently whatever it was, it was not, she thought for a happy moment, as he swept her to his breast at once. That had been his first instinct, that had been his burning desire the night long, to have her in his arms was his constant thought; but he was new to lover's ways, unused to love's customs, and, besides, he had sworn that the advances must come from her. But once the advance was made, the signal was displayed, the permission was given, he more than did his part. Pressing back her head he fed his full upon her lips. No, not that, he could never do that, but he kissed her long, and for a moment forgot what he had to tell. It was she who first remembered.

"And what is it," she asked, "on the other side of the island?"

"I forgot it for the moment," he answered, passionately, "as I forget everything with you in my arms."

She laughed at this bold assertion.

"You love," she said, "as if you had been taught to do it from the beginning."

"The sight of you, your touch, the air that hangs about your person, they have taught me, and I am only beginning now to show you how much I love you."

"If this be the beginning," she laughed, "what will be the end?"

"There is no end," he replied laughing in his turn.

"But you came here to tell me something else."

"When I started from the other side of the island it seemed the greatest thing that I could tell, but since I have seen you—"

"Man, man," she cried, with pleasant impatience, "what is it that you saw?"

"I think it is a ship," he answered, with sudden gravity.

"A ship!" she cried.

She laid her hand upon her heart and sank down upon a near by boulder. If his words were true, what would it mean to them both?

"I have never seen a ship, but there is a dark object yonder," he pointed across the island toward the farther horizon, "too far away for me to distinguish what it is; but smoke rises from it."

"Let us go!"

She rose to her feet and extended her hand. He took it and they began to run. They ran as often as they walked, except in the greater heat of mid-day. Lithe, free-limbed, lightly clad, deep chested and strong, in this emergency they headed straight across the hill instead of taking the longer way around the sands. The distance was not great. There was a sort of rude path which they had made and often traversed, and in a few moments they stood panting a little, for they had been unusually speedy and eager, on the top of the hill.

"There!" cried the man, pointing to seaward.

His eyesight was better than hers, but hers was still sufficiently keen, as she followed his outstretched arm and extended finger, to see upon the far horizon a dark object which was undoubtedly a ship. A hazy column of smoke elongated behind it, and told her it was a steamer.

"You were right," she said at last, a little sob in her voice. "It is a ship. It means rescue. The world is coming to our shores."

"My world is here," he returned, laying his hand upon her shoulder, and for answer she drew closer to him, glad to feel his clasp about her waist

THREE PLAINFIELD BOYS TO PLAY IN LEAGUES

Three Plainfield boys will be found playing ball in the minor league ranks next season, Cliff Randolph, who will twirl again for Binghamton in the New York State League; Jim Emery, who will play in the infield for the York (Tri-State League) team, and "Jack" Martin, who will be with Worcester in the New England League.

Randolph started to condition himself for the season yesterday in the Hope chapel gymnasium. Cliff tips the scales at 178 pounds which represents a gain of eight pounds during the off season. The Grant avenue boy, however, is not worrying over his avordupois, but he is devoting his attention to unlimbering the muscles in his pitching wing by swinging the dumbbells and executing similar stunts.

Jack Warner, the veteran catcher will manage Binghamton this year and under the coaching of this old campaigner, Randolph should round into an experienced twirler by the end of the season. Randolph has the confidence this season while last year he was a bit green. Speaking to a Daily Press reporter yesterday Randolph said:

"My arm never felt better at this time of the year. I am working it out gradually in the Hope chapel "gym" and I expect that 1910 will be my banner season. My experience last year at Binghamton was of the best sort. I didn't know the batters when I went there but now I know the weak and strong points of all of them."

"Jack" Martin is anxious to hear the ring of the bell at Worcester. Jack had little chance to show last season as he joined the team late. Jesse Burkett, the manager, however has informed Martin that the local boy will be given a fair opportunity to make a place on the team this spring, and Jack is confident that he will fill the bill.

"I understand there are a bunch of infield candidates," said Martin to a Daily Press man last night, "but you can put down a bet that I will make 'em all hump for the job. I got a line on the speed of the league last season and I am sure I'll make good."

Martin has adopted roadwork as his style of preliminary training for the purpose of getting his wind powers in perfect working order. Jack realizes that base-running is one of the potent factors for a leaguer and he will lay big stress in his efforts to reach the Blue Line Flyer rate.

Jimmy Emery writes from Pittsburg, where he is employed, that he will report at York on April 1. Emery who starred at third base for Plaineld last season was signed for the Tri-State aggregation by Scout Ernest Dorflinger, of this city. Emery is a fast man and he has rosy prospects of making good in his first dive in the league pool.

BASEBALL.

"Smiling Jimmy" Montross is heard from. Several managers are dickering for the local favorite's services for next season including High Bridge and Flemington. Jimmy, however, is tucking away all offers in his vest pocket and will not sign for a month.

Will Craig, the former High School star, and who also played with the Y. M. C. A.'s, anounces that he will be in the game again this season. Craig played only a few games last season as he was obliged to work on Saturday afternoons. He will make a strong man in the infield for any of the local teams.

Local fans are pleased to know that Seery, who played a splendid game behind the bat for Plainfield last season, has been re-signed by Manager Dorflinger.

Jack Peacock, of Princeton, will be in demand by local teams after the college year is closed. The Y. M. C. A. is understood to be after him.

The High School team, under the direction of Manager Runyon, is getting in some speedy practice in the "gym." From all indications P. H. S. will hold its own in scholastic circles this season.

"Warry" McLaughlin is slated to twirl for Scotch Plains again. The Plains Association will hold a meeting next week and take steps to order new uniforms to replace those destroyed in the Frentz fire a few weeks ago.

Willie Deegan, of Scotch Plains, has his eyes peeled for a minor league berth. Deegan may get an opportunity for a tryout either with Newark or Jersey City.

The baseball situation is hanging fire in Somerville, according to reports. Up until a few weeks ago Bogert Conklin was radiant with hopes of putting a strong team in the field, but now it appears there is a hitch on the grounds question.

"Wee Willie" Keeler in the uniform of a Giant would be welcomed. Willie isn't as broad as a barn door or as high as a church steeple, but he is a yard wide and all wool and if he is not to be a member of the Highlanders he will be applauded at the Polo grounds."—N. Y. World.

P. H. S. BASKETBALL FIVE DEFEATS FANWOOD F. C.

The Plainfield High School basketball team defeated the Fanwood Field Club at the high school gymnasium, yesterday, by a score of 48 to 16. The Fanwood boys played a plucky game, but were too light for the local five. The game was a fast one throughout. At the end of the first half the score was 18 to 2. In the second half the Fanwood aggregation played much better, but could not win out. The lineup:

P. H. S.—Forwards Bristol, Clarke; centre, Manley; guards, Doane, Woodhull and Overton.

'OIL KING' LOWERS HIS BLACK FLAG—BRISBANE

At Trade Board Banquet, Journalist Salutes John D. Oft the Target of his Editorial Battery.

Arthur Brisbane, editor of the New York Evening Journal, was by all odds the central figure among the speakers at the banquet of the Board of Trade last night at Truell hall. His topic, of which no one had an inkling before he announced it himself, was an arraignment of John D. Rockefeller and the American people for allowing the Standard Oil Magnate to become what he is. Mr. Brisbane also declared that the family of which our Mayor is a member, was responsible for the building of the tubes which connect New Jersey with Manhattan. The other speakers were Frank Bergen, of Elizabeth; Colonel C. W. Fuller, of Bayonne; James E. Martine and Samuel S. Swackhamer.

Mayor Charles J. Fisk, toastmaster, was introduced by William Jeffery, president of the board, and was received with tumultuous cheers lasting several moments. His honor immediately got busy with his introductory remarks as Mr. Brisbane had to catch a train. In presenting Mr. Brisbane to the company Mayor Fisk said that the great journalist had the privilege of speaking to the largest audience in the country every day, and as wisdom was his gift he urged the company to give the speaker their closest attention.

Mr. Brisbane wasted no words but jumped into his subject at once. He said in part: "I am going to acknowledge that I do speak to a good many people every day and in that I have an advantage which I will not have tonight, and that is they cannot reply to me, at least while they are listening to what I say. My talk tonight is to include but two subjects—the Hudson River tunnels and John D. Rockefeller. Of the first I desire to impress upon you that your Mayor and his family are entitled to as much if not more credit for the building of the great connecting links betwen the great State of New ersey and Manhattan Island as William G McAdoo. Because it was their money that accomplished the feat. Now each year 260,000 people are annually leaving Manhattan to seek suburban homes and they are finding them in the Bronx, Long Island and New Jersey. It wont be long before a million familiies have come among you and it is up to you to provide accommodations for them. You have the territory and the railroads, now jump in and hustle for your population and make Jersey take its place along side New York that it may eventually become the greatest State in the Union."

Referring to Mr. Rockefeller the speaker said: "John D. has just had a bill introduced incorporating what he terms the Rockefeller Foundation. He is going to give away some of his fortune and the great American people are to be the beneficiaries. But he can afford this. He is only going to give back what he has taken from the people, but it is not a tithe of what the people ought to get. Rockefeller was a first class pirate for years, but he will show the people how to take care of themselves who wont do it if left to themselves. The natural wealth of the country is enough to care for the people, but we will have to take his money or he will own not only us but our property and our souls. Rockefeller was the synonom for the gallows owner of the middle ages, but he is to be thanked now and I sincerely believe that every newspaper man in the country, be he white, blue or a yellow journalist will extend to him the right to do what he has outlined."

Mr. Brisbane was cheered when he finished and the Mayor read a letter from William G. McAdoo in which the latter regretted his inability to be present, and sent his hopes for a continuance of the prosperity of Plainfield. Later a telegram from Senator Wakelee was read in which the Bergen county man said his duties at the Capitol prevented his presence at the banquet, which he regretted very much.

Frank Bergen, of Elizabeth, who had endeavored to hide at a table in the center of the hall was espied by the toastmaster, and on the latter's invitation came forward to the speakers' table and made a short address complimentary to the Board of Trade. He said that it was his fourth experience with Board of Trade banquets in Plainfield, but he had noticed an improvement every

PRAISES THE "OIL KING"

Rev. Dr. Eaton, Rockefeller's Former Pastor, Discusses Great Endowment.

"JOHN D." AN INSTITUTION.

"He's One Hundred Men Rolled Into One and Is a Business Statesman," Says "Pastor-Farmer."

Rev. Dr. Charles A. Eaton, pastor to John D. Rockefeller at the Euclid Avenue Baptist church, Chicago, and for years one of his close personal friends, was enthusiastic today when asked his opinion on the oil king's gigantic gift to humanity. The doctor, who is now pastor of the Madison Avenue Baptist church, New York city, was found on his farm in the picturesque Watchung valley just beyond the borders of this community, and he talked freely on the subject.

Mr. Rockefeller's deed will go down in history," said Dr. Eaton, "as a great deed of a great man. He has done a great thing, something thoroughly in keeping with things he has done in the past. Rockefeller is not an individual; he's an institution He is one hundred men rolled into one. You get a different view of him from a hundred different angles. We all have our faults and our virtues and unhappily some have viewed this truly great man from one angle and have missed ninety-nine others.

"Everything Mr. Rockefeller does he does in a business way on business principles. That's so in this case. He has placed this philanthropy in the hands of responsible men and has made it so that it will be selfperpetuating. Its guardians will pass away and others will take their places, but the gift will benefit mankind forever. He has shown his business statesmanship in this matter."

In the world of benefaction, four great givers stand out in the fore rank. These men are John D. Rockefeller, Andrew Carnegie and John Stauart Kennedy, and the fourth a woman, Mrs. Russell Sage. Their gifts total nearly $350,000,000, and their riches have been distributed among universities, technical schools, societies for scientific research, churches, missions, in pursuit of world peace, and in miscellaneous ways.

FAMOUS HORSE CASE TO BE TRIED IN APRIL

In the list of cases slated for trial at the April term of the Somerset County Court is the suit for $2,000 damages against Stonewall and William Jackson and Richard A. Boyce by Michael Riccardi. It is the celebrated horse case in which Jacob Lambert, of Norristown, Pa., figured conspicuously last September.

The suit is the outcome of the theft of three horses from Lambert's farm near Norristown last fall. The latter advertised for the horses extensively, and through Stonewall Jackson, Lambert was informed that there were two horses answering to the latter's description at Boyce's livery stable, which Michael and Benjamin Riccardi had tried to sell him.

Lambert came to Plainfield, went to the stables with a constable, and identified the horses as his property. Without any legal proceedings Lambert secured possession of the horses and shipped them back to Norristown, at the same time causing the arrest of the Riccardis on a fugitive's warrant.

The Riccardis engaged Robert Newton Crane, as counsel, who secured their release. Lambert made an effort to have the Riccardis extradited to Pennsylvania, but Mr. Crane successfully fought this issue in a hearing before Governor J. Franklin Fort, who refused to issue extradition papers. The impending suit is brought by the Riccardis for the recovery of the horses, which they claim as their own, and also the loss of their services, against the Jacksons and Boyce, as it was through their efforts that Lambert secured possession of the horses.

DUNELLEN MAN MET DEATH ON R.R. TRACKS

Nathinel McCord Hill, one of the best known and respected citizens of Dunellen, met a tragic death yesterday afternoon on the Jersey Central tracks near Boynton Beach, when he was struck and almost instantly killed by the Long Branch Flyer. Mr. Hill's body was hurled a distance of fifty feet. The train was stopped and the crew carried the injured man aboard with the intentions of hurrying him to the Perth Amboy hospital, but the efforts of the train men to save life were futile, as Mr. Hill died five minutes later as the train was on its way to Amboy.

The funeral service will be conducted at the late home of the deceased on Grove street, Dunellen, Sunday afternoon at 2 o'clock. Rev. Ernest O. Brown, pastor of the Presbyterian church, will officiate.

Mr. Hill was a bridge carpenter and was an employe of the Jersey Central for thirty-five years. During the day he was engaged at work on the Woodbridge draw with a gang of men. He had left the job to get a plank and it was on his return with the strip of lumber on his shoulder that he met death. While walking on the southbound track he saw a train coming toward him. In order to get out of its way Mr. Hill stepped on the other track directly in the path of the Long Branch train and was struck.

The body of the victim reached Dunellen on the 6:15 train last evening and was taken to Walter G. Runyon's undertaking establishment. The mute evidences of his tragic death is a broken arm, a slight cut in the head and a few scratches on the hands.

Universal sorrow reigns in Dunellen as the result of Mr. Hill's untimely death as he was regarded as one of the borough's unostentatious and substantial citizens. He was a resident of that place for about forty years, being a native of Jersey City. Yesterday he went to his work in the best of health with the other three members of his gang, William Lantz and James Teeling, of that place, and Harry Dunham, of this city.

Mr. Hill was fifty-nine years old, and is survived by a wife, one daughter, Mrs. John Reedy, and a son, Joseph Hill, who resides at Dunellen. Mr. Hill is the third member of his family to meet similar deaths. He was a member of the Independent Order of Foresters at Bergen Point.

Charles Hill was killed by a train on the Clinton avenue bridge about two years ago, and John Hill, who was captain of a barge at Communipaw, eight years ago fell off his lighter and was drowned.

MAJOR LYON TO SPEAK AT THE SALVATION ARMY.

Sunday will be a special day of interest at the local corps of the Salvation Army. Major Frank Lyon, who was recently appointed to the oversight of the work in this part of the country, will be in charge, and will conduct three services, morning, afternoon and night. This will be the closing of the mid-winter camp meetings which have been successful.

At the Sunday night service there will be an enrollment of new members which will strengthen the corps materially. It is expected that at least eight will be added to the roll. The local officers wil be commissioned for the coming year. A great day is expected and all are urgently requested to attend as this will be the last opportunity of seeing the unique decorations. The songsters are practising new hymns for the occasion.

Rode Bicycle on Sidewalk.

Antonio Jessio, an Italian, living on Grant avenue, was allowed to go this morning after being lectured by City Judge William Runyon for riding his bicycle on the sidewalk on Berkman street near St. Mary's avenue yesterday. The next man or boy caught riding their wheels on the walks will be fined. The practice is becoming too common. A colored man was seen riding a wheel on Richmond street last evening at about 6:30 who took up the whole sidewalk from East Fifth street to East Sixth street. But no patrolman was nearby to arrest him.

COMPRESSED AIR COSTLY

Besides it is Considered Unsatisfactory by Fire Fighters in Other Cities.

CHIEF DOANE HAS ESTIMATES.

Steam the Only Element Under Present Conditions Equal to the Work—Whistle Changed April 1.

The fact that it is practically settled that the fire alarm whistle is to be installed at the Spicer plant does not altogether quiet those who believe that a compressed air plant could be advantageously used in the Public Service power house, where the whistle now is.

With a view to ascertaining the actual cost of substituting air for steam a Daily Press reporter has investigated the matter with the result that he has discovered that the present intended arrangement will be the best for the requirements of the city.

The cost of installing an air plant would be in the neighborhood of $5,000, and according to Chief Doane's recent inquiries in other cities where air is used the results are not satisfactory, either to the firemen or the residents At any rate no one seems to believe that compressed air can compare at all favorably with steam. Three bell towers one at the east end, another at the west end and one in the center of the city were suggsted by Mayor Fisk as a substitute for the present whistle, but here again the item of expense is too big a factor. Each one of these towers complete with bell tapper and electric attachments would cost $1,800, a total of $5,400. Besides this the added cost of equipping the homes of the thirty call men with tappers, is something to be considered. The men are not at home during the day, being employed in various vocations in different parts of the city.

Since the publication of the fact that the whistle had to be removed Chief Doane has been deluged with letters offering all sorts of schemes for blowing the alarm, but he as well as the fire and buildings committee of the Common Council have come to the conclusion that it will be best to have the whistle blown by steam and at the Spicer factory. The whistle will in all probability be removed by April 1.

SMALLEY WILL CONTINUE AS A BOROUGH COUNCILMAN

Strong pressure having been brought to bear upon him, William L. Smalley, Jr., this afternoon, consented to have his resignation as a member of the North Plainfield Council withdrawn at tonight's meeting of that body. When the announcement was made exclusively in this paper yesterday, that the brother of Mayton Newton B. Smalley, because of the increasing demands on his time for private business interests, had filed his resignation with Borough Clerk Martin, many of the largest taxpayers got busy. They appointed a committee to get up a popular petition demanding that he continue as a borough father until the end of his present term at least. This committee got busy this morning and when Councilman Smalley read the signatures on the petition he said: "I guess, boys, I'll have to remain in office."

Mr. Smalley is chairman of the laws and ordinances committee and is a member of the police and other committees. He has rendered valuable service to the borough, having devoted much of his time to its interests.

WOMAN GIVEN A $17,500 VERDICT OVER BROKER.

New York, March 4.—A jury in the Federal Court yesterday returned a verdict for $17,515 in favor of Mrs. Emma D. Andrews, who sued Alfred N. Mrs. Andrews is the wife of Dr. Thomas Hollingsworth Andrews, for many years police surgeon of the Philadelphia force.

Chandler was a friend of the family, and induced Mrs. Andrews to invest part of a $100,000 trust fund in stocks of the Westchester Traction Company. She followed his advice and lost $80,000.

According to the bill the State would employ expert accountants who would make regular examinations and charge each municipality a fee for the services rendered on the same principal as the Banking and Insurance Department examiners are employed.

Today's conference is being presided over by Mayor Franklin P. Stoy, of Atlantic City.

Isaac Henry Stevens, colored, aged sixty-three years of age, passed away at his home in Dunellen yesterday after a painful illness of a year's duration. Mr. Stevens, or "Hank" as he was known by every man, woman and child in Dunellen, had a black skin, but he was beloved by all the white folks of that place who referred to him as the "good old man." "Hank" came to Dunellen forty-nine years ago from New York when a boy of fourteen In that time he found employment there and in New Market.

For twenty years he was in the employ of William H. Cole as driver of the latter's coal wagon. It was while attending to his duties that he met with an accident which resulted in the amputation of a leg, and the subsequent attack of gangrene. Mr. Stevens is survived by a wife.

CAPTURED EMBEZZLER FIGHTING EXTRADITION

Fugitive, Wanted by New Police, Picked Up by Detective Flynn, Had Hid in This City.

Detective Sergeant John Flynn distinguished himself again this morning when he took into custody Frederick Lewis, seventy-three years old, a former resident of Plainfield, who is wanted by the New York authorities for embezzlement. Lewis, it is alleged, stole $12,927.50 from the trustees of the Henriques estate in New York, early in June last year. His capture was effected through a photograph made fifteen years ago, and it is a wonder that Detective Flynn got the man as he has aged so much in the time since the picture was taken that there is scarcely any resemblance.

Lewis was indicted by the grand jury of New York county on June 30, 1909, and has been a fugitive from justice since that day. He was traced from New York to Vineland, thence to Camden and finally to Philadelphia, where on November 5 of last year he was arrested. Magistrate Scott, of the Quaker city refused to hold Lewis on a "fugitive" warrant, and he made a quick getaway. He has been living here under the assumed name of B. Herrmann in a boarding house on East Fifth street.

The complaint under which Lewis was wanted was sworn to by Florence Henriques of 343 St Nicholas avenue, New York city, and the police of every city in the country have been on the lookout for the man ever since he escaped from the Philadelphia police. Lieutenant Rosso, of District Attorney Whitman's detail in New York, came to Plainfield this morning to see that Lewis does not get away without the proper charge being made to hold him.

According to the police records Lewis formerly lived at Hotel Netherwood, now Truell Hall, with his family and apparently was provided with ample means. He was arraigned this afternoon at a late hour and the interests of the District Attorney, of New York, were cared for by Assistant Prosecutor Walter Hetfield, Jr., while Lewis engaged Craig A. Marsh to help him fight extradition.

TRUST COMPANY INSTALLING A HUGE STEEL VAULT.

TO REARREST MAN AT PRISON DOORS.

Trenton, March 4.—When Mark Ferano leaves the New Jersey State Prison here next Tuesday after serving a year from Essex county for larceny, he will be met at the door by New York officials and taken back to Sing Sing to complete a two years' term for grand larceny in the first degree, he having escaped from that institution after serving only part of his sentence.

Extradition was issued yesterday by Governor Fort at the request of Governor Hughes for the return of the man, who, in addition to serving the balance of his term, will be compelled to stand trial for breaking jail, which will add a few more years to his sentence.

Ferano was arrested in Westchester County N. Y., and sentenced by Judge William Platt to Sing Sing. He escaped from the prison March 25, 1907. He came to New Jersey and after operating in Newark for a time was arrested there and sent to New Jersey State Prison for larceny.

It was through the Bertillion system that he was recognized by the Sing Sing authorities, and the matter laid before Governor Hughes, who made the requisition on Governor Fort, which was promptly honored.

MARYLAND KNOCKS OUT THE LOCAL OPTION BILL.

Annapolis, March 4.—By a vote of 50 to 48 the House of Delegates killed the Statewide local option bill Wednesday afternoon and put an end to temperance legislation for this session. The measure came from committee without recommendation, four of the members favoring and four opposing it. The ninth member refused to vote.

The fight against the bill was precipitated by a motion to strike out the enacting clause. Baltimore city voted almost solidly to kill, only one of the twenty-eight votes favoring the bill.

The case was investigated by the State Motor Vehicle Department, but owing to the conflicting testimony, no formal complaint was made against Sharp.

TRADE BOARD BANQUET

time he came and was now convinced that this city had attained to that higher civilization to which other cities aspire but seldom realize. He classed John S. Kennedy and Andrew Carnegie with John D. Rockefeller, and claimed that all three were doing what would have been impossible in other times.

Colonel Fuller, who was asked to respond to "The Ladies," set the diners in an uproar by his witticism, and retired amid a yell of glee that could be heard in Fanwood. Mr. Martine, who followed the colonel gave a brief history of the ancient house of his family and presented the Board of Trade with a new gavel turned from a piece of timber taken from the original log house. The wood was part of a beam which was put in the house in 1717. Mr. Jeffery accepted the gavel in a speech of appreciation and said it would be a welcome addition to the weapons with which the board would prosecute its work.

Former Assemblyman Swackhamer made the most humorous speech of the evening and convulsed his hearers time and again with his timely and wholesome jokes. He ended, however, seriously by advising the board to pursue their purposes of advancing the interests of the city with an eye single to their duties as honorable, upright, courageous and energetic men, who would know no such word as fail. This city with all its natural advantages has reached a high state of perfection and it should be the aim of its citizens to make it even better.

During the dinner the company was entertained by vocal and instrumental music by a quartet of colored comedians and singers whose achievements were loudly applauded. A striking thing was the reception accorded to Farmer-orator Martine as he walked up the aisle at 8:15. The big company recognized him as soon as he put his head in the doorway, and there arose a cheer which must hav warmed the cockles of his heart. It was one more demonstration of the affection in which Mr. Martine is held by his fellow townsmen.

The service of the banquet was perfect and the committee are entitled to much praise for the splendid results of their efforts. These men composed the committee: Edmund Rushmore, chairman; Allen B. Laing, M. C. VanArsdale, Alexander Milne and E. M. Laing.

WHAT INSPIRATION DOES ACCORDING TO MISS DUNN

Miss Emma Dunn, who will play the leading part in Jules Goodman's drama "Mother," at the Plainfield theatre on Monday night, was seen in New York the other day at rehearsal, and had somewhat to say about inspiration and kindred topics.

"I think I get my greatest inspiration in the part itself," said Miss Dunn. "The audience, of course, spurs one on and shows one the coloring and the proportions of a part. In short the audience is absolutely essential to any actor in order that he shall do his best work, but I can completely lost myself in a part at rehearsal.

"I think we all get inspiration, too, from the work of others. For this reason I try to see every great actor and acrtess that I can. I try to hear the best music also and see the best dancing. I shall never forget my indebtedness to Isadora Duncan, possibly nothing else has ever spurred me to great things as did her dancing. It was a wonderful performance. Her work embraces all the arts. The little things I had tried to accomplish in my dramtic work seemed laughable and when I left her performance I felt ill at the thought of trying to act at all that night. The first part of my performance was absolutely colorless, and, when I reached the emotional part of the play I discovered something new in my work. She had taught me abandon and I played my part better that night than ever before, although I had played it for over 200 times.

"The inspiration from a great coworker is also a tremendous incentive to great things in one's own work. My life with Mr. Mansfield was not a bed of roses; there were times when I thought him a very cruel man but I wouldn't have lost the inspiration gained by my experience with him for thousands of dollars. It was superb to play with such a big personality and I realize that the hardships with him developed me much more than years of routine with a kinder and weaker man.

"It is always an insoiration to be under such a master director as David Belasco, the great stage technician of the country. You learn, of course, the use of little things, the picking up of a letter, and the closing of a door, details that would be rehearsed day after day and hour by hour. But, there was another and a greater side to the Belasco training, an inspiration to do one's best, an inspiration to rise to the greatest heights, to be the dominant feature of the entire playhouse for the moment, and this is an inspiration one gets only by working under such a Svengali as David Belasco.

SWEET GOSPEL SINGERS AT TEMPLE BAPTIST.

Another large congregation gathered at the Temple Baptist church last night to hear the sweet gospel singers, Rev. and Mrs. C. E. Lewis and daughter, Mrs. Allen E. Beals, who sang four appropriate selections, "The King's Business," "Above the Bright Blue," "Softly and Tenderly Jesus Is Calling," and "Where Will You Spend Eternity."

The subject considered by Rev. Mr. Westfall was "Bringing Sinners to Jesus." He gave the following suggestions for winning souls to Christ: First, one must have reverence for Christ; second, one must remove obstacles in the way of others coming to Christ; third, one must tell what they firmly believe about Christ; fourth, repeat the message of Christ.

Unusual interest was manifested and one young man decided to become a Christian. The subject tonight will be "The Master's Mission."

Secret as to Water Purity.

Rahway, March 4.—The Board of Water Commissioners Wednesday night received reports from the State Board of Health regarding the condition of the city's water supply, as analyzed by a sample taken February 10. It also received a report from the board's bacteriologist, Dr. Frederick W. Sell. The reports themselves were withheld from the public until they were properly revised by the president, Mayor Howard, who is a member of the Board of Water Commissioners, said that Dr. Sell had informed him that if, when the water is found in the morning a little off color, the faucet was allowed to run for a time, the supply could be used with impunity.

GEORGE VOEHL TO RETIRE FROM BAKERY BUSINESS.

George Voehl, who has been engaged in the bakery business on West Front street, for more than twenty years, will retire on March 20, having sold the business to Lewis Cornfield, of this city. Mr. Cornfield has been employed for the past five years as a baker by Mr. Vohel and is thoroughly conversant with every detail.

Mr. Voehl is one of the best known merchants of the city. While he has been connected with the bakery business practically all his life, his father for many years before him having been a baker, he has been in business for himself a little over twenty years. He will vacate his property, which is to be occupied by Mr. Cornfield, and reside elsewhere in the city, still retaining the ownership of the property.

PLAN TUBERCULOSIS CAMP FOR UNION CO.

At the meeting of the Union County Board of Freeholders this afternoon the proposition that a committee take up the matter of establishing a tuberculosis camp in the county will be discussed. The county tuberculosis society requested the freeholders to appoint a committee to confer with it on the subject, and Director King appointed Freeholders J. Hervey Doane, chairman; Perry, Krause, Garrison and Jones.

The idea seems to meet with general favor on the part of the freeholders and doubtless arrangements will be made to establish a camp if the cost is not too great.

Hurst, who is a brother of "Tim" Hurst, the former noted baseball umpire, fled after the shooting and is still at large.

New Show at Proctor's.

When a play really appeals to us we wish to see it again. The pathetic playlet, "The Advance Agent" is a charming story told in such a way that you talk and discuss it when you reach home. Have you seen Freeman & Fiske in a jingle of wordless words that are a scream? Wilson and Rich certainly can dance. Their songs are clever and that rapid fire talk can go some. Adeline Francis is a popular English singer, and her catchy songs are out of the ordinary.

NEW DUST KILLER FOR THE HIGHWAYS

Members of the Road Committee of the Board of Freeholders who have been interested for years past in various road building methods, have been offered something new in the way of road building material in a preparation manufactured by the Solvay Process Company of Syracuse. This method of road building has been brought to the attention of the county engineers all over the State, and it is probable that experiments may be made with it by the State Commission during the coming spring. Union county has been experimenting with road building materials for several years past with an idea of getting good, durable road that will not make much dust and will stand the heavy automobile traffic.

The preparation put up by the Syracuse company is called the "Solvay granulated calcium chloride," and is a chemical salt similar in appearance to popcorn. It is a neutral salt and consequently has no injurious effects upon the material of the road or anything else that may come in contact with it. The makers claim that it is odorless, and that it is white, clean and non-corrosive. Its single property when applied to a road is that it immediately absorbs enough water from the air to keep the roads moist and dustless.

The manufacturers claim that the preparation preserves the roads from wear, and is absolutely dustless. Dust, they claim, is wear, and if there is no dust there is no wear.

The Syracuse company figures and tests prove that the material is cheaper and more satisfactory than oil preparations. It is claimed that it costs less per yard than oil and requires no top dressing of gravel to absorb it, as does oil. It requires no water to apply, and is colorless and entirely soluble in water. It is noncombustible and can be shipped easily.

One of the big claims of the company is that the preparation does not produce a greasy mud nor does the mud injure the paint of vehicles. It is also claimed that it is wholly without any effect on rubber. The company says that the material is completely absorbed by the road's surface within onehalf hour or an hour after it is applied. The one point in which oil might seem to excel calcium chloride is that the application of oil is assumed to be sufficient for one or two years, although it is stated that oil must be put on a road once each year. Solvay granulated calcium chloride costs $25 per mile per application or $75 to $100 per mile a year. Two or more applications are necessary in the year. The manufacturers claim that it is cheaper to put the preparation on the road than it is to put water on with a watering cart.

Fruit Cake.

One pound of butter, one pound of sugar, one light pound of flour, twelve eggs, three pounds of seeded raisins, one and a half pounds of citron, sliced very thin, one-half a nutmeg, one wine-glassful of brandy (if brandy is not desired use grated rind and juice of an orange). Wash the butter thoroughly and cream with flour. Beat the yolks of eggs very light with the sugar and add the beaten whites. Mix these with the butter and flour and nutmeg and brandy. Have the fruit well floured. Put in a sifter and sift so as to remove superfluous flour. Put in the fruit, stirring it in the cake very slowly. Put in a greased mold and use great care in baking. It must be baked slowly, with a gradually increasing heat.

SOME STATE NEWS BRIEFS

Ice has remained on the Blackwood Lake longer this year than in any winter for thirty-five years.

Contractor Henry Hurff, of Pitman, was injured Wednesday by being thrown out of his buggy in a runaway at Glassboro.

The First Congregational church of Vineland has extended a call to Rev. J. W. Sexton, of New York city, and he has accepted.

At the meeting of Cape May Council Tuesday evening the Board of Trade's resolutions censuring the Cape May trolley management were referred to the Street Committee for investigation.

Atlantic City householders are happy over the reduction of the price of gas from $1 to 90 cents a thousand by the new merged local concerns, in accordance with a promise made to the Business League last week.

Frank Mingione, of 71 Madison street, and Louis Quorto of 64 Madison street, Paterson, were taken in charge by Detective-Sergeant Lord, Wednesday afternoon, while trying to dispose of a woman's gold watch. Later it was ascertained that the boys had found it on the sidewalk, several days ago. They had given it to Principal Barry, of Public School No. 15, and after searching the newspapers for an advertisement describing the watch, for several days, the boys again got the watch and were making an effort to sell it when the police got them. They were soon released.

At the meeting of the Merchantville Council Tuesday night it was announced that an agreement had been reached between the borough, William Early and counsel for the Metropolitan Surety Company of New York and the suits had been withdrawn. The surety company agrees to pay at once to Merchantville $10,000. When Merchantville decided to install a sewer system three years ago the contract was awarded to the Stevens-Hewitt Engineering Company of New York. When half through the contractors threw up the job and later the borough entered suit to recover $21,000 from the bonding company. Contractors then entered a suit for damages against the borough, specifying some neglect. The payment of the surety company settles all the legal troubles in connection with the sewer.

The Young Women's Missionary Society of the First Baptist church will hold a supper at the church on Thursday night, March 17, the proceeds to be devoted to missions.

WILL BOOM GARVEN TO SUCCEED FORT.

Bayonne, March 4.—Prosecutor Pierre P. Garven is to be boomed for Governor at the dollar dinner to be held in the City Republican Clubhouse, Broadway and West Twenty-ninth street, this city, Saturday evening April 2. Friends of the former Mayor promise the boom will surely be sprung.

There have been rumors in this city for many months that Garven would be boosted for Governor Fort's shoes, but nothing definite could be learned until the arrangements for the dinner were well under way.

It is pointed out that ex-Mayor Garven has a clean record as chief executive of this city during the four years he occupied the Mayor's chair.

Another reason put forth by friends of Garven why he would make a good Republican candidate for Governor is his aggressiveness in prosecuting the beef trust. It is said that his fight in this line has won him many friends throughout the State.

Prosecutor Garven will not discuss his Gubernatorial boom. He was appointed prosecutor two years ago by Governor Fort. The prosecutor of Hudson county receives a salary of $7,500 a year.

DR. WILSON TO TALK OF PRINCETON PROBLEMS.

Princeton, March 4.—Announcement is made that on March 26, President Woodrow Wilson will speak in St. Louis at the invitation of the Western Association of Princeton Clubs. A letter from David D. Metcalfe, '04, secretary of the association, to The Alumni Weekly says in part: "While we do not have the intimate contact with Princeton which alumni in the East have, we are probably able to view the great interests of the university in a broad way which makes us less susceptible to the personal feeling that naturally makes partizans of those in closer contact with the university. In view of the recent newspaper agitation and in order that the atmosphere may be cleared we have selected as our subject for discussion, 'Present Princeton Problems.'"

President Wilson is at present in the Bermudas for his usual midwinter vacation, but is expected back in Princeton next Monday. He has a large number of engagements for the latter part of March and April.

Franklin Council, No. 41, Jr. O. U. A. M., at its meeting last night initiated several candidates. The new uniforms were used by the initiatory team.

INSANE MAN CHEWS DETECTIVE'S HAND.

Elizabeth, March 4.—Charles Meisa, of 539 Third avenue, this city, an athletic German, became violently insane yesterday in the Alexian Hospital. It took seven policemen to overpower him. Detective Patrick Brogan was badly bitten on the hands by the maniac during the tussle. The detective continued to aid in overpowering Meisa and when this was finally accomplished had his injuries dressed at the hospital. John H. Wind, driver of the patrol wagon, also took part in the affair.

Soon after Meisa was taken to the hospital yesterday he became violent. The surgeons and attendants were unable to quiet the man. He was placed in confinement, where he raved and banged his head against the walls. The violence of the man alarmed the hospital staff and an appeal to the police for aid was made.

Meisa was ordered to the county jail. On the way there he again became violent. Two policemen who were seated on his ankles were lifted from the floor of the patrol wagon. After a battle lasting nearly half an hour Meisa was placed in a straight jacket.

The hospital doctors think the man is suffering from religious mania.

FIRST PRIZE:

$325 PIANO ABSOLUTELY FREE

SECOND PRIZE---$125 CERTIFICATE OF CREDIT, Other Prizes See Below

$8,000 Worth of Additional Prizes

Wouldn't you like a fine, new $325 piano? Solve this puzzle picture. You have the same, fair opportunity as anyone else to win. This is the most liberal offer ever made to those desiring a piano. It is a gigantic publicity contest. Our factory advertising appropriation for this spring is to be used where it will do piano buyers the most good. Instead of spending the money in magazines, we intend to give away a piano free, and also distribute hundreds of fine pianos, at prices never before possible, to prize winners. Start today and try for this piano.

There is no catch. Everyone has an equal opportunity. Cut out the little pieces and paste them together and you will have two of the world's greatest generals. One a famous general of the American Revolutionary War and the other the most famous general of France, who was defeated at the battle of Waterloo. The most artistic correct answer will be given the $325 piano absolutely free.

THE PRIZES—First prize—A fine new piano, valued at $325. Second prize—A certificate of credit for $125. Third prize—A certificate for $100. The next six best answers will be given a credit certificate for $90. Following these in groups of 6 or more, each contestant sending in the next best answer will be given a credit for $1 less than those previous—that is, six at $89, next six at $88, etc.—until the amount has been awarded.

Special Advertising appropriation. In addition to the above prizes the Company will voluntarily issue to each of the remaining contestants a special certificate of credit of $25 as an award for their effort in the contest.

These certificates are good on the purchase of any New Hallet & Davis, Conway or Kimball Piano or Player-Piano in our warerooms at regular retail price. Time of certificate is limited. Certificates cannot be applied on any purchase made previous to March 10. Only one certificate may be applied to the purchase of one piano.

THE JUDGING—Disinterested judges will be chosen who will select the winner, and the decision of the judges will be final. All prize winners will be notified. Judges' names will be announced.

FEEDS PRISONERS CHEAPLY.

Middlesex Saves Money by Canceling Contract.

New Brunswick, March 4.—Middlesex county, according to a report made to the Board of Freeholders yesterday afternoon, is saving about $1.20 a week per prisoner by feeding the prisoners direct instead of through contract. Last year the freeholders gave a contract to Charles H. Rogers to feed the prisoners at $1.90 a week per prisoner. Even this figure was lower than in a number of other counties. In Somerset county the freeholders have a contract with the jail warden to feed the prisoners at over $2 per week.

Commission is Named.

Cranford, March 4.—The Cranford Township Committee Wednesday night created a Sinking Fund Commission to care for the fund to retire sewer bonds when due. Heretofore the town has been without such a commission. Walter Scholes and I. V. S. Hillier were appointed as commissioners. Township Treasurer C. W. Burtis, by virtue of his office, is a member of the commission.

Instead of paying rent he turns the monthly payment into capital by investing in the house.

PLAINFIELD TRUST CO A CREDITOR FOR $2,725.

A petition in bankruptcy has been filed against Leopold Loeb and Harry N. Gitt, as co-partners only in the firm of Loeb & Co., wholesale tobacco dealers, at 147 Water street, New York, by these creditors: Market & Fulton National Bank, $5,000, on a note of Loeb & Co.; Plainfield Trust Company of Plainfield, N. J., $2,725, on a note of the American West Indies Trading Company, indorsed by Loeb & Co., and Nicholas C. Teddy, $2,475, on a note of the American West Indies Trading Company, indorsed by Loeb & Co.

It was alleged that the copartnership is insolvent, and committed an act of bankruptcy on January 10 by transferring part of their property to Julius Lichtenstein & Co., to prefer them, and transferred bills receivable, amounting to $120,000, to the Loeb-Nunez Havana Company, and to Leopold Loeb & Co., of Philadelphia. Messrs. Loeb and Gitt have large interests in various other firms and corporations, but the petition concerns the firm of Loeb & Co., only, and is not against any of their other interests.

Judge Ahern, of the Supreme Court, on January 13 appointed Morris J. Levi and Alfred Beekman receivers for Loeb & Co., in dissolution proceedings, and it was stated then that the liabilities were $273,698, of which $150,000 was contingent, and the assets $425,000.

Miss Estelle Jones, of Elizabeth, has returned home after a visit with friends here.

BITE MAY BE FATAL.

Morristown Man's Artery Nearly Severed by Horse's Teeth.

Morristown, March 4.—Narrowly missing an artery with its teeth a savage horse bit Joseph Pangborn, a driver in the employ of Anderson M. Guerin at Guerin's stable yesterday morning.

Pangborn was hitching the animal which is a valuable trotter, and was bitten three times. He was hurried to the office of Dr. Stephen Pierson, where the wounds were cauterized and dressed. The teeth of the vicious animal passed the arteries of the neck, missing them by a very short space, and the matter of a fraction of an inch would have made the attack fatal.

GOLF.

J. E. Erickson of the Plainfield Country Club and his associates of the Metropolitan Golf Association handicap committee are now at work on the 1910 list as the executive committee has accepted the revised par score suggested at the annual meeting. The spring list, however, may not be out as early as usual. This notice has been sent out:

"Owing to a revision of the handicap table it has been necessary to have new blanks printed. They will be heady for distribution in a few days. In the meantime please make up at once a list of your playing members, and after each name indicate the player's best score average, i. e., his score on his home course when he is playing his average best game. In deciding what this is you must go by his scores last season in competition and by what you know his best form to be.

The revised table is:

Up to 215 yards, par 3; 216 to 250 yards, par 3½; 251 to 400 yards, par 4; 401 to 450 yards, 4½; 451 to 475 yards, par 5; 476 to 600 yards, par 5½; more than 600 yards, par 6.

The foregoing figures are not arbitrary, because due allowance should be made for the configuration of the ground and for the easy or difficult conditions. As an example a 400 yard hole up a steep hill might be a par 4½ or 5 and a 550 yard hold down hill might be a par 4. An exceedingly narrow 440 yard hole might be a par 5. The severity of hazards, especially on a hole where the par is doubtful, should be considered. Par means perfect play without flukes and under ordinary weather conditions always allowing for two strokes on each green. While experienced players intuitively know the par of any hole with which they are familiar the official distances previously given will be useful in determining the total par of the course.

Local handicappers have been advised that if on any hole the par is more or less than the length of the hole would indicate they should state the reason. Each hole should be measured from the centre of the tee to the centre of the green, generally following the surface of the ground, except that in some cases an air line measurement, or nearly so, may be advisable.

The original handicap table placed at scratch a player whose best score average, that is, average best play, was par at his home course. This made it necessary for an associate handicap committee to raise (from one to five strokes) the handicaps as returned from the clubs having short courses, the reason being that the shorter the course the greater the predominance of short holes and the easier to play in par figures. By his revision of 1910 Leighton Calkins makes an allowance for this well recognized fact in the handicap table itself.

JOHN FRITTS LEADING IN CHAMPIONSHIPS

John Fritts leaped into the lead in the all around athletic competition at the Y. M. C. A. last night by winning two events which were contested, the standing high jump and one-quarter mile potato race. Fritts tops the list with 741 points. Murphy is second with 712 points and Vail third with 549 points. The summary of last night's meet follows:

Standing High Jump—Won by John Fritts; Clifford Vail, second; Walter Sampson, third. Distance 4 feet 2½ inches.

Quarter Mile Potato Race—Won by John Fritts; S. Dorman, second; W. Sampson, third. Time, 1 minute 44 seconds.

Should Be a Hot Game.

What should prove an exciting basket encounter is carded to take place at the Y. M. C. A. gymnasium tomorrow night, when the Plainfield and Elizabeth association terms will clash. Each team has a victory to its credit and a hard fight is sure to be made to clinch the "rubber."

BOY SOUGHT BY POLICE RETURNS TO HIS HOME.

Summit, March 4.—While the local police and the authorities in nearby towns were searching for John Ennis, the fourteen-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. William Ennis, of Orchard street, East Summit, who disappeared from the home of his parents Wednesday night, the lad returned to his home yesterday morning.

Young Ennis, it is believed, spent the night walking in the vicinity of Millburn.

It was learned yesterday that two other boys, Ernest Bohrman and Russell Johnson, each about seventeen years old, and whose homes are in Park avenue, East Summit, had planned to seek fame and fortune in the West, but were obliged to abandon the trip when young Johnson's father captured the pair at the Lackawanna station here last Sunday night.

The lads had their tickets for Chicago and were awaiting the arrival of a train when Mr. Johnson appeared. Young Johnson was plentifully supplied with money, which he drew from a bank in which he had a personal account.

P. H. S. NOTES.

The P. H. S. basketball team will journey to New Brunswick tomorrow afternoon to play the Rutgers' Prep. five. In the last game P. H. S. defeated the Rutgers boys easily and the New Brunswick fellows are prepared for them now.

The entertainment at the High School this afternoon consisted of the famous "Amateur Night." Doane and Vail gave a comedy aerobatic stunt. Miss Katherine Phillips recited a parady on a school song and Miss Elizabeth Hardwicke impersonated a mechanical doll. The actors were hooted off by the cat calls of the pupils.

THE POLICE SALARY BILL

Introduced Again by Assemblyman Ford, of Hoboken, Yesterday.

MEANS 25 PER CENT. RAISE.

Opposition in Many Quarters to Passage of Bill to Increase Bluecoats' Wages.

The bill introduced into the Legislature yesterday by Assemblyman Ford, of Hoboken, if it becomes a law will have a widespread effect upon the taxpayers of this State and will call forth howls of anguish from these same taxpayers. The bill calls for an increase in the salaries of policemen of all grades from captains down to doormen and was instigated by the Patrolmen's Benevolent Association of Hoboken.

The bill calls for the payment in all second-class cities in the State of the following salaries: Captain, $2,000; aids, lieutenants, detective sergeants and roundsmen, $1,600; doormen, $1,300. The pay of patrolmen will range from $900 the first year to $1,300, which amount he will receive after your years' continuous service. As this would affect Plainfield considerably the figures are given for comparison.

Under the ordinance passed by the Common Council in 1908 a captain's salary is fixed at $1,200; sergeant and detective sergeant, $1,140; roundsman, $1,080, and patrolmen first year, $792; second year, $864; third year, $924; fourth year, $960, and the fifth year, $1,000. In order to meet the requirements of the new bill the salaries in this city would involve an increase of about twenty-five per cent. in all ranks excepting that of chief, which apparently is left out of the bill altogether.

This is the same bill which was introduced last year and members of the finance committee were wary of its passage because of the added burden devolving on the taxpayers. It was stated in Trenton yesterday that considerable opposition is felt among the legislators to the bill in its present context. It is understood that a concultation will be held in the near future between Assemblyman Schwartz and the members of the Senate finance committee. It is said that Mayor Mravlag, of Elizabeth, is strongly opposed to the passage of the bill.

HOODS FOR EVENING.

As an evening head dress hoods are in the lead. They are seen in every conceivable material from fur to chiffon, and often the two are combined with a touch of lace here and there.

When it comes to shapes it would be difficult to describe them, for many of thme are no shape at all, but simply scarfs bunched, knotted and gathered up until they form a kind of bag which is pulled over the head and is sure to make even the plainest face bewitching.

In color we have the range of the rainbow and every shade and tint of each separate color, so even the most fastidious may be satisfied.

In lace, however, black, white and ivory are given preference, but sometimes even these costly bits of silk or thread are dyed to match a wrap or gown.

Unlike many charming head dresses that every woman covets, these hoods can be made at home by the most inexperienced sewers. Those who know only the least bit about sewing will be safe in attempting an opera hood.

A pretty way to make an opera hood of chiffon or marquisette is to run five quarter of an inch tucks eighteen inches long, placed two inches apart, lengthwise through the centre of the material.

Through the casings thus formed, run heavy cords sufficiently long to reach from one side of the head, below the ear, to the other side at the same place.

The fullness should be distributed evenly and the ends of the cords caught firmly together with several stitches. So arranged, the material will fall on both edges in a full soft frill.

At the points where the cords are caught, the scarf may be loosely knotted as a finish, or when one prefers, flowers can be the mode of decoration.

A large rose of crepe, or a bunch of small flowers such as violets or rosebuds, is effective.

The long ends twisted round the neck serve to protect the throat and chest from the cold.

Mrs. Weldon and Miss Helen Weldon, of London, Eng., are visiting Mrs. Charles Emmons, of the borough.

The Island of Regeneration

By Cyrus Townsend Brady
Illustrations by Ray Walters

(Copyright, 1909, by W. G. Chapman.)
(Copyright in Great Britain.)

She had time to think how singularly like the language of convention was the language of nature. It was what any other man who loved would have said, and in the same way.

"Yes," She Said, "It Passes By."

"That ship is passing by," he went on. "When I saw it as I woke this morning, it was there. It goes rapidly."

"Yes," she said, "it passes by."

"I care not," he interrupted. "I don't want anything else or anybody else. Now that I have you, I am content here."

"But we shall summon it and bring it back," she went on, resolutely.

"How?" he asked curiously.

"By lighting the beacon yonder."

"I had forgot that."

"But I did not. Go back to the cave and bring the flint and steel. You will find them in the silver box on the shelf by the Bible, and make haste."

"I will go the quicker," he said, turning to her, "that I may be the sooner back with you."

He turned and bounded away like a young deer. She watched him through the trees, and then sat down upon the summit of the hill and stared toward the ship. She was glad, of course, that they were to be rescued, but as in the joy of their love there was sorrow, so in her gladness there was apprehension. That test of which she had dreamed the night before was now to be complete. She would postpone the telling of her story until he could hear in comment upon it the voice of the world.

They had lived in Eden, Eden without a serpent. They had plucked the tree of knowledge at will and no consequences evil had ensued, yet nevertheless, they must go out into the world now, the world with its pains, its toils and frets, the world with its mockeries and scorns, and take up the appointed life of men. He loved her now—there could not be any doubt about that—but what would he do when he knew and when he knew that the world knew as well what she had thought, what she had been, and what she had done. Alas, when that ship's boat touched the shores of their island, the angel of the flaming sword would always guard their entrance and prevent their returning to it.

She was a brave woman. She could face the inevitable with courage, with a philosophy which now at last was Christian. She had had three peaceful years and a day of such happiness as falls to the lot of few of the children of sorrow. Perhaps that was all that she was destined to look back upon of joy. Perhaps the future held for her only expiation. Perhaps she ought not to rebel against that possibility. She ought to be glad of such an opportunity, indeed. But she was a woman, and by and by she hid her face in her hands and wept.

In all their intercourse he had never seen her weep. Tears were entirely foreign to his experience. He knew what sorrow was, what sadness was, what sympathy was, for his heart had been torn when she had read to him the story of the Man of Sorrows and his sufferings. A child of nature, the pathetic in the Old Covenant and the New had appealed to him profoundly, but his were not easy tears. He had never shed any. He had never seen any. He was appalled, therefore, when approaching noiselessly he laid his hand upon her shoulder and saw and heard the evidence of her grief.

Her desolation, her sorrow appealed to him profoundly. He took her in his arms. He laid her head gently upon his shoulder. There was protection and tenderness as well as passion in his touch.

"Together," he whispered, patting her hair softly, "alone, you and I!"

For one delicious moment with closed eyes she let herself be so soothed and comforted. But her better nature woke on the instant, as it were.

"No," she said, drawing away from him gently, "it would not be right. We belong in the world of men. Men and women are not men and women until they have lived among their fellows, until they have fought down the temptations of which we know nothing here, and have conquered them—out there. Give me the flint and steel. I must call back the ship!"

He stooped as she spoke and picked up the little silver box. He extended his hand toward her, and then suddenly drew it back.

"You cannot light the beacon," he said.

"Cannot!" she cried.

"No, for I will not give you the flint and steel."

"You must give it to me."

"I will not. I am the stronger, and you cannot take it from me," he returned, with growing firmness.

It was the first time in all their intercourse that he had disobeyed a command. She looked at him amazed, her heart, nevertheless, throbbing at the mastery in his tone at the thought that he was willing to throw away the world for her. It is true he had had no experience of that he was giving up, but he was not entirely ignorant of what lay beyond the horizon, and she had presented it in such a way that it glowed with color and life and charm. The evil, the sordid and the wretched had been lightly alluded to, just definitely enough to shade the picture and bring out the higher lights of civilization. His was not the decision, therefore, of an untutored, inexperienced savage, not the abandonment of a toy by a child; there was some reality in it and the reality measured his affection. Her heart leaped in her breast at that thought. For one fleeting moment she acquiesced. Things would go on in the old way. But things could not go on in the old way. For a day and a night, in spite of the great change that had come to their feelings, life had flowed on as usual, but there was a limit to human power. It was better, whatever betide, that they should go back to civilization. The woman stared at him long and earnestly, her lip trembling, her face pale, her eyes shining. They stood speechless at gaze for a moment, and then she spoke.

"You are right," she said, "my power over you has gone. I can no longer command. Mine has ceased to be the supreme will, but I beg you, I entrat you, I pray you, give me the flint and steel. See, on my knees I ask you!"

She sank down before him in an attitude which he knew to be that of prayer. They had often read the sacred Scriptures and had said their prayers together on the sand or beneath the trees since she, too, in the solitude had seen God and believed.

"I cannot, I will not," he answered, hoarsely, stepping nearer to her.

"No," she said, "you must not touch me, you shall not touch me. I shall be to you as a stranger, unless you take me by force, if you will not let me light that beacon."

"No," said the man, doggedly. "When the world touches our shores it brings you unhappiness. Let it pass."

"Listen!" she said. "I have tried to tell you something about honor and duty. My honor says that that ship must be called. My duty bids me call her. You said that you love me."

"Said!" exclaimed the man.

"You do love me, then," returned the woman, "and I you, but that love must be tested, tried in the world. I can never believe in it, in you, until the trial has been made. We must call back the ship!"

"But I can believe in you without any test."

"I am different. I have been out there. I know what it is. I have seen other men."

She looked fixedly at him. He bent closer to her and laid his hand upon her shoulder, not this time in caress. She winced from the tightness of his grasp, the fierce intensity of his clutch, yet she did not draw away, and he was not conscious of the force he used.

"You have seen other men. They have loved you?"

"Yes," she forced herself to reply.

"And you?"

"I have loved no man but you."

"You had something to tell me. You were to tell me to-day."

"Yes."

"Was it about some other man?"

"Yes."

"What was it?"

"I will tell you when we have gone back where men and women live."

"Why not now?"

"You must hear the voice of the world in comment upon what I say."

"But if we do not go back?"

"There will be a secret between us which I will carry to my grave. It would be fatal to our happiness. You see we must call back the ship. Give me the flint and steel, for God's sake, if you love me, man!"

She had never adjured him in that fashion before. He stood irresolute a moment and dropped the box at her feet. She had conquered, conquered by appealing to his love for her. Nothing else, she felt, would have moved him.

Eagerly she opened the silver box and took thence the tiny implements. Fortunately they were in the heart of the dry season. To strike a spark was easy, to communicate it to the tinder-like brushwood was easier still. In a moment, catching the inflammable wood dried out by the tropic sun, the flames roared through the great mass. The cliff or peak at the top of the island made a background for the flame, and soon a pillar of fire 20 or 30 feet high leaped and curled up into the still air of the morning.

The woman beckoned. The two ran around the peak of the rock until they were sheltered from the fierce heat of the fire. From where they stood they could see the ship.

THE SLIM WOMAN IS WINNING
The day of the slim woman's triumph has arrived. "The thinner one is the more stylish," say the dressmakers.
This would have been sad news for the fat woman a year ago. She would have had to try dieting or exercise. Nowadays, however, the woman who is too fat for the styles goes to a druggist and gets a case of Marmola Prescription Tablets, one of which she takes after each meal and at bedtime and so reduces her superfluous flesh quickly.
These tablets, being made in accordance with the famous prescription, are perfectly harmless, and they are, also, the most economical preparation a person can buy, for they cost only 75 cents a large case, one of which is frequently enough to start a person to losing fat at the rate of 12 or 14 ounces a day. Pretty nearly every druggist keeps this tablet in stock, but should yours be sold out, you can easily obtain a case by sending to the makers, the Marmola Company, 955 Farmer Bldg., Detroit, Mich.

Plainfield in .... The Olden Days.

Re-printed from The Weekly Constitutionalist

November 2, 1871.

We have purchased a new set of books for our business, and now propose to keep them on a different plan—i. e., to have fewer standing accounts. Some people may live on air, but we are positive, from experience, that we cannot. We propose to send out a trustworthy agent with his pockets full of bills, to see if he cannot collect a few outstanding debts, and we trust those indebted will cordially respond.

$100 Reward.—I will give any cutter in Plainfield $100 if they will cut and make a better garment than I can furnish.—C. H. ANDREWS.

Rev. J. H. Vincent, D. D., will preach in the Methodist Episcopal church, next Sunday evening at 7:30 p. m. Subject, "Lessons Drawn From the Ashes of the Great Fire."

Dr. John C. Sutphen, formerly vicepresident of the Citizens' Building and Loan Association of this city, was at the last regular meeting of the Board of Directors elected President to fill the vacancy occasioned by the death of Z. Webster. J. F. Hubbard was also elected as vice-president, and Isaac Pangborn as one of the directors.

Our young friends, Geo. Watts and Geo. Hines, have formed a copartnership under the firm name of Watts & Hines, and opened a meat market in Cherry street, two doors from Front. Giv them a call. They sell a good article at low figures.

We note the arrival home of Samuel D. Frazee, who for some months has been traveling through Canada, selling Flagg's Relief medicines. Sam looks well and hearty. He is now prepared to receive orders for music for balls, parties, etc., the coming winter.

October 12, 1871.

We learn with sincere regret of the serious illness of our worthy townsman L. L. Compton. We trust we may soon again see his countenance among us.

The City Council of Elizabeth, donated $1,000 toward relieving the suffering citizens of Chicago. We haven't heard of our City Fathers donating anything.

The patrons of our Public School will be sorry to learn that the position of first lady teacher is for the third time vacant in less than a year, Miss Hill having just resigned her position.

October 19, 1871.

Just as we are going to press we learn that A. Berry has been elected a director in the First National Bank of Plainfield, to fill the vacancy occasioned by the death of Z. Webster, Esq. No better selection could have been made.

Heavy winter overcoats at Andrews' the Clothier, for $5.00, just received this week. If this is not as cheap as they can be bought anywhere he will give them away.

The Central Railroad have declared a quarterly dividend of 2½ per cent. payable on or after October 20. From Somerville to Jersey City the road is now nearly completed for four tracks, and the whole is being re-laid with steel rails.

During the past week there were four deaths of old residents in our city, the aggregate amount of years of whom foot up 310, as follows:—Z. Webster, 74; Mrs. Hendrickson, 75; J. L. Shotwell, 85, and Dr. John Craig, 76.

Marriage—

Probasco—Boice. In this city, on Wednesday, October 18th, in the First Baptist church, by the Rev. D. J. Yerkes, Mr. J. B. Probasco, M. D., of this city, and Miss Maria Boice, of Piscataway, N. J.

For "The Constitutionalist."

Plainfield, Oct. 16th, 1871.

Messrs. Editors:

I am glad to inform you that I have finally succeeded in negotiating with the publishers of Beecher's "Life of Jesus, The Christ," for the agencies of this city, I shall immediately commence receiving subscriptions for this work.

Very respectfully,
NOAH W. PIKE.

Statistics show that two thirds of the women in lunatic asylums are wives of farmers.

His Future in Doubt.

Church—I feel some concern about my son.

Gotham—You mean the one in college?"

"Yes; you see, they are talking of abolishing football."

"Oh, is he a football player?"

"No, but he's studying to be a surgeon."—Yonkers Statesman.

A Question of Names.

"I wish," said Mr. Crosslots, pensively, "they would give trolley cars fancy names like those Pullman sleepers."

"Why?"

"Maybe if they called the last car 'LaGrippe' it wouldn't be so hard to catch."—Washington Star.

CHOICE MEATS, FISH AND VEGETABLES.

A UNIQUE EXPERIMENT.

Boiling and Freezing Water at the Same Time.

The possibility of boiling and freezing water at the same time in the laboratory is one of the most interesting developments of modern science. The temperature at which water boils depends simply on the air pressure above its surface at the time. If there is high pressure the water has to be made a good deal hotter to boil than at low pressure.

On mountains where the air pressure is a good deal lower than at sea level water boils easily at low temperature. In cooking vegetables that require a certain degree of heat and where the water boils before that degree is reached the vegetables will not get done. They consequently have to be put into a closed boiler so that the generated steam will create enough pressure for the water to boil at or beyond the required temperature. In the experimental proof of this fact water is placed in a vessel and the air exhausted from above the surface of the water. As the process of pumping goes on the water will violently boil, the steam congealing on the sides of the exhaust vessel. If the pumping is continued long enough and the outside is cooled below the freezing point of water the water will continue to boil and bubble till it is frozen into a snowy mass of ice.

This fact is also made use of in taking a rough test of the height of a mountain. Ordinarily at sea level where the pressure is about thirty inches of mercury water boils at 212 degrees F. Now, if it is noticed that at a certain place it boils at a few degrees lower the height of that place can be easily ascertained by comparison with a table made out for this purpose. In general for every degree the boiling takes place under 212 a height of about 500 feet is counted.

Of course these principles do not apply to water alone, but are characteristic of all liquids.—New York Tribune.

FISH LOCOMOTION.

The Nature and Functions of the So Called Air Bladders.

Leaning over the parapet of some old stone breakwater or pier head and watching the fish playing about in the clear green depths below, perhaps the last thought which is likely to occur to any of us is that we are looking on at a really astonishing thing. That a fish is able to propel itself through the water in any desired direction is in no way surprising, but that it can change its level at will, rising or falling without the use of its fins, and instantly assuming a horizontal or vertical position, according to the mood or need of the moment, is a fact that a little reflection will soon develop into prime motive for wonder.

For it is clear that the fish must be able at will to vary its weight in relation to the water it displaces. When it sinks to the bottom it must have suddenly rendered itself heavier than the medium it inhabits; each time it rises to the surface like a released cork, head first, tail pointing almost vertically downward, it must not only have transformed itself into something lighter than the water, but must have become lighter in its fore parts than in its tail.

The mystery, for such it undoubtedly is on a casual survey, says the London Chronicle, resolves itself immediately we come to study the nature and functions of the so called air bladder in fishes. By this contrivance all these intricate movements of the fish are brought about.

The bladder, however, contains not air, as is commonly supposed, but gas, which is discharged or regenerated by certain organs of the fish, according to whether upward or downward movement is necessary; also either the whole length of the bladder or only its front or rear portion can be inflated. Thus the fish is able to swim level or, by altering its center of gravity, to raise or lower either head or tail at will.

Singular Services of Sheep.

In the northern part of India sheep are put to a use unthought of in European or American countries. They are made to serve as beasts of burden. The mountain paths along the foothills of the Himalayas are so precipitous that the sheep, more sure footed than larger beasts, are preferred as burden carriers. The load for each sheep is from sixteen to twenty pounds. The sheep are driven from village to village, with the wool still growing, and in each town the farmer shears as much wool as he can sell there and loads the sheep with the grain which he receives in exchange. After the flock has been sheared he turns it homeward, each sheep having on its back a small bag containing the purchased grain.

Mrs. Blockley—John, do you know that Royal Worcester vase I bought yesterday for £5? Well, they reduced them to £3 this morning. Mr. Blockley—Then you lost £2 by not waiting until this morning. Mrs. Blockley—No; only £1. I went down today and bought another for £3, making two of them average £4 each.—London Fun.

SPECIAL MAY ELECTION

Borough Council Arranges to Have Voters Decide Sewer System Problem.

G. T. ROGERS A COUNCILMAN.

Mayor Newton B. Smalley Appoints Well-known Boroughite to Fill Unexpired Term of Chas. E. Nichols.

Borough citizens will be given an opportunity to vote on the sewer question in May. It is impossible to put the matter to a public vote until sixty days after public notices have been posted. This legal requirement was fulfilled today by Borough Clerk Frederick Martin in accordance with instructions in resolutions adopted by the Borough Council last night. All of the necessary resolutions were presented to the Council and adopted unanimously.

That the great majority of property owners of the borough want a sewerage system was manifested by the gratifying report made by William J. Buttfield, chairman of the sewer commission. Mr. Buttfield stated that the names on the petitions represented real estate valued at $2,400,000 out of a total valuation of $3,800,000. Mr. Buttfield also informed the Council that the engineers would begin work next week on plans for the collecting system.

Mayor N. B. Smalley, as expected, nominated George T. Rogers to fill the unexpired term of Charles L. Nichols, resigned. The nomination of Mr. Rogers was unanimously confirmed by the Council and he will take his seat at the special meeting on Friday, March 18. Councilmanic duties will not be new to Mr. Rogers as he served in a like capacity during the first administration of Mayor Smalley.

Work on the streets will soon be started by Street Commissioner John Barrett. Mr. Waldron offered a resolution that the borough clerk be authorized to advertise in the usual manner for stone and cross walks, the bids to be opened on March 18. Mr. Waldron reported the expenses of the department for February as $56.46.

On resolution offered by Mr. Staal the following building permits were granted: Theodore Staats, dwelling, corner Duer and Howard street; N. S. Rogers, garage, on Myrtle avenue, F. L. C. Martin, dwelling, on Fairview avenue; J. P. Homan steam elevator and wagon hoist at his shop on Somerset street. As chairman of the fire committee Mr. Stahl reported expenses for February $198.29.

On the suggestion of Mayor Smalley a resolution authorizing the expenditure of $250 for extra clerk hire was passed. Tax Collector Brown's report showed that the total amount of taxes collected in February was $9,593.30 and the disbursements $6,973.98. The claims, including $6,900 school money, amounted to $12,345.22. A resolution authorizing the borough clerk to borrow $6,000 to meet expenses was adopted.

Recorder Dolliver's report show fifteen arrests and the collection of $27 in fine during February.

THE HOPS IN HOPS MADE HOPS "POLITE."

Vincent Hops go so imbued with the idea that he was a reincarnation of Chesterfield yesterday on West Front street, that he found it incumbent upon him to bow a salute to every woman who came his way. He annoyed some of them by his too polite manners, and he was gathered in by Patrolman Saffron

Hops' obsequiousness had disappeared this morning when he faced Judge Runyon in court. In fact, he could not remember doing anything out of the common. Hops confessed to having drunk beer freely yesterday, but insisted he was not drunk. Judge Runyon had a different opinion and fine Mr. Hops five dollars.

Surprise for Miss Johns.

Friends to the number of sixty joined in a surprise for Miss Aletta P. Johns on Thursday evening, at her home on Duer street. Piano, violin and mandolin selections were rendered by Miss Elizabeth Voorhees, John King, Clark Hammell and Philip Frowery. Songs were sung by Miss Ida Quinn, John King and William Mathews.

Charged Against Webley Dismissed.

The case of Dora Graves against Cornelius Webley, whom the woman accused of assault, was dismissed this morning by Judge Runyon as Miss Graves failed to put in an appearance.

Get Your License.

All city licenses, except those for the liquor business, may be obtained at police headquarters on Monday morning between 9 and 12 o'clock.

FISK JUBILEE SINGERS AT CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH

A large audience greeted the Fiske Jubilee Quartet at the Congregational church last night and gave them a cordial greeting. The entertainment was given under the auspices of the Men's Club of the church, and was delightful from beginning to end. The quartet, composed of J. W. Work, first tenor; J. A. Myers, second tenor and elocutionist; A. G. King, first bass, and W. W. Ryder, second bass, gave enough sympathetic and heart reaching interpretations of negro melodies as to awaken the emotion of everyone in the audience. The old songs, like "Old Black Joe," "Swanee River," "Hallelu' Li'l' David," "Another Witness for the Lord," were sung with a fidelity of darky expression that reminded one of New Orleans and the levee, only it was much more effective musically. Classical music as it all was there came into the program an anthem, which no church choir would attempt to sing unaccompanied and minus the score. Yet Nevins' great anthem, "Remember Thy Creator," chiefly remarkable for its quaint minor subtleties was sung beautifully by these men. This composition evoked the greatest applause of the evening.

Mr. Myers, who rendered several of Paul Lawrence Dunbar's poems captivated the audience at his first essay and his reciting of "Two Li'l' Boots," brought tears to many eyes. Taken altogether the entertainment was an exceptionally fine one. The quartet were libral in responding to encores.

CRUSADE ON AGAINST CIRCULAR DISTRIBUTORS

Chief Weiss, of the borough, is enforcing to the letter the ordinance which prohibits the indiscriminate distribution of circulars and advertising matter in the streets of that municipality. There was a roundup of two squads of distributors in court this morning. Sentence was suspended in the cases of Charles Schenck, Harold Rockfellow and George Buss in one squad while a two dollar fine was inflicted on Ernest Banks, the leader.

In another company of three who were arrested for the same offense John Kennedy and William Billings were each fined one dollar, while Fred Stewart, their manager, was fined two dollars.

E. Brancatti, of West Third street, also appear before Recorder Dolliver, charged by Chief Weiss, with riding his bicycle on the sidewalk. Brancatti entered a plea of not guilty and his trial was put over until Monday.

EVANGELISTIC SERVICES AT THE TEMPLE CHURCH

The evangelistic services which were continued at the Temple Baptist church, last night, were largely attended. The subject of Rev. L. Judson Westfall's address was "The Master's Mission," and the text was taken from Luke 19:10: "The son of man is come to seek and to save that which is lost."

The speaker said that this verse is almost as important as John 3:16 in revealing the love of God to man. Man in his natural state is at enimity with God and is lost. There is only one way of redemption, namely, through the power and love of Christ. Christ is the mediator between God and man and is anxious to reconcile the wayward children of men to their Heavenly Father.

The hymns, "My Mother's Prayer," and "Walk in the Narrow Way," were effectively sung by Rev. and Mrs. C. E. Lewis and daughter, Mrs. Allen E Beals. There will be no meeting tonight. The special meetings will continue next week every night except Saturday.

The Epworth League of the First M. E. church, had an enjoyable entertainment and social in Vincent chapel, last night. There were nearly one hundred young people present. The affair was arranged and in charge of Miss Helen Whitney, while Miss Ethel Prior had charge of the serving of refreshments.

The program comprised several selections by the Temple Quartet; vocal solos by Miss Jane Bailey; piano duets by the Misses Anna and Ray Warnock; recitations by Miss Mamie Breeds; piano solos by Miss Jubilee Rowley, and concluded with a selection by the orchestra. Refreshments were then served and a social time enjoyed.

ANOTHER WILL OFFERED

Coddington Springs Surprise on Caveators' Counsel in Holton Will Contest.

THE HEARING ADJOURNED.

Judge Schenck It is Expected Will Order Testament Admitted to Probate Monday.

Former Judge William A. Coddington, who with former Congressman Alvah A. Clark, of Somerville, is counsel for the executors of the Mary E. Holton will, sprung a big surprise on the counsel for the caveators, Harry C. Runyon and Azariah Beekman, yesterday at the continued hearing of testimony given in the case before Judge Lewis H. Schenck, in the Orphan's Court at Somerville, by placing in evidence a will drawn by Judge Coddington for the late Miss Holton about six years ago. The lawyers for relatives were hit with such force that they asked for an adjournment until Monday The requistion was granted.

Dr. P. J. Zeglio and Miss Nellie Arnold, of the borough, and Mrs. Zeptha Van Fleet, of Newark, gave testimony. Dr. Zeglio declared that Miss Holton's mind was delirious at times before her death. Her last testament was drawn by Reuben Knox, and it was shown that it was practically the same as the one drawn by Judge Coddington years ago. This was true, save for some minor bequests made in the later will.

The first will which was drawn by Judge Coddington and contained almost the same provisions as the one executed on May 5 by Mr. Knox, as stated, bequeathed about $65,000 of the estate to the American Baptist Missionary Society.

It is generally expected that at the hearing on Monday Judge Schenck will dismiss the caveat and order the surogate to admit the later will to probate as requested by Judge Coddington.

Mr. Bache, who was a New York merchant, resided on East Ninth street. He secured a position in Kansas, and had his goods packed in a freight car ready for shipment, when numerous creditors heard of his his intended "flight" and had attachments issue. Mr. Bache wrote to Mr. Stutsman, his counsel, explaining that as soon as possible he would settle all claims, which he has done.

HABITUAL DRUNKARD GETS 160 DAYS IN JAIL

One of the heaviest sentences ever imposed on a drunkard in the city court was that handed out to John Callahan this morning by Judge William N. Runyon. A fine of one hundred dollars and confinement in the county jail for a term of sixty days, was the sentence and in event of the fine not being paid Callahan will have to serve one day for each dollar.

Callahan was warned by the judge on his last appearance in court that the fine and imprisonment would follow another appearance in court on the same charge, but he apparently is not able to resist the appetite for liquor. He has been arrested times innumerable and on each occasion has had the sympathy of the court and has made promises of reform which he has not kept. Judge Runyon's patience became exhausted at the time of Callahan's last appearance, but gave the poor fellow one more chance to reform. But he just couldn't let the "booze" alone.

FUNERAL SERVICES OF CHAS. H. SCHERMERHORN

The funeral service of Charles Hill Schermerhorn was held yesterday afternoon at 1 o'clock from the home of Mr. and Mrs. William A. Woodruff, on East Second street, and was largely attended by relatives and friends, including James N. Worl, of Westfield, who taught Mr. Schermerhorn telegraphy. There was a large number of beautiful floral tributes.

Rev. Dr. J. S. Zelie, of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church, conducted the service, assisted by Rev. Mr. Francis, of Elizabeth, the latter being an old friend of the family. During the service Miss Marion Cromwell, of Cranford, sang a selection.

The various societies of which Mr. Schermerhorn was a member were represented, including the Old Timers' Telegraph Association, and the Masons. The burial was in Hillside Cemetery and the pall-bearers were Frank and Edward Neal, Abram Schermerhorn, Sr., Abram Schermerhorn, Jr., Fred Work and Joseph Dunham.

SUPT. GEORGE H. BATCHELOR SUCCEEDED BY J. E. CHURCH.

George H. Batchelor, who has been superintendent of the First Baptist church Sunday-school for the past eight years, resigned last night, and James E. Church was elected to fill the position. Mr. Batchelor retires because of a pressure of business duties which will not permit him to give his time to the work. He will, however, retain his interest in the school which he has served so faithfully. Mr. Church has had a wide experience in Sunday-school work, and is now superintendent of the State Home department association.

The other officers chosen for the year follow:

Associate superintendents Frank W. Jones, Harold Serrell, Mrs. Louis T. Matlack; primary superintendent, Mrs. J. A. Powlison; superintendent beginners, Miss Mary White; superintendent junior department, Arthur M. Harris; secretary, J. D. Macnab; treasurer, Fred A. Armstrong; librarian, Louis T. Matlack.

Annual reports from the missionary, finance committees and the treasurer as well as Miss Laura J. Runyon, superintendent of the Home department were received. The treasurer's report showed a balance of $314.58. The other reports were encouraging. It was decided to hold the annual excursion to Asbury Park this summer and the date will be announced later.

Additional room is needed for the beginners' department and the trustees of the church will take up this improvement with a committee from the Sunday school, the plan being to build an addition about twenty feet square in the rear of the church for that department. The average attendance of the school as well as the membership is increasing.

WANT TO CHANGE THE NAME OF DUER STREET

Mayor Smalley called the attention of the Borough Council last night to a petition being circulated among property owners on Duer street, suggesting that the name of the thoroughfare be changed to North Madison avenue. The mayor said that he had been requested to bring the matter before the Council by interested parties.

A number of citizens living on that thtroughfare, he said, were desirous of having the name of the street changed as Duer street is a continuation of Madison avenue and considerable confusion reigns among expressmen in the delivery of packages and out-of-town people who have occasion to visit the borough. The mayor entertained the opinion if the change was made these little troubles would be eliminated and everybody concerned benefited. He said he believed it would also be a benefit also to people residing in the city.

Councilman Stahl reported that the petition is in circulation and that it would be ready for submission to the Council at its next meeting on March 18. Walter Linbarger is securing signatures to the petition.

In the matter of street names Mr. Buttfield called the attention of the Council that a mistake had been made on the borough maps in designating Tappin avenue. The street was named after the Tappin estate, but on the borough maps the name is miss-spelled, "Tappan." The borough clerk was authorized to correct the mistake.

STARCK, BIG BULLY, BUMPS INTO JUSTICE

Carl Starck, twenty-three years old, was fined twenty dollars this morning by Judge William Runyon in the city court, for assault. Sylvio Velardo, an Italian, was the victim. Velardo's left eye was bruised and cut by a blow from Starck's fist yesterday afternoon. Starck was making a beautiful story out of his side of the question when James Finnerty stepped up to Judge Runyon and said he had seen the assault and heard the conversation between Starck and Peter Udel, in which the former said that he was going to "break the —— guinea's face," or words to that effect.

Preceding the actual assault, according to Mr. Finnerty, Udel had asked Velardo for the price of a drink and when this was refused some bad feeling was engendered. Evidently Starck thought that by intimidating Velardo, he could force him to produce the necessary money for a thirst quencher, but as Velardo did not care to have anything to do with them the assault was decided upon.

Velardo denied having used any of the vile language attributed to him by Starck, and as the Italian has always borne the best of reputations, Judge Runyon decided that Starck was guilty as charged and imposed the fine Starck bears the reputation of always looking for trouble and one of his pet hobbies is to shove people off the sidewalk and otherwise annoy those who are smaller than himself. It is said that he has even gone so far as to take boxing lessons from a local teacher of the manly art in order to make himself even more formidable. Perhaps the lesson of this morning will have the effect of making this big bully confine himself to those of his own class in the future. At least that is what Judge Runyon hopes.

Freeholders Consider Tuberculosis.

The committee from the Board of Freeholders, of which J. Hervey Doane, of this city, is chairman, held a conference yesterday at Elizabeth with representatives from the Elizabeth Tuberculosis Society, relative to taking up county tuberculosis work. Dr. Greer, of Elizabeth, acted as chairman for the society. Mr. Doane called another meeting for Friday March 18, at Elizabeth. At that time physicians from all parts of the county will be present and speak on the subject.

Plainfield Elks Win.

Plainfield took two out of three games from Newark in an Elks' League series on Campbell's alleys last night. The series was devoid of any sensational work by either team, the finest performance of the evening being executed by the locals in the initial clash when the visitors were taken into camp by the score of 915 to 824. In this game Blatz registered a score of 215.

Mrs. Charles H. Schermerhorn has gone to Trenton, where until April 1 she will visit her sister-in-law, Mrs. Thomas S. Wiley, 347 Olden avenue. After April 1 she will reside at 128 Watchung avenue, corner of Second street.

TO AWAIT EXTRADITION

Frederick Lewis, Alleged Embezzler, is Held in $5,000 Bonds.

AMOUNT INVOLVED IS $40,000.

Henriques Family Faced Starvation Because of Crime, Says Widow Who Appeared At Hearing Today.

Frederick Lewis, the alleged embezzler of $12,900 from the Henriques estate in New York, was arraigned this morning before City Judge William N. Runyon and bail fixed at $5,000. He will be held pending the honoring of extradition papers by Governor Fort. Robert newton Crane appeared for the prisoner while Assistant Prosecutor Walter Hetfield, Jr., looked after the interests of the New York authorities.

Mrs. Florence Henriques, of 343 St. Nicholas avenue, New York appeared in court this morning, but was not called upon to do anything but identify Lewis. In an interview after the hearing Mrs. Henriques declared that the amount of the indictment does not begin to cover the actual amount with which Lewis absconded. She said the original estate amounted to four times the amount on which the indictment was found and because of the embezzlement the other members of the family had been reduced to absolute penury, several of them having had to accept charity, one sister going to an asylum for the poor and blind while others have wanted many times for bread. At least one of the younger members of the family has starved to death.

Mrs. Henriques was bitter in her denunciation of the man whom she avers has wrecked what was once one of the most comfortably situated of the old Spanish families in New York. When Lewis took charge of the estate as trustee there was something like forty thousand dollars clear for the use of the family, but when he left for parts unknown last June not a vestige of the money or property was left. It is the old tale of misplaced confidence. Lewis, it is alleged, secured his influence with the elder Henriques by false or forged credentials, this discovery having been made after his disappearance.

In court this morning Lewis asked the judge for permission to make a statement which was granted only to be cut short by a question by Mr. Hetfield, who wanted to know why, if he were innocent of the crime with which he was charged, he did not return to New York and face his accusers. The old man, he is seventy-three years old, had no reply to this question ready, but in his remarks declared that the estate was indebted to him for moneys loaned before and since the alleged defalcation. Mrs. Henriques' lips curled in contempt at the old rogue's story (she called him an old rogue) and afterwards said that he was altogether unprincipled and ought to be made to restore what he had stolen.

Lewis must still possess some money, as he has hired Professor James Finnerty, the physical culture artist, to stay with him while he is under restrain at police headquarters. Unless bail is furnished by next Monday Lewis will be taken to Elizabeth to await his extradition to New York. Lewis has a son and daughter living in New York, but his wife died some time ago. He is a white haired, gentle, benevolent looking man, straight as an Indian and of commanding figure, and while being sized up by a curious crowd this morning only betrayed his emotion by a constant shifting of his eyes and an occasional shrug of the shoulders.

Counsellor Crane made a plea for low bail in the case, but Mr. Hetfield opposed him believeing, as he said, that if a small amount were set the old man would effect a getaway and leave his bondsmen to foot the bill. Detective Lieutenant Russo accompanied Mrs. Henriques from New York this morning and will stay here to await the papers needed to take Lewis to the city.

DUNELLEN AND VICINITY.

The Borough Council will hold a secret session tonight for the purpose of discussing the application of the Public Service Corporation to establish two switches in the borough, the proposed location of one to be in the center of the town. Mayor Sanford has repeatedly declared that he is opposed to this plan and favors the laying of double tracks. It is no secret that the Council is divided on the matter and tonight's session is expected to develop into a red hot meeting. Whatever course is decided on will be made known at the regular meeting of the Council on Monday night. Since the news became known that the Council is to hold a star chamber proceeding tonight a number of citizens have registered some hard kicks. One citizen said to a Daily Press reporter yesterday: "This is a public affair and the citizens are entitled to know what is going on. It's discourteous on the part of the mayor and councilmen to their constituents to cut and dry the question at a secret session. There will be some fun over it all yet."

At the First Baptist church tomorrow night several candidates for membership will be baptized by the Rev. George H. Gardner. At the morning service the subject of Mr. Gardner's sermon will be "Pearls."

The Sacrament of the Lord's Supper will be celebrated in the Methodist and Presbyterian churches tomorrow morning. New members will be received at each service.

Mrs. C. D. Oakley successfully underwent an operation for appendicitis at Muhlenberg Hospital yesterday. The operation was performed by Drs. Endicott and Platt.

"True Sabbath Keeping" was the topic of an interesting sermon preached by the Rev. Henry N. Jordan at the Seventh Day Baptist church this morning.

Charles Wrage has been awarded the contract to erect two houses for Abner S. Coriell on Front street.

Mrs. A. E. Curtis has been entertaining her sister, Mrs. Loverne Clark, of Brookfield.

St. John's choir has started rehearsals for the Easter musical program.

SOMERVILLE.

Geoffrey O'Hara, of Bound Brook, has been engaged to take charge of the music of the Second Reformed church after May 1.

Miss Perkins, of Utica, has been the guest for several days of Miss Elizabeth Galpin.

C. E. Bertram has moved from the J. T. Dunn farm at North Branch to Green Knoll.

Mrs. Guy Noble has been entertaining Miss Deborah Carle, of Neshanic.

Mrs. Harry Brokaw is spending the week with friends at Flatbush, Long Island.

Mr. and Mrs. James Q. Ten Eyck have returned from their Florida trip.

PRISONERS FED FOR LESS THAN 10C DAILY.

New Brunswick, March 5.—William Donomore, who has the contract for feeding the prisoners at the Middlesex county jail, submitted his report to the Board of Freeholders Thursday afternoon. It showed the cost for the month ending February 28 to have been $151.50. The total number of meals served was 4,672; the average number served daily was 167 and the average number of persons served daily being fifty-six. Mr Donomore figures out the average cost of feeding a day to be $5.41 and the average cost for each person daily to be $.0966.

The rations were served as follows: Morning—Bread and coffee; noon, meat and potatoes; evening, bread and coffee.

"I have also occasionally given the women prisoners a little sugar and milk," he reports.

The report gives the amount paid for provisions and an idea of what sort of food is consumed by the jail inmates. Here is what was eaten there during February:

Eight hundred and forty-seven pounds of fresh meat, at 6 cents a pound; 1,292 large loaves of bread, at 5 cents; 70 pounds of coffee, at 10 cents; 18 bushels of potatoes, at 40 cents; 5 bushels of turnips, at 40 cents; 125 pounds of beans, at 4½ cents; 15¾ pounds of salt pork, at 16 cents; 2 pounds of bacon, at 24 cents; 42 pounds of salt pork, at 13 cents; one-third case of milk, at $1.58; 33 pounds of sugar, costing $1.75; 4½ pounds pepper, at 16 cents; half sack onions, at $1; 78 pounds salt, at 74 cents.

Mr. Donomore gets $1,000 a year and the county pays for the food. Former Warden Charles Rogers got $1.90 a week for each man's food

The freeholders decided to start an inspection of the county roads and bridges next Monday. A new bridge is to be built at Plainsboro. A delegation from Deans complained to the board of the condition of the Franklin Park-Deans road which had not been completed by the contractors last year and was hardly passible. The road committee will consider the matter.

Director Gibson, of the Somerset county board, asked the co-operation of the Middlesex board in completing the county road from Franklin Park and Little Rocky Hill, a distance of five and a half miles. This road is in both counties. Director Frederick Hendricks, of the Middlesex board, assured Mr. Gibson of favorable action by this board.

Mrs. O. C. Moore, 57 Manning avenue, Plainfield, N. J., says: 'Though I have had no occasion o tuse Doan's Kidney Pills in the past few years, I value them as highly as ever. My kidneys were weak for years and I suffered severely from backache. I was unable to sleep well and when I arose in the morning, my limbs were so stiff and sore that I could hardly get out of bed. Every cold I caught settled in my kidneys and aggravated my suffering. I doctored but the medicines I used did me no good. At length I heard of Doan's Kidney Pills and procuring a supply at Randolph's Pharmacy, I began taking them. They went directly to the seat of my trouble, disposing of the pains and making me feel like a different person."

JERSEY LEADS WORLD FOR ROAD BUILDING

Director L. W. Page, of the office of public roads of the department of agriculture at Washington, said in a letter to State Road Commissioner Gilkyson yesterday regarding the specifications here drawn for roads under which the State is working: "I do not think I am far wrong in saying that these are the most intelligent State specifications I have ever seen."

The letter is the sequel to the recent visits of State Supervisor of Roads Robert A. Meeker, of this city, and State Chemist R. B. Gage to Washington last week, by invitation of the Federal government, to go over a standard specification for all kinds of roads, and the Jersey road has been accepted as standard by the Federal government.

Messrs. Meeker and Gage went down there and spent several days in the most complete laboratory in the world for making tests of cement, stone and bituminous materials for roads. In fact, so complete and famous is this department that the English government has sent specimens there to be tested, preferring the opinion of the Washington authorites to those nearer home.

In view of the fame of this testing plant the compliment to Commissioner Gilkyson on the Jersey sepcifications is apparent.

MUCH WORK IS DONE ON THE STATE ROADS

State Road Commissioner Gilgyson, in his report to Governor Fort, telling of the constructed and maintenance of the roads of the State, speaks of the good highways throughout the State, and particularly in Mercer county.

The commissioner refers to a strip of twenty-two one-hundredths miles of the Crosswicks road, which was built at a cost of $2,222.95, one-third of which, $740.98, was borne by the State from the moneys appropriated for road building and repairs.

Referring generally to the work done last year, over 52 miles of improved roads were constructed, at a cost of $507,914. Up to the close of the fiscal year on October 31, the total amount paid out on contracts from the 1909 appropriation, was $174,443, and the amount paid to supervisors, $19,562, a total of $194,005. There was a balance due, against which contracts were filed on October 29, of $105,994. The appropriation for the year was $300,000, so that with the contracts filed against it, it was all used.

The report further says that during the past year we have built 70 miles of bituminous macadam roads, and have in course of construction 31 additional miles. These roads have been the subject of the most favorable comment by many eminent authorities on road construction, and unquestionably New Jersey is as far advanced in modern road building as any State in the union, and in addition, has a greater mileage of bituminous roads than any other State.

The Lord's Supper will be observed at the First Baptist church tomorrow morning.

PETITION FOR NEW BRIDGE.

Elizabeth, March 5.—The Union County Board of Freeholders Thursday afternoon took action on the appeals of owners of industrial plants along the water front south of the Elizabeth river that a new bridge be erected across that stream at its mouth on motion of Freeholder Thos. F. Haviland. A committee of five was appointed to inspect the condition of the present structure and report at the next meeting as to the necessity of building a new bridge.

Director Cady appointed as the special committee Haviland, Meisel, of Springfield; Wilbur, of Plainfield; Crane, of Union, and Jensen, of Elizabeth.

The South Front street bridge is the most important one in Elizabeth, as it is the connecting link between Elizabeth and all the factories along Staten Island Sound to Tremley Point. The present structure was built forty years ago, when there was no industry south of the river. It is now considered unsafe for heavy trucking over it.

Eloped With Trentonian.

Nazareth, Pa., March 5.—Miss Marie Beck, daughter of Granville Beck, of this place, left home mysteriously last Saturday and Thursday her father received a postal card which read: "Happily married. Marie." The card was postmarked at Plainfield, Mass. Miss Beck had eloped with Walter Slack, of Trenton, N. J., now employed at Syracuse, whom she met while he was a student at Lehigh University. The couple wanted to get married a year ago.

SPORTS HERE AND THERE

GOLF.

The desire to keep all who enter for a tournament in the game for the entire three or four days has led to a curious increase in the prize list. Those deefated in the first rounds of each sixteen start again for "beaten eight" cups, which leads in turn to cups for the "beaten fours." The system of qualifying in sets of sixteen for tournament cups has but one fault—a player of class who by ill fortune has a poor medal score will get into a set where he is an easy winner, a lexiathian among minnows. There are instances of this dropping down having been by intention. The methods to nullify this state of things have their odd side. At many places the first sixteen is for players rated from scratch to eight strokes, the second for those from nine to seventeen and so on. A player, no matter how poorly he brings up in the qualifying round, cannot join in a sixteen below his handicap class. On the other hand, a player, with a high handicap who scores unexpectedly well must play out his hand, even though it brings him into the first sixteen.

After having been flooded with more than one hundred applications for the job of golf professional, the Richmond County Country Club has decided to go across the seas for a man. Willie Fernie, Jr., of Tronn, will be the Richmond County "pro.," and he is expected to reach these shores in the near future. Fernie is the son of the redoubtable Willie Fernie, who once won the open championship title of Great Britain.

Easter time will see the amateurs unusually active down at the Palmetto Golf Club. The principal event will be the Southern Cross championship, which was won a year ago by Robert C. Watson, of New York, secretary of the United States Golf Association. He will defend his title, while others entered are Fred Herreshoff, E. M. Byers and Findlay S. Douglas.

N. Y. AMUSEMENTS.

Some New York critics affect to believe that they have discovered "the new" Ethel Barrymore. By this they mean a powerful, emotional actress of the first rank. The discovery dates from her appearance at the Empire theatre, January 31, in Sir Arthur W. Pinero's new play, "Mid-Channel." Her "Zoe Blundell," in this strong, relentless portrayal of life in London's "smart set," is unquestionably her greatest achievement thus far. Perhaps it is too soon to apply superlatives to her art, but "Zoe Blundell" indicates that the time is not far away when she will compel them. And yet, (the critics to the contrary notwithstanding) to those who have followed Miss Barrymore's career with attention, "Zoe Blundell" comes without surprise. There is to them no discovery of a "new" Ethel Barrymore.

Maxine Elliott, most beautiful and most photographed of stage favorites has made the statement that personal beauty is an actress' "fifth wheel." Miss Elliott was interviewed in her dressing room at Daly theatre, New York, where she is enjoying the success of her career in her jolly nautical play, "The Inferior Sex," and said that a pretty face to an actress is as a fifth wheel to a wagon—perfectly useless. "The successful actresses, in most cases, are not the pretty women," she said. "It is very rare, indeed, to find success in mere beauty. When I first appeared on the stage I had the ill luck to be announced as a beauty. A beauty on the stage creates a sense of disappointment unless she does something."

"A Son of the People," at the New theatre next Friday night, was produced abroad under the title of "The Revolutionary Wedding," and made an enormous hit. It was then translated into German, and later from German into English by Stephen Ivor Szinnyey. It is a story of the French Revolution. In brief, the story is that of Ernest, an Emigre who flees from France and takes service under foreign flags, but returns to join the last rally of the broken Royalist forces attracted by the treachery of the Jacobin leader, Dumouriez. Ernest is in love with Alaine, a beautiful French woman, and is captured in her house on his wedding night by Marc-Arron, a Revolutionary leader. To save her lover, a weak and vascilating young man, Alaine makes love to Marc-Arron, agreeing to "pay the price" for Ernest's freedom. In reality she falls in love with Marc-Arron who liberates Ernest and is shot for so doing.

SOME STATE NEWS BRIEFS

The spring convention of the Cumberland County W. C. T. U. will be held at Greenwich on April 27.

The contractor who has the contract to erect the new government building at Bridgeton has been directed to have the work completed by June 30 next.

Pleading guilty to violating the excise laws in selling rare old Italian wine to customers at his cigar store, Marinilli Solmegelli was fined $25 in the Camden Crimnal Court Thursday.

Susan Geist, sixteen years old, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. August Geist, of 83 Wayne street, Jersey City, has mysteriously disappeared. The police have been asked to institute a search for her.

So weak that she could scarcely stand Mrs. Alexander Voleden asked Recorder Stackhouse in Camden not to be too harsh with her husband whom she accused of assault and battery. He was committed in default of $300 bail.

Thomas B. Nuttall, rear-commodore of the Atlantic City Yacht Club, has been appointed harbor-master of the Inlet, Atlantic City, by State Inland Waterway Commissioner Scheider, to give an official head to the management of vessels entering the Inlet.

The Jersey City Woman's Club at the annual meeting Thursday, reelected Mrs. Daniel Ven Winukle president for the third time. The other officers chosen were Mrs. Joseph A. Dear, second vice-president; Mrs. Eston K. May, recording secretary, and Mrs. Augustus Creveling, treasurer.

A jury in the Camden Criminal Court yesterday acquitted Edward Hutchinson, John Sullivan and Mathew Egner of a charge of assaulting and robbing Joel G. Cross, a former Camden justice of the peace, at Gloucester on December 11 last. Claiming that he was robbed of $27 and his watch and then thrown into a horse trough. Cross was not certain of the identity of the defendants, and but little time was required to find in favor of the accused men.

After working on the case for more than two months, the Trenton police Thursday made a formal complaint against Frederick Sharp, an automobile manufacturer of that city, charging him with exceeding the speed limit and driving without a license at the time his car ran down and injured the little daughter of William F. Yard. The case was investigated by the State motor vehicle department, but owing to the conflicting testimony no formal complaint was made against Sharp.

Justice Reed, of the Supreme Court, Thursday announced a decision in favor of Samuel Walker and Frederick W. Dounelly, of Trenton, in the $10,000 damage suit instituted against them by the Trenton Water Power Company because they operated motor launches in the water power canal between Trenton and Scudder's Falls, in the Delaware river. Logs placed across the stream by the company had been destroyed by dynamite and the company's right to maintain a dam in the water had been questioned.

JERSEY JUSTICELESS FOR A NIGHT, MAYBE.

Trenton, March 5.—For one night next week there may not be a judge of any court of record within the State of New Jersey. This possibility will occur because of the dinner of the Alumni Association of the New York University Law School at the Hotel Astor next Thursday evening. Every justice of the Supreme Court, the chancellor, all of the vice-chancellors, the United States Court judges and the Circuit Court judges in New Jersey have accepted invitations to the dinner.

Should all of these guests attend there will not be in New Jersey a judge who can grant an injunction, allow a certiorari or rule to show cause or perform any of the other functions pertaining to the higher courts of the State. This condition will be almost unprecedented, though there is, of course, little likelihood that any occasion will arise seriously requiring the presence of any of the various courts.

The guests of honor will be Governor Frank B. Weeks and the bench of Connecticut. In addition to Governor Weeks several Supreme Court justices of Connecticut have accepted invitations to attend the dinner: Joel H. Reed, William H. Williams, Lucian F. Burpee, William L. Bennett, Edwin B. Gager, Howard J. Curtis, Milton A. Shumway and Gardiner Greene.

The speakers will be Governor Fort, of New Jersey, Governor Weeks, of Connecticut; Mayor Gaynor, of New York; Judge Samuel D. Schmucker, of the Maryland Court of Appeals; Judge Edwin B. Gager, of the Superior Court of Connecticut; former President J. J. Vineyard, of the Kansas City Bar Association; Judge Howard A. Davis, of the Philadelphia Court of Common Pleas, and Joseph L. Barbour, representing the bar of Connecticut.

Miss Ruth Weldon, of the Trenton Normal School, who has been practice teaching in the borough schools, has returned.

STREET NAMES CONFUSING.

It is not at all strange that Duer street property owners should petition the North Plainfield Council to change the name of that thoroughfare to North Madison avenue, inasmuch as it is a continuation of Madison avenue beyond the city line. The only strange part of it is that a movement in that direction has been so long deferred. Not alone does this apply to Duer street. The same confusing condition exists in many other sections in both city and borough.

For instance in the city, South avenue is but a continuation of East Fifth street, the change in name being at Richmond street. Grant avenue runs through to West Front street, but from there to the city-borough dividing line it is West End avenue. In the borough, one thoroughfare running east from Somerset street, is known as Jackson avenue and running west it is Park place. Craig place runs west from Somerset street and to the east it is called Pearl street and a little further on Orchard park. Other such conditions exist in both city and borough.

More unusual it is that there should be two thoroughfares bearing the same name. There is a Jackson avenue in the city and there is a Jackson avenue in the borough; a Columbia avenue in the city and a Columbia avenue in the borough; a Grandview avenue in the city and a Grandview avenue in the borough; a Jefferson avenue in the city and a Jefferson avenue in the borough, and a Union street in the city and a Union street in the borough.

Considering the city and borough as a whole, there is still another strange condition that causes annoyance to the postoffice and confusion to the stranger. We have Cedar street and Cedar avenue; Washington street, Washington avenue; Sycamore street, Sycamore avenue; Prospect street, Prospect avenue and Prospect place; Central street, Central avenue; Rockview avenue, Rockview terrace; Elm street, Elm place; Arlington avenue, Arlington place; Somerset street, Somerset place; Compton avenue, Compton alley; Orchard avenue, Orchard place and Orchard park; Franklin avenue, Franklin place; Marion street, Marion place; St. Mary's avenue, St. Mary's place and South street and South avenue. Worse still, we have Park place, Park avenue, Park terrace and Park lane.

Why should such a condition be allowed to exist when there are so many appropriate names that might be chosen for our beautiful thoroughfares. To rid the city and borough of the confusion caused by present titles, could not the names of the Presidents or of the States, for instance, be adopted. Some such solution could be agreed upon by the proper authorities of the two municipalities and we suggest that the matter for their early consideration.

Plain Field Notes and Queeries

By Druid

Did anyone notice, would anyone condescend to notice, the paragraph in the New York papers a few days ago about a reception given by a prominent family in Brooklyn in honour of a distinguished guest? The name of the guest is Emma Scarborough Jerrybanks Du Boise. Honours of this kind go pretty cheaply nowadays but this one was richly earned by twenty-one years of faithful skilled service as cook in the house of Mr. George F. Elliott, of Clermont avenue. The honours are even in the case. Not the family only but their friends joined in the tribute and gave it an extra substantial value. We hear the perpetual wailings of the rich over the alleged scarcity of good servants. We know the pitable prejudice against negro servants. If every household mistress and the young folks would but follow the example of the Elliotts in their dealings with their negro cook—which is simply following the golden rule in spirit and in act—this humiliating exhibition of failure would soon end. Domestic service in good families is a good fortune to the servant and a good test of practical goodwill in households. May it become the rule

In the course of a lengthy talk in his office a good many years ago, the late Col. Ingersoll surprised the present writer by a vigorous, almost violent, expression of his patriotic contempt of England and her doings We were discussing the then conspicuous prejudice against things English, which has at last changed into an almost slavish adoption of her fashions in dress, sports, games, books, habits, accent, slang, and certain admirable reforms. The newspapers then gave very little space to English news, though reprinting its intellectual output as liberally as they do now. But how different today. The Sun actually gave about four columns the other day to the opening of Parliament, reporting the proceedings as fully as a London paper, and we were reading it here within twelve hours of the event. This makes an impressive comment on the sagacity of the voluble orator's outburst that day—"If I owned the New York Herald I wouldn't print one damned line of English news or anything else English! What do we want with England? What do we care for England? When I was over there, wherever I went I was made to feel I was sitting below the salt." It was amusing, more so than his funny stories, and we parted more cordially than we had met.

This incident is recalled by a column in last Sunday's Times. It is headed, "New field found for moving pictures; scientists expect valuable results from photographing chemical processes." Then it adds, "Already used in Europe." It reports that the N. Y. Board of Education gave a demonstration of films, showing test tubes, greatly enlarged, of silver wire in the process of being dissolved by nitric acid; "the action of aqua regia on metallic gold; the electrolysis of water," and other such wonders of science, doubtless familiar to every small schoolboy in this super-educated community but of which I am utterly and gratefully ignorant. They also showed the house-fly laying its eggs "in unsavory places, there you saw the eggs developing into a heap of wriggling maggots," and so on.

The curious thing, however, is the remark which follows the above "These films were merely samples of what is done abroad, and are not at all the best done in this line, but merely the best yet attainable in the United States, for the scientific end has been much more thoroughly developed in Europe."

* * *

In speaking of this there is not the slightest element of unfriendliness, but simply a desire to let readers, and young students generally, know that there are very many matters which the papers not only do not let them know, but often minimize or colour their accounts of what is reported. Twenty years ago perhaps 50,000 tourists went to Europe. They did practically nothing, on their return, to correct wrong impressions of England. Now that there are nearer 250,000 trippers, even our children are gaining truer knowledge if its leadership in most of the greater movements of progress. They should learn this from their schoolbooks first, if matter-of-fact history is useful knowledge. Quite thirty years ago there were public entertainments over there in which stereopticons showed us a drop of stagnant water in a little tank, and the microscopic lens treated us to the sight of a six-foot tank, with monstrous snakes, elephants, sea serpants, giant tadpoles, etc., all aweiggling in agony as the intense heat of the lamp was boiling them alive, and as they died they shot up to the surface of the water, which of course was actually the bottom to which they dropped. As a lad I saw electric sparks fly from the generator—the biggest at that date—across a large platform with a loud slap and strike a plate of brass held by the inventor. "We have not had those films over here," said Mr. Collier to the Education Board, "and will not until there is a demand."

Last Sunday's World gave the portraits of three "Inventors and designers of a new turbine engine," which is to revolutionize the construction of the U. S. navy. They are George Westinghouse, the famous inventor and maker of electric and other machines; Admiral Melville, retired, and John H. Macalpine, "his hard-headed Scotch associate," the civil engineer. Everyone has read or heard of the wonderful turbine engines which were put into the Mauretania, the Lusitania, and other giant steamers some years ago. Perhaps everyone has not been informed that these adaptation of the turbine principle to ships was invented, completed, and installed by Charles Algernon Parsons, after years of perseverance and the expenditure of a goodly fortune. He happens to be the fourth son of the third Earl of Rosse, himself a practical engineer of the unpretentious kind as to dress and manner. His elder brother, the present Earl, has been Chancellor of Dublin University since 1885, and his grandfather built the famous great telescope known by his name, on his Irish estate; it long remained the largest in the world. These three eminent Americans only claim to have invented an improvement in Parson's invention, but it is the habit to glorify followers as if they were pioneers nowadays. Rosse is not the only name in the House of Lords distinguished in science, scholarship and practical business.

THE FORUM.

Editor, The Daily Press:

In view of the fact that the citizens of Plainfield must soon consider a solution of the water question I have been much interested in the discussion of a similar question now going on in Denver, Colorado. The franchise of the Denver Union Water Company expires soon and courses of action are proposed for the city: to buy the plant, to renew the franchise or to build new water works

Denver is an uncommonly progressive, public-spirited and wide-awake city. It publishes weekly for free distribution a handsome periodical called Municipal Facts, in which is given very full information of all operations, plans, schemes and contracts of the city government; and in which also the mayor and others interested express their opinions and wishes concerning city affairs.

Recently a public speaker before the Unity Men's Club of Denver said that he stood for a square deal for the water company and for the city; that the appraisement which has been recently made for the purpose of furnishing a basis of negotiations between the city and the company was conservative and that he thinks that the valuation of the plant will double in twenty years. He said also that theoretically all public utilities that are natural monopolies should be owned by the community.

The mayor of Denver, Hon. R. W. Speer, favors the purchase of the works of the water company at the appraisement, or at a lower price if possible, and says: The management should be removed from politics and placed in the hands of a water board composed of leading business men, who would serve without pay, as in Detroit, and other leading cities, which are successfully operating municipal plants, and that this board should employ a manager to conduct its business in the same manner as any private enterprise.

Frederic P. Stearns, who ranks without question among the most eminent hydraulic engineers in the United States, in response to a request from the mayor for his opinion says, if the city of Denver should purchase the existing works of the water company it would start upon a basis which with good management should insure a financial success from the beginning, paying each year from the water revenue the cost of maintenance and operation, interest on the bonds, and a sum equal to the annual depreciation of the physical plant. As the city grows and the sales of water increase, the financial condition should improve to such an extent as to warrant the reduction of water rates from time to time unless the surplus receipts are applied to an increasing extent to payments for the extension of works and for retiring bonds.

These extracts show how well-informed men in Denver look on their water question. Ours is very similar in kind though on a smaller scale. Perhaps it is too early to enter into a discussion of the main question in Plainfield, but it is none too soon for the citizens to empower the city fathers to prepare and to lay before the citizens all the facts and figures that are necessary to an understanding of that main question which must so soon come before them. When the citizens are asked to vote to authorize the Common Council to make these preliminary investigations, let every one turn out and cast such a vote, so that we may get the much-needed light on this question so important to us and so much more important to posterity.

Gentlemen's clothes cleaned by a Cleanery with the ability and equipments to produce first-class work, will stay clean longer, as when done by an ordinary suit presser who only brushes the surface dust off and removes the most prominent spots from the surface.

With our process the garments are thoroughly cleaned and disinfected, the linings are cleaned and spots that are removed will stay removed and do not appear again the first time the garments are exposed to the dust and grim of the street.

In the beginning it may cost a little more, but will pay at the end, as the clothes don't have to be at the cleaners every two weeks.

PLEASING PERFUME.

Some women are very fond of perfuming their clothes so that they will waft a delightful aroma wherever they go. Violet sachets or powders are the smartest, and, indeed, there are people who say any other perfume is vulger. But scented lotion may be liked and found useful for the perfuming of gloves and slippers, which should be sponged inside with it. Take an extract of ambergris two drops only and of spirits of wine one ounce or, to make a more plentiful supply, proceed in this proportion, and the result will be found to be a decidly refreshing and lasting aroma.

A fragrant perfume for putting up into little bags to lay among linen or dresses is made by taking one ounce each of cloves, carraway seeds, nutmeg, mace, cinnamon and tonquin beans and adding as much Florentine orris root as will equal all the other ingredients put together. Grind the whole to a fine powder and put it into muslin bags.

Keeping Food Hot.

To keep food that burns easily hot upon the gas stove or to cook anything of the kind without constant stirring a simple devise possible to any housekeeper helps out greatly. This is made by securing a small tin, such as baked beans are spied in by delicatessens and grocers. Puncture the bottom of the can with several holes and invert it over the flames. Place the pan in which the food is to be cooked on this, turn the gas very low and it will keep warm or simmer (according to the height of the flame) without scorching the contents.

MONEY to loan on first mortgage. Louis A. Clement, lawyer, Babcock building. 2 28 6

RESERVE QUALITY EVERY WOMAN OUGHT TO HAVE.

It was George MacDonald, in one of his delightful tales, who said of somebody that she would have been more of a woman had she thought less of being a lady.

He spoke the truth, for, verily, that seems the poorest, cheapest way of all to accomplish the long desired—"the ladylike." The very term is not so satisfactory as is "the womanly."

Genteel and ladylike go hand in hand, and may they go far and stay long. We need them not in this day of the capable, the genuine and womanly woman.

There are ladies in England; by common consent and courtesy an American woman is a lady in England. While we may not care to be hailed as "woman" in daily salutation, we just as strenuously object to being addressed "lady."

There was once a gentle creature, she of the black lace shawl, who swayed the social world in bygone days when men were lords and their wives were ladies. The black lace shawl, the comero pin and the mitts have gone, but we want the wearer back. We yearn for her influence in the everyday walks of life, where the masterful woman dominates or the would-be lady falls short of her own ambitions, and our ambitions for her.

Being a lady is all to frequently but a superficial attempt on the part of those who have but lately taken upon themselves the avocation of a gentlewoman. With them there is lacking, almost inevitably, reserve, the controlled restraint born or generations of culture. Reserve should be spelled over and over again in capital letters by those who still are students in this estimable school. Its initial R should be worn upon the breast of every offender against this first and most important among the canons of good taste.

Being a lady means, in the estimation of each one of us, some slightly different thing, but were a public definition asked, it is doubtful whether there would come in one answer that did not bring in the personal equation. Each sensitive woman among women has it within her to resent the too close personal touch upon some one vital or initimate subject. Each intrusion is resented by us either with disdain or met with dignity; but it is none the less apparent to the dignified that the offender has somehow overstepped them ark.

Strange things are perpetrated in the name of common, ordinary politeness; women or whom it is not expected to show a sistery interest in us and try to make our money reach, and in this generous effort they even venture to inquire, in a none too roundabout way, how near it comes to reaching, how much (or how little) we have.

They try sometimes—indeed, quite frequently—to rear our children. This seems to be the especial privilege of some ladies. In a moment of further reform they would make over our wayward brother, whom we pray for, but rarely mention; they would even improve our husband. It is safer and kinder to assume than to inquire about the improvement in their own.

The more curious among them, still calling themselves ladies and honestly believing themselves to be such, so far misunderstand the boundaries that must always exist between person and person as to make inquiries in public which they could not hope to have answered in private, if they understood. They try to make their own and all the world's a secret which was yours or mine alone. They would force an entrance where no one else has ever knocked. They would storm the portals of the holy of holies. They positively elect to break down the barrier we have raised around a painful personal seclusion. They disturb the silence of a grief under which we are bowed.

We forgive the climber much, but these things never. Being a lady would seem to be beset with many difficulties. Women may lapse in sundry little ways which may be overlooked, so long as they do not offend in matters of fine personal feeling.

By their reserve shall ye know them.

A FRENCH TOILET TABLE.

Although Empire decorations are not quite so fashionable as in the past, there are still some pretty things made in that style which merit the favor given to all that is beautiful and elegant. Attention is drawn to the decoration of a toilet table, which, by the exactitude of details scrupulously followed, would be worthy of figuring at any French palace.

The central piece constitutes in itself a real work of art. It is a "Psyche" in miniature, whose little towers of pearl, incrusted with green gold, support a mirror framed with the same metal and delicately decorated with wreaths of laurels.

Candlesticks with two branches, of the purest Empire style, admirably finished, are placed on either side on a set of square boxes. There appear again pearl decorations beneath gold trellises, crossed over with laurel garlands of different tones.

Sounded Interesting.

"What did the minister preach about last Sunday?"

"The sinfulness of cheating at bridge."

"Well, well! Did he mention any names?"—Exchange.

PARTNERS.

Our old friend, Egg,
Staid as a clam,
For months doth peg
Along with Ham.

They pass around
And always seem,
Wherever found,
A worthy team.

But yuletide days
Excite Egg some,
And he essays
To shake his chum.

And for awhile
Along doth jog
In reckless style,
With festive Nog.

CLEANING ERMINE.

A furrier gave one of his customers a hint that has saved her many dollars. Instead of having her ermine furs cleaned professionally several times a winter, each time her set becomes soiled she mixes a thick paste of white cornmeal and gasoline and rubs it through the fur just as though washing clothes.

The paste is put in a big bowl so as not to spill on the floor. It is well to spread papers around, as the work is not especially cleanly.

If the furs are very dirty they should be put through several fresh lots of the paste, being sure to work it well into the skin. The mixture is easily shaken out and the ermine is as white as when new.

The lining usually becomes white with the skin, but if it does not the paste is rubbed on with a clean piece of flannel.

This is an excellent paste for cleaning white grebe or other light fur hats. Do not fear to make the fur too moist with the paste. Rub it in hard and repeat several times. Shake the meal out over a sheet or you will spend days cleaning your carpets.

This paste is also excellent to clean the bottom of an evening frock. It does not leave a streak like plain gasoline and is quickly rubbed on with a piece of flannel. Let it dry partially and brush off with a soft, clean brush.

LIKE A ROSE.

The workbag that looks like a rose is as ornamental as it is useful. Never in the history of bag making have ideas soared so high. The present-day bag is ravishing in color, and has taken on many remarkable shapes. Those that are rose-like in appearance offer an unusual opportunity for the incorporation of the beautiful, deep rose-colored satin ribbons. Petals of six-inch width fold upward like the outer petals of a rose over a centre of pink and yellow pompadour ribbon shirred into the shape of a round bag. Both are fastened to a round bottom, and the upper edges of the petals are rolled between thumb and finger and slipstitched into a curled edge. They are merely tacked against the sides of the bag as loosely as possible, so that they will retain the flower shape.

NOVEL VEGETABLE DISH.

Among the new table dishes of imitation Sheffield, which is of silver on nickle, instead of copper, there is one which should strongly appeal to the housewife with a small family. They are also excellent for apartment houses where only two or three persons are served at one table.

There is a deep bowl of the Sheffield, in which hot water will be put and fitted into this is a dish which holds four or six different vegetables. The divisions slant from a central standard. The top fits tightly over the outside bowl.

The steam from the hot water keeps the vegetables hot, and the dish is quite a decorative one for the maid to pass. That it saves service and adds to the quickness of presenting vegetables to the guests after the meat one can see at a glance.

THE LATEST DOG.

The latest foreign dog to arrest the fanciers attention is the Samoyede (pronounced Sam-o-yad), or Artic sledge dog. The recent explorations have focused public attention on these invaluable aids to Artic exploration, although specimens of the breed have been exhibited in England before.

The Samoyede, in appearance, is something like an enlarged Pomeranian (from whom it is no doubt descended), except that his coat is not so long and much more dense and fur-like. Like all dogs of the northern regions he is prick-eared and curls his tail on his back. He is, naturally, the hardiest of the hardy, is also very companionable, and a good specimen is very handsome and valuable. There is every evidence of this northern dog becoming very fashionable.

Rejected Manuscript.

"A penny for your thoughts,"
The postman says.
The downcast bard gulps rather hard
And sadly pays.
And it is quite enough
To make one blue
To see a pack of thoughts come back
With postage due.

Hard to Portray.

"I don't think the book will dramatize well."

"Why not?"

"The hero has a good many mental struggles, but them kind of combats don't go well on the stage."

NITROGEN IODIDE.

A Wonderful Substance That a Mere Breath Would Explode.

"What would be the consequences of firing a barrelful of nitrogen iodide it would be impossible to say," declares a writer in the London Strand Magazine, "simply because the stuff is too awful to be made in such quantities.

"It may sound like a joke, but it is nevertheless the truth, that the tread of a housefly is sufficient to explode this dangerous material. It is not necessary that a fly should walk over the compound. It has only to let one foot come into contact with the explosive, when the jolt causes it to explode and to blow the insect into the air.

"Another manner in which the peculiar property of this explosive can be demonstrated is by scattering a small quantity of the dry powder over a sheet of clean paper. It then resembles pepper and only needs a few sharp breaths of the manipulator—just sufficient to make them roll—to cause each speck to ignite and explode, meantime giving off a long, thin column of dense purple smoke. If a barrelful of nitrogen iodide could be made it would have to be kept moist to prevent danger. By comparison gunpowder is a mild, innocent, inoffensive material."

STILTON CHEESE.

It Differs In the Making From the Ordinary Cheese.

Stilton cheeses differ from ordinary cheeses in the method of manufacture. Each Stilton is made in a circular mold, or vat, two feet deep and about nine inches in diameter, perforated at the sides and bottom. When the milk has been turned into curd by means of rennet it is transferred into the vat, which is lined with a coarse woven cloth, with a ladle. When a thin layer of curd covers the bottom of the mold a little dry salt is sprinkled over it. This is supposed to create the blue mold often found in Stiltons. Then more curd is added in layers until the vat is full. The whey gradually drains through the cloth and out of the holes into the pan in which the vat stands. After the curd has stood for twenty-four hours a tin disk is laid on the top and a weight applied to hasten the expulsion of the whey. When quite firm, the cheese is removed from the vat and placed on a shelf to dry. After some days the cloth is taken off and the cheese is left to ripen in a special room, the temperature of which never varies.—London Answers.

The Young Oak.

Once as I was botanizing under an oak I found among a number of other plants of similar height one that was dark in color with tightly closed leaves and a stalk that was very straight and stiff. When I touched it, it said to me in firm tones: "Let me alone. I am not for your collection, like these plants to which nature has given only a single year of life. I am a little oak."

So it is with a man whose influence is to last for hundreds of years. As a child, as a youth, often even as a full grown man—nay, his whole life long—he goes about among his fellows, looking like them and seemingly as unimportant. But let him alone. He will not die. Time will come and bring those who know how to value him.—Schopenhauer.

An Impostor.

"Have you any skeleton in your family closet?" the prospective father-in-law asked of the titled suitor at the family hearing.

"None."

"Then perhaps you have a past?"

"I have not."

The parents whispered together a moment.

"You, of course, have debts?" the millionaire resumed.

"Not one."

The mother fainted. The millionaire towered.

"Sir," he thundered, "how dare you? This is no romance at all, but only a love match."—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

Enterprising.

An immigration official said recently of an immigrant:

"He was a bad case. He was as ignorant of government as the two Polish policemen were. Two new policemen were once put on the Warsaw force. They did good work. They arrested a lot of people; then suddenly they resigned.

"'Why are you resigning?' the superintendent asked.

"The older of the two men answered respectfully:

The spectators in a county courtroom were waxing very demonstrative over the testimony of one of the witnesses. The judge sternly admonished them to keep quiet, but to no effect. The offense was soon repeated.

"Clear the courtroom!" called out the judge to the bailiff.

"Do you think," asked the man, "that the people on the ship will see the flame?"

"They cannot fail to see it."

"And how will they regard it?"

"As a signal."

"And what will they do?"

"Turn about and head for the island."

"And how can we tell what they are doing?"

"When the smoke ceases to elongate," she replied, "it will show us that they have turned and are heading this way."

There was no breeze, apparently, and the smoke would follow the wake of the ship. They watched the little speck on the horizon with strained intensity for a few moments.

"How if she passes on?" asked the man, at last.

"I shall take it as a sign," said the woman, slowly, "that—Look!" she cried, in sudden gladness.

The ship had turned and the cloud of smoke now rose straight above her in the still air.

"They have seen the signal," went on the woman. "They will come here. We shall be taken away!"

"It is your fault," said the man, grimly. "I wanted nothing but to be alone with you."

CHAPTER XIII.

The Long Search.

Mr. Valentine Arthur Langford was wearily pacing the quarter deck of his magnificent yacht, the Southern Cross. Mr. Langford was an intensely disappointed and embittered man. He had made two ventures which, by a stretch of language in one case at least, could be called matrimonial, and both of them had resulted in disaster. Death opportunely had relieved him of one wife; the other who had stood in the place of the former without the legal ceremony or the spiritual benediction had vanished under circumstances so mysterious that he had no idea whether she was alive or dead. On a certain night some three years ago he had a dim remembrance that he had behaved like a brute to a woman. His remembrance was only dim as to details. It was entirely clear as to the fact.

What had happened as a result of his conduct he could not clearly state. The next morning the crew had found him lying insensible on the cabin floor with a fractured skull. The woman was gone, also the power boat which had trailed astern of the yacht in the pleasant weather. Such was his physical condition that when he was not unconscious, he was delirious. He had been able to give no coherent account of affairs and equally unable to give any directions as to the future movements of the yacht, which had been bound nowhere in particular upon a pleasure cruise.

The old sailing-master and captain, much distressed by the situation and the emergency in which he found himself suddenly plunged, decided that his best course, in fact, his only course, was to get back to civilization and a doctor as soon as possible. He had instantly put the yacht about and headed for the nearest land where he might hope to get suitable care for his terribly ill young employer. He pushed the yacht to the utmost speed, and in three weeks dropped anchor in Honolulu, just in time to save the young man's life. Indeed, for a long time it was touch and go as to whether his life could be saved at all, and it was not until nearly a year had elapsed before the Southern Cross sailed for San Francisco with a weak and shaky, but convalescent owner, on her quarter deck.

The departure of Katharine Brenton with Valentine Langford had made a great sensation, but it was nothing to the sensation which raged when it became known that Valentine Langford had returned without her. She was a woman of too much importance, she had played too large a part in the affairs of the world, civilization had manifested too much interest in her, to allow her to drop out of its sight without at least making an effort to find her. The position of Mr. Valentine Langford became interestingly difficult in the face of a storm of inquiry. Mr. Langford's previous marriage was, fortunately for him, unknown, but the world had had a complete and adequate idea of the terms of the union which had been entered upon so blithely between Langford and Miss Brenton that the first question that met him when he came back alone was as to which one had repented. Had the woman come to her senses, had the man grown tired of her, had they parted, and where was the woman? These were queries which were put to him with the direct simplicity of the American public through its imperious representatives, the reporters. And to these questions Mr. Langford could return no adequate answer whatever except the truth, which he could not bring himself to tell. He declared that she had left the yacht in the South seas, that he did not know her present whereabouts, and refused to say anything further privately or in public. Miss Brenton had no near relations; what was everybody's business was nobody's, and presently public interest in her declined. She and her philosophy were practically forgotten by all but Langford himself.

Fortune, which had done him some evil turns, here, however, interposed to his advantage. The lady who legally bore his name departed this life and left him a free man. Brute though he had been, Langford was not without some strong idea of honor and decency. Indeed, he had enjoyed long and undistributed hours of meditation upon his sins of omission and commission during his period of convalescence, and the calm consideration of character and career had done him good. At heart, in spite of his brutal conduct, for which drink had largely been responsible, he was a gentleman, and capable of things fine and high under the stimulus of some really great emotion. He had come to realize, to put it mildly, what an awful fool he had been to say nothing of his villainy. What had led him to this realization had been the remembrance of the hours he had passed with Katharine Brenton before the clouds had arisen which had culminated in that awful storm, the recollection of which fairly made him shudder. However, he had deceived her by professed adherence to her wild theories and impossible philosophies, he had honestly loved her, and association with her had been of benefit to him. If he only had not given away to his temper and his appetite! If it had not been for his former obligation!

He had married his wife in a moment of boyish infatuation. The union had been impossible almost from the first. She was little more than an adventuress, much older than he, who had entrapped him for his money. There had been a separation on a liberal financial basis, to which the woman had readily, even cheerfully, agreed, and he had no lingering remains of affection to hold him back. Her death was only a relief to him. He felt that he owed reparation to Katherine Brenton, and he was more willing to pay the debt because he was honestly and genuinely in love with her so far as a man of his temperament could be in love with a woman. He wanted to make amends for his treatment. He would have given anything he possessed to have been able to say how ashamed he was of all that he had done, and to beg her to forgive him and marry him.

The death of his father and the necessity for the administration of the vast interests of the bonanza king's estate prevented him from at once engaging upon the search which he promised himself he would make, but he expedited matters, sometimes to his own loss, as rapidly as he could, and after nearly a year's stay in San Francisco, he found himself in position to undertake his quest. For a year thereafter he and the Southern Cross traversed the unexplored, unvisited waters of the South seas. He had landed upon island after island which he had examined with minute particularity. Some he had found inhabited by natives, whom, through interpreters he had procured, he questioned unavailingly. He ran across stray vessels trading among the islands, and through them with constantly increasing, ever widening mediums, he carried on his search, but without result. In thus sweeping the Pacific, he visited everything that was charted, and all that he could find that was not, and was now homeward bound, convinced that the launch must have foundered and that he would never solve the mystery of her disappearance.

So assiduously had he prosecuted his search that the crew of the Southern Cross, who knew nothing as to the cause of the eagerness, with the exception of the ship master, looked upon him as a harmless visionary. They had been away so long and had visited so many islands with so much hardship, oftentimes with so much danger from uncharted reefs in the unknown seas that they were one and all wildly anxious to return from the, to them, aimless wandering. If he had communicated to them at the first his quest, they would have shared his eagerness, but he kept it to himself, as he had kept his own counsel in San Francisco, and he strailty charged his sailing master to say nothing of it.

Consequently the lookout on the fore-topmast cross-tree on a certain summer morning, catching sight of a dim, blue haze on the horizon far off to starboard, made no report of it. What was the use? It would only delay matters and they were within a few weeks of Honolulu now, and another fortnight beyond Hawaii would bring them back to the United States, for which they all longed with the desire of men who had been away from home and confined to the narrow decks of a cruising ship for over a year.

Something—as to whether it was Providence or not he was somewhat doubtful in his mind afterward—brought Langford on deck before his usual time for rising. The watch was in charge of a rather sleepy, stupid second officer, unimaginative and unobservant. He had not noticed the land which it was difficult to see from the deck at any rate, especially as it did not lie between the yacht and the sun, and as it had not been reported from the masthead, he knew nothing of it.

Langford had found sleep impossible. The year of search, the constant disappointment, the pressing sense of mystery, the feeling that his conduct was indeed irreparable had preyed upon him. He was thin, worn, nervous and irritable. He walked up and down the deck in the cool of the morning thinking. For three years practically he had had this woman before his eyes as the goal of his efforts. Now she was gone, and he must concentrate his life upon something else. He gazed languidly and indifferently about the horizon, his unpracticed eye noticing nothing for a time. Suddenly, however, staring off to starboard listlessly during a pause in his steady tramp, he thought he caught a glimpse of light. He looked idly in the direction whence the reflection had come for a few moments and saw it again; a thin cloud of smoke, or was it haze, rose above it. He was puzzled by it, of course, and stood staring. The concentration in his gaze, he thought, discovered to him a cloudy blink in the gray of the dawn which might mean land. He knew there was no land charted in those seas, for he had carefully studied the chart the night before, saying nothing to anyone, for he had become somewhat sensitive about the matter.

He ran down the companion ladder into his cabin and fetched thence a new and powerful glass, which, upon his return to the deck, he focused upon the distant point of light. By the aid of those powerful binoculars he made out what it was. He was a man of quick decision and purpose. He called the officer to him, pointed to the light, and handed the glass to the man in question.

"What do you make of that, Mr. Holtzman?"

The officer took a quick look through the glasses, handed them back to their owner, and said laconically:

"Land! Fire! Smoke, sir."

"Very good, sir," said the officer, turning to the man at the wheel and ordering the helm to be put aport.

The yacht's bows swung slowly round until the island and the light were both dead ahead.

"Now, Mr. Holtzman," said Langford, when the maneuver was completed, "who is at the masthead?"

"I'll see, sir," answered the second officer, stepping forward.

"Bring him to me," said the owner as the officer turned away.

In a few moments the officer came back to the quarterdeck followed by one of the seamen. The man looked very much frightened, for Langford was in a towering passion, and when he was in a passion he was not a pleasant spectacle.

"Did you see that island yonder?" began the owner, fiercely.

"I—er—"

"Answer me!"

"Yes, sir," said the man, desperately.

"You did?"

"Yes, sir."

"Why didn't you report it?"

The man hesitated, shifting from one foot to another, muttered something about a wild goose chase. Carried away by anger, Langford sprang at him, and would have done him bodily violence, had he not been quickly restrained by the second officer.

"Mr. Langford, sir," said Holtzman, grasping him tightly, "recover yourself, sir."

The check was sufficient.

"Go forward!" cried Langford, controlling himself with difficulty. "Mr. Holtzman, send for Capt. Harper."

"Very good, sir," answered the officer.

"And meanwhile you are to keep straight for that island until further orders."

In a few moments the old captain presented himself before the owner.

"Harper," began the young man, imperiously, "the lookout this morning deliberately failed to report that land, that island yonder. I want him disrated and his pay stopped. Put him in the gig and set him ashore at the first civilized port."

"Very well, sir," said the old sailing master, not daring to remonstrate under such circumstances.

"Do you know that island?" continued Langford.

"No, sir,' answered Harper. "'Tis not set down in any chart. I have never heard of it before.

"Harper," said the other, laying his hand upon the old man's arm, "it's our last chance. We are passing out of the region of these islands. If she be not there, we shall never find her."

"I am afraid not, sir."

"I have an idea that our quest is going to be successful this morning," returned Langford, eagerness flushing his thin face.

"I hope so, sir," answered the other. "There is somebody on the island, evidently, for they have lighted a fire. It should be a signal. It might be savages of some kind."

"It's not likely. Why should they signal a ship? And how should there be savages on a lonely island like this, 500 miles away from any other land? You may depend upon it, captain 'tis some castaway who wants help, and why not she? Indeed, I am sure it must be."

Something of the man's confidence infected the old sailor. He took up the glass from where it lay on the cabin skylight and going forward studied the island.

"'Tis one of those volcanic islands, I take it," he said as he came back. "It seems to be covered with trees. There is a hill rising from the midst of it. The fire is on the top. There should be an encircling reef round about it, and deep water up to the very barrier."

"Could you see anything else?"

"No, sir. No glass would reveal anything more at this distance. Try for yourself, Mr. Langford."

He handed the binoculars to the owner, but his own scrutiny revealed nothing more than the captain had told him.

"How are we going now?" he said, looking over the side.

"About eight, I should judge, sir," answered Harper.

"Let us have full speed until we get nearer."

"Very good, sir."

The captain turned and spoke a word to the second officer, who signaled to the engine room, and in a few moments the motion of the great vessel through the water was perceptibly accelerated.

"Have you had your breakfast, Mr. Langford?" asked the captain, at last.

"Not yet."

"Then if you'll allow me, sir, I think you would better get it. We won't be within landing distance of that island for an hour or an hour and a half. In fact, we'll presently have to slow down. I don't like to dash in full tilt so near land through these unknown waters, and you will do well sir, to go below and get a bite to eat."

He Focussed Upon the Distant Point of Light.

"Your advice is good," said Langford, turning away and entering the cabin.

Never had man less appetite than he. Somehow, he could not tell why, he felt certain that this which would be his last attempt, would not prove fruitless; that his search hitherto unavailing would now be rewarded. He took time to re-examine the chart of those seas. It was quite possible he thought, for the woman to have made that particular island before them from the point at which she had left the ship. The more he studied it, the more sure he became. He forced himself to break his fast, but in a short time he was on deck once more.

The island was perceptibly nearer. Capt. Harper was forward staring through the glass. Running along the waist Langford joined him on the forecastle.

"Can you make out anything?" said the young man, catching the old one by the arm.

"Aye," was the answer.

"Is she there?" he asked, hoarsely, his heart in his mouth.

"There is a figure on the weather side of the fire yonder."

"A figure!" asked Langford, trembling so he could scarcely control himself. "Is it a woman?"

"I can't tell. It's too far off."

"Give me the glass."

"I make out another figure. There are two of them," returned Harper, slowly lowering the glass and handing it to Langford.

"Two!" cried the other, rapidly focusing the glass, disappointment in his tone which he strove to keep out of his heart. "You are right," he said at last, "there are two figures, but 'tis impossible to make them out."

He handed the glass back to the captain, who in his turn fixed it again upon the island.

"They are going down the hill," said Harper. "I have lost them among the trees. We are approaching swiftly," he continued. "Mr. Holtzman, half speed, if you please."

Bells jangled below as Mr. Holtzman rapidly set the indicator and the speed of the yacht was quickly checked. She still approached the island with sufficient rapidity, however, and after perhaps 15 minutes of easy going, Capt. Harper signaled her to stop, fearful of any nearer approach.

"What now?" asked the owner.

"I think we had better not chance it nearer, sir," said the captain. "It is not more than a half-mile to the shore. Shall I call away the launch, or will you be rowed?"

The launch was stowed amidships; the gig swung from the davits. It would be quicker to take the gig.

"I'll be rowed," said Langford.

PLAINFIELD HIGH FIVE DEFEATS THE LEAL'S

The Plainfield High School basketball team defeated the Leal's five yesterday afternoon with the score of 42 to 26. It was one of the neatest games yet played and although the crowd was small it was highly interesting. At the beginning of the game Leal's boys led for at least five minutes, but Plainfield High School soon got busy and ran the score up fast. At the end of the first half the score stood 26 to 10 in favor of P. H. S. Leal's five played an exceptionally good game all the time and the High School had to play pretty hard. Morris and Clark played the best games of P. H. S., while Doane did some clever guarding. Jewett played a beautiful game for Leal's and Lawrence and Hibbard were close seconds.

Goals from field, Morris 3, Clarke 8, Manley 2, Bristol 2, Doane 5, K. Runyon 1, Hibbard 3, Driscoll 1, Lawrence 2, Jewitt 6. Goals on fouls, Lawrence 2. Time of halves 20 minutes. Referee, Collier; umpire, Tine; timer, R. Lawrence.

DUNELLEN A. C. IN FLOURISHING CONDITION

Dunellen is a small burg compared with some other stopping places on the Jersey Central, but there is some real sporting blood in the town. It can boast of an atheletic club of which Plainfield would be proud of—the Dunellen Athletic Club—which occupies cozy apartments on North avenue oppositee Railroad Park.

The organization is blossoming out as one of the most substantial clubs in that town and the prospects are rosy for the continuance of its growth and advancement. The clubrooms are made home-like with a piano and other attractions. The parlor and reading room is attractively furnished in mission and elaborately decorated with the club's colors of red and black. Then there is a pool and game room which provides entertainment for the members.

During the last few years the club has been to the front in football, baseball and other sports. All of the energies of the officers and members at present is to organize a crackerjack ball nine for next season. At present the indications are that there will be very few changes from last season.

Of the familiar faces who will be seen in the D. A. C. uniform next season are Ben Dodwell, behind the bat; Norman Harney, in the box; Will Piddington, first base; Willie Giles, second base; H. Craig, shortstop; Russell Garretson, center field, and Harry Nonemaker, left field. There are several promising candidates for right field position.

A manager for this season has not yet been elected, but in all likelihood Jess Ayers will be selected to pilot the nine through the 1910 campaign. The question of management, however, will be settled on Monday night, March 21. At this meeting it is planned to have Judge William N. Runyon present to give a talk to the members.

The club is also confronted with the ground proposition as there are chances that the Madison avenue plot will not be available for next season, but the members have several other sites in view.

HUMANS AS CHECKERMEN AT HOPE CHAPEL RECEPTION

At a reception given at Hope chapel to the members of the ladies' Bible class and their husbands last night, more than 100 people were present. Mr. and Mrs. Simons, assisted by Mr. and Mrs. G. H. Condict, Rev. and Mrs. L. R. Howard and Mrs. Donald McInnes, received. A game of checkers with human pieces was played on a huge gauze checkerboard and the women won two games.

Thomas Hendry sang some Scotch songs accompanied by Mrs. Howard. Refreshments were served toward the end of the evening. These receptions are to be fixtures bi-monthly and are looked forward to as pleasant events in the class.

SWIMMING CHANCE FOR PLAINFIELD BOYS

As a part of its policy of reaching the boys of the entire city and borough, the Young Men's Christian Association is planning to teach all the school boys of the city, twelve years of age or over, to swim. For this purpose, the after school and Saturday hours of the week beginning Monday, March 14, have been set aside and George H. Corsen, one of the country's foremost swimming instructors, has been engaged. Friends of the association have contributed enough money to cover the expense of the undertaking and the lessons will be absolutely free.

The need for instruction in swimming is amply demonstrated by the fact that over 4,000 men and boys in the United States and Canada are accidentally drowned each year, and records show that most of these persons could not swim. Many of them were drowned so close to safety that, had they known a very little about swimming, they could have saved themselves.

It has been ascertained that there are over two hundred boys in the schools of the city and borough who can not swim at all and nearly one hundred more who can swim a little. All these boys will be invited, through their parents or guardians to take advantage of this opportunity.

George H. Corsan, the instructor, has served as swimming instructor for the University of Toronto, the Battle Creek Sanitarium, the Young Men's Christian Associations of Cleveland, Detroit, Buffalo and Brooklyn and the Brooklyn Sunday School Athletic League. He recently taught 500 Brooklyn boys to swim within a week.

UTILITIES NOT YET ACTED ON AT TRENTON

Trenton, March 5.—Assemblyman Tatem, of Camden, chairman of the House Committee on Municipal Corporations, which has charge of all bills introduced for the purpose of creating a Public Utility Commission, stated yesterday that his committee had not given any consideration to these measures during the present week. The delay, it is stated, was due to the pressing necessity of considering other measures that could be reported so the House business could be facilitated. Mr. Tatem said the committee would decide next Monday on the date for the second and final public hearing on the public utility bills. It is probable that this hearing will not be set for a date earlier than March 14.

"The newspaper reports to the effect that I have stated that some sort of public utility legislation would be recommended by my committee are erroneous," said Mr. Tatem.

"I have made no such statement and as a matter of fact, so far as I am concerned personally," he continued, "I have not made up my mind what is best to do with reference to the bills that have been committed to the care of the committee of which I am chairman. The statement that the so-called regular Republican leaders have given orders that a public utility bill shall be reported, is absurd. Not a single so-called leader has talked to me about the subject. I am not taking orders from anybody as to my course in the Legislature. I appreciate, of course, that there is a good deal of merit in the argument that both the Republican and Democratic parties, through their platforms, are pledged to enact public utility legislation, but I am not ready to say what I shall do with the bills that we have in hand.

"I want to study the subject more carefully," Mr. Tatem went on. "As I view the question at present I would say that the Sullivan bill is too drastic for the State to adopt as presented. Under its provisions no consideration could be given to the value of stock issued by public utility corporations which, perhaps was not worth a great deal in the beginning, but which has in the course of time passed into the hands of innocent parties. I am disinclined to see the State pass a law which would wipe out the value of stock acquired by innocent parties. However, these are but casual opinions of mine, for I am not now prepared to say what the Municipal Corporations Committee will do, so far as my voice in it goes."

Caught Stealing Coal.

The Jersey Central Railroad had Alexander McPherson, a West Indian negro, before Judge William Runyon this morning on a charge of stealing coal from its cars. McPherson was given twenty days in the county jail. He has the alternative of paying $5 fine.

School Pupils on Strawride.

A number of N. P. H. S. pupils, including the basketball team, went to Westfield on a strawride last night. The party had an enjoyable time.

Former Mayor John H. Van Winkle, of the borough, is ill at his home on Duer street.

NEW YORK CENTRAL'S FINE NEW TERMINAL

New York, March 5.—The New York Central Railroad Company has prepared plans calling for the expenditure of millions of dollars in addition to the vast amount already contracted for, with a view to making its Forty-second street terminal one of the beauty spots of the city.

Fifteen square blocks, comprising all the realty which the company controls between Madison and Lexington avenues and Forty-second and Fiftieth streets, are included in the improvement plan. On this a site has been suggested for a new Metropolitan Opera House, the National Academy of Design and other notable institutions.

According to the plans prepared, the proposed improvement begins at Fiftieth street and Park avenue, to which point the company controls. For months past the work of depressing the tracks so that the Park avenue crossing will be at grade has been carried on day and night by three shifts of laborers and engineers. When this undertaking is completed the tracks will be roofed over, so that they will enter below the street grade the new Grand Central terminal, which is to cost about $20,000,000 and occupy three blocks between Forty-second and Forty-fifth streets.

This structure, which is to be of classic design, will face north and south, both facades being highly ornamental. On the north it is proposed to continue Park avenue at about its present width to the north end of the new terminal, beautifying it with small parks in the centre to divide the two roadways.

Macarino and Cheese.

Two tablespoonfuls macaroni, one and one-half cupfuls boiling water, two tablespoonfuls cheese, one-fourth teaspoonful salt, one-half cupful white sauce, six tablespoonfuls buttered crumbs. Break macaroni and wash thoroughly. Place water in upper portion of double boiler, add one-eighth teaspoonful salt, and, when boiling rapidly add the macaroni. Boil five minutes over direct heat, then place upper in lower portion of double boiler and cook one hour. Drain off surplus water. Cover the bottom of a buttered baking dish with a layer of macaroni and layer of white sauce and sprinkle with cheese. Repeat until dish is full, omitting cheese from the top layer. Cover with buttered crumbs and bake until white sauce bubbles and crumbs are browned.

For Soiled Clothing.

Brush the garments carefully first and then apply the liquid with a woolen cloth, going religiously ever every spot. This should be done with care, using especial diligence with the soiled spots. After sponging rinse in ammonia water and before the garment is thoroughly dried press it between two dark cloths. Soap bark is an effective cleaner of woolen skirts, and men's clothes, as it is a quick eradicator of grease and dirt. Get five cents worth of the soap bark, pour it over a quart of boiling water, steep it gently over a fire for two hours, keeping the heat low so that the water will not boil away. Then strain through a piece of cheesecloth and it is ready to use.

One Lapel.

The single lapel is sufficient unto the day and night for a new long coat. It is faced with beautiful embroidery and weighted down by means of a long tassel at the point. It is extremely large, and falls from the chin to the waist in a ripple. At the wearer's wish the lapel may be taken and thrown over one shoulder so that the tasseled part will hang at the back. In front the throat and chest will be cozily covered. It is a charming idea when making a walking or motor coat.

Shadow Lace.

This is new, and because of its unobtrusive patterns can be used in great quantities without fear of overdecoration. The pattern is woven in such a way that an uncertain shadowy effect is produced. It is ecpecially lovely in black and cream. The black shadow lace is used over black net and a white satin underslip. The cream is effective over pale tints in evening gowns.

Mayors to Attend Banquet.

Mayor C. J. Fisk, of this city, and Mayor Newton B. Smalley, of the borough, have accepted invitations to attend the third annual dinner of the New Jersey-New York Real Estate Exchange at the Holland House, New York, Friday night, March 25.

Fleeting Joy.

"Philosophers claim that it is not what is around us, but what is in us, that makes us happy."

"True, enough. But, then, there's that next morning feeling."—Exchange.

One on the Critic.

"That comic opera of yours gave me a pain," said the critic.

"Well," replied the author of the opera, "you shouldn't have laughed so much."—Yonkers Statesman.

Graceful.

"Are you growing in grace?" asked the preacher.

No car—we make this statement advisedly—selling for less than $1,500 can stand comparison with it point by point. There is a completeness in its construction and an elegance of finish that satisfies the most critical motorists.

DEATH OF J. B. MILLER

Former Plainfield Hotel Man Died at Newark This Morning.

Joseph Brengle Miller, formerly well known as a local hotel proprietor, and also a theatrical promoter, died at his home in Newark this morning at the age of forty-six years. Mr. Miller was a native of this city being born in the hotel which was established by his father, George Miller, which stood on the present site of the Manganese Steel Safe Works, in the 60's.

The funeral arrangements have not yet been completed but will be in readiness for announcement tomorrow. He is survived by two brothers, George Miller, of Park avenue, and Wallace V. Miller, of New York; also two sisters, Miss Anna Miller, of Park avenue and Mrs. Charles Roberts, of Brooklyn. The deceased was a member of Plainfield Council, Royal Arcanum, No. 711.

Mr. Miller was one of the best known hotel and sporting men in the State and at the time of his death he owned and conducted a business at 65 Bloomfield avenue Newark. During his career he conducted the old Laing's Hotel in this city, where the Babcock building stands, and later the Elkwood music hall and cafe, which at the time occupied the New Plainfield theatre building. Mr. Miller was twenty years old when he assumed charge of the old Laing hostelry which in its time was one of the most popular hotels within a radius of fifty miles of New York.

In later years Mr. Miller conducted the Elm House, on East Grand street, Elizabeth, and the Temple Cafe, on Morris avenue, the same city. He was of a generous disposition and made many friends.

During the skating rink rage a number of years ago Mr. Miller conducted a big skating rink at Roseville, Newark. In his theatrical experiences he managed several large shows, and in 1885 he went to Europe to procure a number of leading artists for New York theatrical managers. For one year he managed a lecture tour for Henry Ward Beecher the well-known Brooklyn preacher.

Mr. Miller came of a hotel family. His father who was the proprietor of the old Clinton Avenue hostelry, also conducted the hotel which is now owned by "Billy" Lee at Scotch Plains, the old Sheridan House at Elizabeth, and also Hotel Iroquois, of this city, which was known as the City Hotel in the early 70's. In the olden days Mr. Miller, Sr., was also proprietor of a restaurant in the building at the head of Park avenue where a clothing store is located.

MUSICAL KINDERGARTEN METHODS ARE EXPLAINED

An interesting and instructive lecture on musical kindergarten work was given at the home of Miss Ella Serrell on Union street, Saturday afternoon, by Miss Marie von Hitzfeld, of New York city. Miss von Hitzfeld gave a practical demonstration of the Fletcher Music Method, the original kindergarten system, with which she has been so successful.

As was explained by the kindergarten paraphernalia, the system aims to reduce the difficulties which the study of music causes to children and to develop the child physically, mentally and artistically. The rendition from memory of Baccarolle from the Tales of Hoffman, Berceuse, Godard and Humoresque, Eilenberg, by Iola Ransome, a little girl was much enjoyed and showed what had been accomplished in two years' work. Miss Hitzfeld is planning to locate in this city.

BLUE RIBBON TERRIER'S THRILLING EXPERIENCE.

An Airedale terrier, belonging to Francis L. Sill, of Myrtle avenue, which distinguished itself by capturing several blue ribbons at recent dog shows, had a thrilling experience which nearly resulted in the death of the canine by starvation. In giving chase to a rabbit or rat under a barn belonging to the Tappin estate near Rockview avenue the animal trapped its two front legs and head in a beam underneath the structure. The wines of the dog heard by a boy who notified Chief Weiss, and the latter, after considerable exertion, succeeded in releasing the animal from its imprisonment.

When rescued, the dog was weak from lack of food but the owner is bringing it around on a milk and hot water diet. The dog had evidently been imprisoned for a week.

ABUSED WIFE TELLS COURT OF BEATINGS

The matrial difficulties of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Hawkins, of Plainfield avenue, as drawn from the couple in the city court this morning entertained a huge "gallery" of the curious. Mr. and Mrs. Hawkins are colored people and their troubles have been constant since their wedding day, before last Christmas. Mrs. Hawkins said this morning that ever since she married Hawkins she has had to support him, and although he sometimes worked, he never brought so much as a nickle into the home.

Their troubles became serious last Friday night when she was unable, because of illness, to cook a shad which she had bought for supper. Hawkins became ungentmanly and mauled her rather roughly. The performance was reepated on Saturday night when her lord and master came home drunk and started things. He threw her down on a trunk and attemped to strangle her and struck her, and ended by threatening to cut her throat with a newly sharpened razor.

Mr. Hawkins denied most of the assault episode and told a tale of such supine allegience to his spouse and promised so faithfully to be good that Judge Runyon let him go with a suspended sentence of sixty days. Mrs. Hawkins was inclined to think that her husband should have been sentenced to jail, but changed her mind suddenly and said she would be satisfied if Hawkins would behave himself.

Patrolman Messler found Mrs. Hawkins looking for help, rather thinly clad and in her stocking feet, on Second street at 3 o'clock on Sunday morning and went to the house and hauled Hawkins out of bed where he was feigning sleep.

SPECIAL SERVICES AT TEMPLE BAPTIST

Yesterday was decision day at the Temple Baptist church. In the morning the Rev. C. E. Lewis preached, taking as his subject "Despise Not the Day of Small Things." The speaker cited Biblical incidents to prove that God uses the weak things of earth to compound the mighty, and applied the truth to the present revival meetings by showing that God through humble human instrumentality is winning immortal souls for His kingdom.

At the Sunday-school session the Baraca, Junior Baraca and Philathea classes joined the other members of the school in the body of the church and listened to an address by the Rev. L. Judson Westfall. At the close of the address a large number of the Sunday-school pupils took a stand for Christ.

The church was crowded at the evening service. By special request Mr. and Mrs. Lewis sang "Life Is Like a Mountain Railroad," and Mrs. Lewis and daughter Vera sang "The Holy City." The subject of the Rev. Mr. Westfall's sermon was "A Stranger at the Door." The speaker said that Christ was knocking at the door of the heart of every one in his audience who had not as yet accepted Him, and he urged all to let Him in. At the conclusion of the service several made the decision for Christ. Interest in the special meetings is growing and they will be continued throughout the week.

NO MORE BURNT CORK PARTS FOR MISS DUNN.

"Yes, I'm back in white-face," observed Emma Dunn, a few days ago, to a newspaper man who was interviewing her regarding her new character, that of the title in "Mother," which will be seen here tonight at the Plainfield theatre, "and I hope that never again shall I be compelled to black-up, as I did last season in the role of the maid in 'The Easiest Way.' I gave up a sweet and appealing role in 'The Warrens of Virginia' because wherever I went the critics insisted on referring to me as 'the young actress who has made a specialty of mothers' roles. I got very tired of that, although the critics meant it for the best, I know: and I told Mr. Belasco one day that I wanted another kind of role in his next play, even if I had to black-up or play a Chinawoman. He took me at my word when he laid out the cast of 'The Easiest Way,' and I was one of the six players engaged for it. I was credited as a hit in the part of the negress; but, now that my versatility is recognized officially by the newspapers, I want no more of burnt cork!"

—Dr. Frank D. Clawson has received and is well pleased with his 1910 model 17 Buick. Kent Bender agent. ***

ENJOY MUSICAL SERVICES

The special musical program at Trinity Reformed church last evening served to attract a large congregation, which included members from other churches in the city and borough. The special attraction was Mrs. Walter David, harpist, of New York city, and a number of anthems by the quartet choir. Mrs. David more than fulfilled the expectations of those who counted on having a musical treat. The addition of the harp to the organ accompaniments making a delightful combination especially so when accompanying soloists.

The voluntary "En Reve," by Verdalle, is a composition which requires nimble fingers for the harp work and the piece was executed with admirable technique and masterful expression. The prelude to Miss Raybert's solo, "Agnus Dei," by Bizet, with organ, viola and harp, was a finely executed number. Mrs. David alone played "Marche Solenle," by Gounod as an offertory, and gave a splendid reading of this rather sombre classic.

Mrs. David, who has been a guest of Mr. and Mrs. F. S. Cutter, the baritone of the choir, is an accomplished artist and produces with ease the most difficult chords on the instrument. The singing of the quartet was up to the usual standard and the audience was well pleased.

Rev. John Y. Broek spoke briefly on a Lenten topic referring to the crucifixion of Christ and His great suffering. He said that Christ was made perfect through His suffering and died of a broken heart. He suffered His intense agony because he bore the sins of the world and in this His disciples would have to be like Him as through suffering they are made whole. In the suffering of the ills of this life the growth of the Christian life is stimulated and the horizon of the Christian is broadened. From the beginning of His life until He said on the cross: "It is finished," Christ was an intense martyr and in view of this fact is there any sacrifice too great for us to make for him?

DUNELLEN PASTOR ON THE PHILA. STRIKE

The Philadelphia car strike was referred to by the Rev. W. A. Knox, pastor of the Methodist church and Rev. Ernest O. Brown, pastor of the Presbyterian church, of Dunellen, in their sermons last night. Dr. Knox took for his text, "Am I my brother's keeper?"

The latter in his discourse made reference to the battles for American liberty in the Revolutionary war, the freedom of the slaves in the Civil War, and the liberating of the Cubans from Spanish rule in 1898. In all of these strifes, Dr. Knox declared, that America exemplified the Scriptural injunction, of being her brother's keeper.

"In Philadelphia," he declared, men, women and children are being shot down in the street. That gigantic railroad corporation around which the strike centres, says to its men, "You can work for the wages we give you, if you are not satisfied you can go elsewhere." I believe that if both sides would inject a little Christian love the controversey could be settled."

Mr. Brown in his sermon declared that he believed that the laboring men effected would make out better in their fight if the agitators would let them alone. Mr. Brown also referred to the high prices existing on home and food products and declared that the advances in commodities was not in keeping with the wages paid for labor.

Got a Breathing Spell.

"Colonel" Archibald Hacquer who is covering the Philadelphia car strike for the Evening Bulletin, of that city, enjoyed a junket to this city yesterday, which he said was for the purpose of getting a breathing spell in the midst of his ardous duties. Mr. Hacquer, no doubt got it, as he attended the breezy conclave of the New Jersey State Baseball League organizers at New Brunswick in company with the local delegation. Mr. Hacquer reported many exciting incidents of the strike controversy, one feature of which was his appearance before the grand jury.

The Junior Christian Endeavor Society of Trinity Reformed church will hold its potponed entertainment, "Mistress Mary's Contrary Reception," at the church tonight. The church postal cards will be on sale.

PREACHES TO JR.O.U.A.M.

Rev. Charles S. Kemble Addresses Members of Four Local Councils.

The members of Franklin, Somerset, Benevolent and Plainfield Councils, Jr. O. U. A. M., attended divine services at the Monroe Avenue M. E. church, last night, when the pastor, Rev. Charles S. Kemble, who was recently initiated into the order, delivered a strong sermon on "patriotism." The church was filled with members of the order and their friends. During the service Charles L. Lewis sang a solo and there was an anthem by the choir.

Mr. Kemble presented Simeon as one of the finest types of patriotism, for he not only had a strong love for his own country, and a faithful follower of Christ, but delighted in the fact that he was to be a Saviour of the whole world. Mr. Kemble spoke of the tendency of today to depreciate patriotism in favor of a world-wide citizenship, and urged that a man love his own country best, as he would love his family and home, but that he should also be a blessing to the world at large.

In referring to Simeon the minister said that he was just and devout in his relations to God and man, and added that if a man is in proper relation to God he will also hold the right relationship to man.

PLAINFIELD FOR LEAGUE

Manager Dorflinger Willing to Place a Team in the Proposed Circuit.

If the New Jersey State Baseball League is a go Plainfield will be represented with a team under the management of Ernest Dorflinger. This is cocksure, as at the meeting of the magnates and organizers held at the City Hotel, at New Brunswick, yesterday afternoon, Mr. Dorflinger declared that Plainfield is willing to link fortunes with the proposed league, and that in order to carry the local end through, Mr. Dorflinger informed the delegates that a stock company will be organized.

The organization of the circuit was deferred until next Sunday afternoon when a meeting will be held at the Packer House, Perth Amboy. At the present the circuit includes Plainfield, Perth Amboy, Elizabeth and Newark. New Brunswick is on the fence and Rahway, Carteret and Somerville are yet to be heard from. J. W. Dobbins, of Newark, who is one of the chief boomers of the league, stated that he stood willing to place a team in Somerville, if local people turned the proposition down. Mr. Dobbins said if he took this course he would have the support of Jack Torpey, the well known catcher. Trenton and Summit are also possibilities.

The New Brunswick delegates have the "big league" bug after their big 1909 season. Hugo Wasserman, secretary of the Middlesex aggregation, had a lot to say at the session, and what he did say, he made no secret that he was trying to throw cold water on the proposition. The tact pursued by Mr. Wasserman resulted in a lively verbal setto between him and Mr. Dorflinger. Mr. Wasserman, in his remarks appeared to be satisfied that if New Brunswick entered the league it would be a runaway race for the Middlesex county seaters.

"Suppose the league is organized, and it results in a runaway for New Brunswick, where would the interest be?" was one of the questions asked by Wasserman.

This apparently nettled Mr. Dorflinger, and the latter jumped to his feet and replied: "See here, don't you New Brunswick guys get swelled heads. If there is any running away to be done, you can bet Plainfield will be in it right off from the start." That retort squelched Mr. Wasserman.

Several ripples of excitement marked the session. J. W. Dobbins frankly declared, without any reflection on the New Brunswick delegates, that many of New Brunswick's victories last season were due to Umpire Van Cleef, who made it a point to bat at a 1,000 clip, when the home team was in tight pinches. Dobbins also went so far as to state that VanCleef had instructions to follow this course from Manager Dave Driscoll. The Brunswick representatives had no replies to offer but let the matter slide on with smiles.

President A. L. Rollepetz also landed a wallop on New Brunswick when he informed the delegates that he had been informed that Dave Driscoll had made that boast that he had "fixed" the New Prunswick sporting writers to "knock" the pro-

ANNUAL FAIR OF CO. K

The Local Military Boys Aim to Replenish Their Treasury.

Company K's opening night on Saturday was auspicious, hundreds of young people taking advantage of the armory floor for a dance and a fine social time. The hall is handsomely decorated with the National colors while around the sides are arranged the refreshment, candy and fancy booths in charge of members of the company and a few fair assistants.

At 9 o'clock Saturday night the dancing was in full swing to the music of Squire's orchestra and although at that time the floor was well filled the young people were arriving in couples, quartets and crowds. Corporal Winter at the door had his hands full attending to applicants for admission while Corporal Apgar had his share of worry in trying to satisfy the demands for dancing cards.

The bazar will last during all this week, closing with a dance on Saturday night. The fair is being held for the purpose of replenishing the company's treasury. A general committee including Captain Kitchell, and Lieutenants Peterson and Littell have the fair in charge.

The floor committee is composed of Sergeant Apgar, chairman; Privates Clark, Hann, Howell, Conkling and Keplar. Fancy booth, Corporal William Hartpence, chairman assisted by Mrs. Hartpence, Miss Gardner, Mrs. A. Niles, Miss Florence Hughes, Miss Mildred Hughes, Miss Olga Wigman, Miss E. C. Faulks, Corporal Manning, Privates J. E. Farrell and Jesse Dayton.

The refreshment booth is in charge of Corporal A. Niles, and Corporal J. Niles, Corporal A. Dow and Private Cole assistants. The armory was decarted by Corporal J. Niles, who had the help of Privates Millwater, Carter, Boedecker, and Dayton. Those who are to care for the door are Corporal Winter, Privates Pearsall, Teeple, G. W. Hansen, Otto Hansen, W. Winter, Parliner, Carter, Sharp, Haste, Welch and Clausen. The bazaar promises to be successful in every way.

SALVATION ARMY CORPS ENROLLS TWELVE MORE

The Salvation Army hall was crowded last night to its utmost capacity for the closing service of the mid-winter campmeeting. Enrollment of new members and the commissioning of local officers were features. The service was in charge of Major Frank Lyon, of New York, and was begun with a selection by the choir of twenty-five voices, led by Mrs. Jackson, wife of Adjutant Jackson.

Captain Hewitt introduced Major Lyon, who told what it means to be a Salvation Army soldier. He asked those who wished to be enrolled to stand up. Eight were received as new members of the Army while four were received on transfers from other corps. After the enrollment the choir sang an appropriate song, "The Victory May Depend On Us."

At the close of the service one woman came to the altar and gave herself to Christ, thus making a total of ten who have professed conversion during the special series of meetings.

The local officers commissioned for the year are Miss Agnes E. Mair, treasurer; Mrs. Apgar, secretary, Edward Brunn, sergeant major; Mrs. Pierce, publication sergeant. The Sunday-school officers are Miss Blanche Sharkey, junior treasurer; Miss Maud Jackson, secretary; W. Sharkey, Mrs. Apgar, Miss Blanche Sharkey and Corps Cadet Jackson as teachers or junior sergeants.

Authorized Property Transfer.

The Plainfield and Rahway Meeting, Religious Society of Friends at a meeting here on Friday night, authorized the trustees, Charles E. Vail, Ephraim Vail, Clarence Vail and W. D. Williams, to negotiate the transfer of the society's property, on Watchung avenue, to the government for the postoffice building. This property has a frontage of 63 feet and is 150 feet deep, and comprises a portion of the tract to be used by the government.

K. R. C. Entertained.

Robert Cuzen entertained the K. R. C. at his home on West Front street, Saturday night. There was a discussion of current topics, after whuch supper was served by Mrs. James Cuzen, sister of the host. Cards were enjoyed afterward. The K. R. C. planned to attend the performance of "The Arcadians" at the Liberty theatre, New York, March 26, and also have dinner in New York.

CRAP SHOOTERS FINED FIVE DOLLARS EACH

"Come seben, come 'leben," "O you little Joe," and similar exclamations uttered in the loud voices of colored "ge'm'n" in the rear of Simmons' pool room on Madison avenue, Saturday evening, attracted the attention of Detective Sergeant John Flynn and Patrolman Vanderweg, and their investigation, made by way of a back fence, resulted in the capture of a sextet of crap shooters, who were lined up in court this morning and fined five dollars each. David Simmons, Henry Wilkes, Oscar Green, William Oliver, John Crite and Cornell Reynolds were the men and they paid their fines rather than go to jail for twenty days.

All sorts of evasive stories were told by the gamblers when asked about the game. Some had "just come to look on," while others had "only played once," but all were there from five o'clock until the arrests were made. The game was being carried on under a shed which the negroes had pre-empted for the purpose, and which belongs to Dr. Mark Clawson, and according to neighbors has been a rendevouz for crap shooters for some time. Complaints have been made time and time again, but the lookout was always too slick for the police. Strategy was resorted to on Saturday with the results above stated.

CHARLES N. TRAIN DIES IN HIS SEVENTIETH YR.

Charles N. Train, aged sixty-nine years, who was employed by the Pond Machine Tool Co., as watchman for nearly thirty-five years, died at his home, 148 Netherwood avenue, yesterday, from infirmities of advancing age. He was considered one of the most valued employes of the company and a man who was exceptionally faithful in the performance of his duties. He was a member of Perseverance Lodge, 74 K. of P.

Mr. Train formerly lived at West Brookfield, Mass., and prior to the removal of the Pond Machine Tool Works to this city, twenty-two years ago, was employed for nearly fifteen years at the plant in Worcester. He came here with the company and continued to fill his position with entire satisfaction. He is survived by a wife and one daughter, Mrs. William Dodd, of East Fifth street. The funeral will be held from the late residence tomorrow afternoon at 2 o'clock and the burial will be at West Brookfield, Mass.

To West Point.

Juan Torroella, who has been a student with R. M. Huse for three years or more, hopes to enter the United States Military Academy early this month, his father having obtained consent through Congress for him to take the course at West Point. Mr. Torroella will be much missed by his friends, but his popularity will not decrease, particularly among his fair friends. He bid an informal farwell to his friends at a pink tea given for him last Saturday.

He Forgot His Errand.

Anthony Schwalback started from Westfield on Saturday to buy some pigs feet for a "friend," but he was tempted beyond endurance by the lights along East Front street and tarried by the way. The result was an accumulation of a load of tribulation which landed him in a cell at police headquarters. Judge Runyon advised him to remember that a deviation from the strict path of duty always ends disastrously for the sinner and discharged him.

Let Go With a Warning.

On complaint of Clarence Jackson and Charles Verducci, the former employed by Marcus Hoyt & Co. and the latter an employee of Dr. H. D. Corbussier, Edward Galbreth and James Deady were arraigned before City Judge Runyon Saturday on charges of disorderly conduct in attempting to force the complaining boys to fight. All four were cautioned to preserve the peace under penalty of a heavy fine.

E. Brancatti, of this city, appeared before Recorder Dolliver this morning and was adjudged guilty of riding a bicycle on the borough sidewalks and was fined $3. Lewis Bimble, who was arrested on Saturday night for drunkenness by Marshall Keller, was also fined three dollars.

HOLTON WILL CASE ENDS

Judge Schenck Stops Further Argument by Permiting Probate of Will.

The Mary E. Holton will case, which has been in litigation in the Somerset court for several months, came to an end today, when Judge Schenck ruled that the counsel for the contestants had failed to make out a case and issued an order that the will be probated. Under this ruling the American Baptist Society will come in for more than $50,000, with the undefstanding that the bequests made in Miss Holton's last testament will stand.

Judge W. A. Coddington, one of the counsel for the will, protested to the court against the allowance of any fees to counsel for the contestants on the score that the evidence did not warrant the contesting of the will. Counsel for the caveators, however, declared that Miss Holton's mental condition at the time of her executing the last will warranted such a proceeding. Judge Schenck apparently took the same view as he was generous in the award of fees to counsel and witnesses.

Lawyers in the case will receive about $6,000. Judge Coddington and Alvah A. Clark, counsel for the will were awarded a fee of $2,500. For the contestants the awards were as follows: Winfield S. Angleman, $500; A. M. Beekman, $500; Nelson Y. Dungan, $500; Harry C. Runyon, $350; Mr. Streitwolf, $100; former Sheriff Edward Cooper, as administrator was awarded a fee of $300, while his counsel, Hugh K. Gaston, received $250; Dr. J. Hervey Buchanan and Dr. J. P. Zeglio, as witnesses, were awarded $50 and $25 respectively, and the nurse who attended Mrs. Holton will receive $3 a day.

LETTERS BY WIRE NOW; W. U. TEL. CO. READY

Final arrangements for the cut-rate "night letters" have been made by the Western Union Telegraph Company, and tonight the new system of sending a fifty-word telegram at night for the same price as a ten-word telegram in the daytime will go into operation. This plan, in addition to the combined telephone and telegram system which the company recently inauguraed through an arrangement with the American Telephone and Telegraph Company, is expected to geratly increase the company's business throughout the country and afford a means of keeping the wires almost as busy at night as they are in the day.

Belvidere Brooks, the General Manager of the Western Union, thus explained the working of the "night letter" plan yesterday.

"The new plan will be a special inducement for sending letters at night by wire rather than by mail. These letters are to be filed before midnight. They can be filed any time in the day up to midnight, however, and they will be sent out during the night and delivered to their desination in the early morning. The night rate for letters will be one-fifth of the day schedule. In this way business men will save much time in conducting their correspondence, especially in cases where two days would be required to deliver a letter sent by mail. A letter of fifty words can be sent to Chicago for 50 cents. Now, under the day rate, only ten words can be sent to Chicago for that sum. And the cost for sending a letter to San Francisco would be about twice that sum."

Miss Emily T. Minor to Speak.

Miss Emily T. Minor, of Ratnagiri, India, will make an address at the annual meeting of the Women's Foreigne Missionary Society of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church, tomorrow afternoon at 3:20 o'clock in the chapel of the church. Reports will be received and officers elected for the year. Miss Minor has been a faithful worker in the Bombay Presbtyery for seventeen years and will tell of her experience.

Mrs. Clark's Funeral.

The funeral service of Mrs. Henrietta Clark was conducted at her late home on Duer street on Saturday afternoon by the Rev. C. L. Goodrich, pastor of the Congregational church. Interment was made at Hillside, the bearers being four sons and two nephews of the deceased.

Owen Lovejoy to Speak.

At the March meeting of the Men's Club of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church tomorrow night, Owen Lovejoy, secretary of the National Child Labor Committee, will speak on some phases of the Child Labor movement. The meeting will be held in the chapel of the church.

$8,000 Worth of Additional Prizes

Wouldn't you like a fine, new $325 piano? Solve this puzzle picture. You have the same, fair opportunity as anyone else to win. This is the most liberal offer ever made to those desiring a piano. It is a gigantic publicity contest. Our factory advertising appropriation for this spring is to be used where it will do piano buyers the most good. Instead of spending the money in magazines, we intend to give away a piano free, and also distribute hundreds of fine pianos, at prices never before possible, to prize winners. Start today and try for this piano. There is no catch. Everyone has an equal opportunity. Cut out the little pieces and paste them together and you will have two of the world's greatest generals. One a famous general of the American Revolutionary War and the other the most famous general of France, who was defeated at the battle of Waterloo. The most artistic correct answer will be given the $325 piano absolutely free.

THE PRIZES—First prize—A fine new piano, valued at $325. Second prize—A certificate of credit for $125. Third prize—A certificate for $100. The next six best answers will be given a credit certificate for $90. Special Advertising appropriation. In addition to the above prizes the Company will voluntarily issue to each of the remaining contestants a special certificate of credit of $25 as an award for their effort in the contest.

Pre-Easter Display of Fashionable Dress Goods

Seems as if Dress Goods manufacturers received advance information, for dress goods of the most beautiful color arrangements have been designed for this season's wearing.

The woman who plans her Spring frocks in advance is ready to enjoy the delightful spring days when spring does come. Too, with Easter only a few days away, one can't begin making Easter clothes too early.

This exhibit of fashionable dress goods at prices now in force again emphasizes the low price mastery attained by this store.

It is generally conceded that our prices are at least 10 per cent. to 20 per cent. LESS than prices of same quality elsewhere. Visit the store and learn to your own satisfaction that you get "more for your money" at Tepper's.

Aside from an extensive range of the new dress fabrics you will find liberal assortments of Dress Trimmings, Wash Goods, Sheer Mercerized Fabrics, Poplins, Foulards, New Madras, Ginghams, Batiste and other cotton fabrics.

These prices are appended as a guidepost to splendid stocks and values in the store.

Flowers of Fashion

REVEAL THEIR BEAUTY TOMORROW

Like the unfolding of the petals of the beautiful rose come into the fullness of its glory will be the opening revelation of Springtime fashions which we begin Tuesday, and continue in formal display Wednesday and Thursday.

This will be the one big fashion show of the city—the one true presentation of the finery in women's apparel on which has been placed the seal of approval by the foremost fashion dictators of this and other countries—the most compresenhive show of Millinery and Wearables for women and children, as well as of clothing for men and boys, that will be or can be made in any Newark house.

The supremacy of this house will again be clearly emphasized in the Opening Display. In the way we do it, in the character of the goods and garments we show, and the broad scope of styles presented—in all these we will demonstrate the power and capacity of this establishment to measure up to the highest Metropolitan standards, and our ability to serve you better than any store in New Jersey.

We will be glad to see everyone at our opening—lovers of the beautiful, devotees of fashion, sight-seers, buyers—all are welcome.

It is good to see the State's greatest store in its best bib and tucker. It is like a great exposition of the world's products—a better display, in fact, than will be seen in most world's affairs. It is a show that should not be missed by anyone who has enough time to spare to see it, and those who have little time to spare each day will profit by coming more than once.

SPORTS HERE AND THERE

GOLF.

Golf handicappers have been advised that if on any hole the par is more or less than the length of the hole would indicate, they should state the reason. Each hole should be measured from the centre of the tee to the centre of the green, generally following the surface of the ground, except that in some cases an air line measurement, or nearly so, may be advisable.

The original handicap table placed at scratch a player whose best score average, that is, average best play, was par at his home course. This made it necessary for an association handicap committee to raise (from one to five strokes) the handicaps as returned from the clubs having short courses, the reason being that the shorter the course the greater the predominance of short holes and the easier to play in par figures.

By his revision of 1910 Leighton Calkins makes an allowance for this well recognized fact in the handicap table itself. Courses having a par of 74 or 75 are regarded as standard courses, and those who can play in par figures are placed at scratch. On all courses, however, the scratch player must do better than par. In other words, a best score average of par gives a handicap of one stroke where the par of the course is 72 or 73; two strokes where the par is 70 or 71; three strokes, were it is 68 or 69; four strokes where it is 66 or 67, and five strokes where it is 64 or 65. It is believed that by this new feature players handicapped according to the table at any club will probably be able, as a general rule, to play with the same handicap, or nearly so, at any other club.

Miss Anna Waskoff, of Vineland, has received a three-year appointment in the census office at Washington.

ACTIVE WEEK ON FOR LOCAL PIN KNIGHTS

Local pin knights face a week of unusual activity and according to the program there will be lots doing on Campbell's alleys. Tomorrow night the two-man tourney will be in augurated. Fifteen teams have entered the tourney and the competition gives promises of being exceedingly brisk.

On Wednesday night the Roth and Neuman teams will roll a return match, and on Thursday night the Rahway Elks will be here to roll a league series with the locals. On Friday night the Watchungs will journey to Newark and roll their last games in the New Jersey national tourney with the Tuxedos and Kruegers as their opponents.

Johnny Campbell reports that Plainfield will be well represented at the N. B. A. congress at Baltimore, which begins on April 9. It is dead sure that there will be one local five-man team from here, and possibly two teams. Up to date the following bowlers have registered for the tournament: Kiely, Blatz, Laing, Stout, Causebrook, Nash, Radin, Matthews, Schaub, Busher and Campbell.

posed league. When Mr. Rollinetz made this charge, "Patsy" Vanderveer, sporting writer of the New Brunswick Times, jumped to his feet shook his fist in the air and declared:

"It's not so, you can tell your friend that he is a liar." Rollinetz dropped the subject and the excitement subsided.

Dr. F. J. Fanning, of the New Brunswisk club, appeared to favor the league idea. He informed the delegates that his club had paid out $10,700 for alien ball players last season and had lost $800 on Saturday games. Mr. Dobbins told the New Brunswick representatives that they were paying too high salaries for their players. The latter declared that all of last year's team could be secured a half the prices paid. Dr. Fanning was interested in the dope, took notes, and it is likely that there will be some big salary sliding before the first game in old Brunswick is played next season.

In explaining the program of the new league, President Rollenetz said that the nominal price of five dollars would be charged for franchises, and that the league dues would be one dollar a game. This income he said would be used in defraying the incidental expenses of the president.

It is proposed to have a salary limit of $50, the idea being to give local players a chance, in preference to out of town players. The matter of guarantees and division of receipts was left for next Sunday's meeting. Games will be played on Saturdays, Sundays and holidays. The schedule will be arranged which will permit Sunday ball teams to play at home on the Sabbath. The delegates to the meeting were as follows:

Plainfield, Manger Ernest Dorfinger, Adam Shott, William Cass, G. E. Firstbrook; New Brunswick, President George Kuhn, Secretary Hugo Wasserman, Dr. F. J. Fanning, Clarence Baler; Elizabeth, W. Hall; Parkways of Newark, J. W. Dobbins; Perth Amboy, William Hoffner, Thomas Burke, William Martin.

This Week at Proctor's.

The western comedy sketch, "Her Cowpunching Boss," presented by Tom Kyle and company, is a delightful little play, brim full of the best of comedy and a first rate love story. Ala Zaza & Co., oriental mind readers and illusionists, mystify all with a wonderful act. Benson & Miller are a pair of good singers and dancers, while James Burnes & Co. are among the best slack and tight wire walkers in the business. And then there are the pictures.

Jersey Tomatoes at North Pole.

James D. Cox, of Bridgeton, head of a large canning concern, has received word that canned tomatoes of his concern were among the supplies of the expedition of Commander Robert E. Peary in the dash for the North Pole. Peary states that some of the tomatoes were eaten by him while he was making observations at the pole.

W. Morris Hunter, of New York city, spent the week-end with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Hunter, of West Fourth street.

Gentlemen's clothes cleaned by a Cleanery with the ability and equipments to produce first-class work, will stay clean longer, as when done by an ordinary suit presser who only brushes the surface dust off and removes the most prominent spots from the surface.

With our process the garments are thoroughly cleaned and disinfected, the linings are cleaned and spots that are removed will stay removed and do not appear again the first time the garments are exposed to the dust and grim of the street.

In the beginning it may cost a little more, but will pay at the end, as the clothes don't have to be at the cleaners every two weeks.

AMONG OUR NEIGHBORS

DUNELLEN AND VICINITY.

Nearly two hundred friends and neighbors attended the funeral service of Nathaniel McCord Hill yesterday afternoon at the home of the deecased on Grove street. The service was in charge of Rev. Ernest O. Brown, pastor of the Presbyterian church and was of a simple but impressive character. There were many beautiful floral tributes including a pillow from the Jerrey Central, a wreath from the dead man's associates on the railroad, and a large pillow from Court Bergen Point, No. 4038 Independent Order of Foresters, of which organization the deceased was a member. There was also a delegation of members present from this lodge. At the grave the service was conducted by the Foresters. Interment was made at Bound Brook, the casket being borne to the grave by six of his fellow workmen, some of whom were at his side, when death came five minutes after Mr. Hill was struck by the train near Boynton Beach on Friday afternoon. They were Jacob Fisher, Oscar Harrison, James Teeling, Joel Giddes, Walter Brown and Ambrose James.

O'Melia H. Piquette, son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Videl Piquette, passed away at Alexian Brothers' Hospital on Saturday with exhaustion, which followed an attack of typhoid fever. Mr. Piquette was twenty-four years of age and was employed as a fireman on the Jersey Central He is survived by a sister and two brothers. He was well known in the borough, where he made his home for the past dozen years. His father, who was also a railroader, met death in an accident several years ago. The funeral service will be held at St. John's church tomorrow morning at 9:30 o'clock, where Father Dunphy will celebrate a requiem mass.

Mrs. Harris will entertain the members of the missionary societies at her home tomorrow afternoon. A stage will leave the corner of Washington avenue and Front street at 2 o'clock for the benefit of those who desire to attend the meeting. A paper will be read on missionary work in Haly.

THE MORNING AFTER A WEDDING CELEBRATION.

Charles Cassett, of West Third street, helped at a wedding celebration last night at 521 West Third street, and incidentally imbibed too freely of the liquid refreshments. He started a rough house when the liquor began to get in its work and even had the temerity to attempt to jiu-jitsu Patrolman Messler. This of course, was the end of his little spree. A night in the cooler cured Cassett of his puglistic aspirations and this morning he was allowed to go with a reprimand.

A youth by the name of Sweeney had his neck slightly cut by having his head thrust through a pane of glass, but this was accidental and not serious.

Peddled on Sunday.

Max Morris, of 413 John street, was arrested by Detective-Sergeant Flynn yesterday for peddling on Sunday. Morris was evidently trying to make up for some of the losses incurred while he was laid up with a broken jaw handed to him by a negro who demanded a quarter for catching his runaway horse about a month ago. Judge Runyon explained the law to him on this subject of Sunday selling and allowed Morris to go.

George Anderson.

George Anderson, aged sixtythree years, a wealthy retired business man, died at his home in Somerville, yesterday, following a long illness. He was well known here. He was the son of Louis Anderson, who at one time was prominent in the affairs of the county seat. A wife and daughter survive. The funeral will be held from the late home tomorrow afternoon at 3 o'clock.

Rubber Company Incorporates.

Articles of incorporation were filed at Elizabeth, today, by the Century Rubber Trading Company, the principal office of which is on North avenue, this city. Dwane, of Brooklyn.

"Tom" Platt Dead.

Former United States Senator Thomas Collier Platt, Republican leader of the State of New York for a score of years and intensely interested in the Republican party from its organization in 1856, died unexpectedly yesterday afternoon at 4 o'clock at his home in New York. The direct cause of Mr. Platt's death was acute Bright's disease.

Miss Kate Bond.

Miss Kate Bond, daughter of the late Rev. and Mrs. Lewis Bond, died this afternoon at her home, 720 Kensington avenue. She had been a resident of this city for many years. She was a sister of Theophilus Bond and Rev. Lewis, of this city.

Mr. Cheesman retains good health and all of his faculties, looks after his business personally, and does his own editorial work. He has owned The Patriot thirty-six years.

John Austin, forty-five years old, died Saturday at Pole Tavern from the effects of exposure. The man was found semi-conscious on the road Friday night, and was placed in the store at the place, but got out during the night, and was discovered lying in an open field in the morning. He never regained consciousness.

While complaints come from all sides of the high cost of living, people at Mays Landing are enjoying low prices on many commodities. Strictly fresh eggs can be bought at any market for twenty-six cents a dozen, while sweet potatoes and other vegetables are so plentiful that farmers have large quantities on hand. So many residents raise their own pork that the increase in the cost of meats has not been felt much, and it is hard to realize that prices are so high elsewhere.

CAST SELECTED FOR TRIANGLE CLUB PLAY.

After several weeks of rehearsals, the cast of "His Honor, the Sultan," the original musical comedy to be presented by the Triangle Club of Princeton University at Krueger's Auditorium, Newark, March 23, as well as at Washington, Indianapolis, St. Louis, Chicago, Pittsburg and New York, has been chosen.

The play was written by Cyrus McCormick, 1912, of Chicago; the music by E. P. Nevin, 1912, a son of the famous composer, and the lyrics were written by J. F. Thompson, 1911, secretary of the Triangle Club, who plays the role of the Sultan. The scene of the play is in the garden of the Sultan's palace at Tanjovco, capital of a province in Turkey, and deals with the adventures of a German newspaper correspondent, a young American traveler and a suffragette about the Sultan's palace, while a revolution is in progress. There is lots of snap and vigor to the play and it is being directed by Eugene Sanger, of New York. The cast contains a number of experienced actors. It is as follows:

Bob Hammond, a young American traveler, V. S. Merle-Smith, 1911; Heinrich Schlitz, a German newspaper correspondent, E. M. Barnhart, 1912; The Sultan, J. F Thompson, 1911; Ibrahim Ali, Grand Vizer to the Sultan, J. H. Larkin, 1913; Mohammed Pasha, a revolutionist, P. F. Myers, 1913; Hon. W. B. Grosvenor, American Ambassador, E. C. Jessup, 1911; Mrs. Grosvenor, L. T. Getty, 1911; Lieutenant McTavish, of H. M. S. Valour, R. G. Rolston, 1910; Marmora, the Sultan's favorite daughter, Brown Rolston, 1910; Mrs. Straighton, a suffragette from Battle Creek, Mich., L. K. Howe, 1911; "Sissy" Hillyard, her niece, R. G. Watson, 1913; American girls, palace guards, slaves, etc.

The scenery has been designed by H. M. Harvey, 1911. The costumes, which are of an Oriental variety, have been designed by T. S. Paul, 1911, and P. F. Crossman 1911, of Newark.

The Island of Regeneration

By Cyrus Townsend Brady
Illustrations by Ray Walters

(Copyright, 1909, by W. G. Chapman.)
(Copyright in Great Britain.)

And in a moment the voice of the boatswain's mate could be heard calling away the crew. All hands were on deck. The conversation between the captain and the owner had been heard by many, and their tenor communicated to all. Consequently when the gig manned by six of the best oarsmen in the ship dropped alongside and Langford descended to the stern sheets and took the tiller in his hand, the crew spontaneously manned the rail and sent him off with three ringing cheers.

It did not take the men long to cover the distance between the motionless ship and the island. As they approached the latter, they perceived the barrier reef, which, unless they could find an opening, would effectually prevent their getting on the shore. Langford swung the boat about at a judicious distance from the reef, over which the sea always broke with more or less force, and closely scrutinized the line of foam. The coxswain of the boat who rowed the stroke oar also followed with his eyes the jagged reef. It was he who detected the two figures on the beach of the island waving palm branches and apparently pointing. He called the attention of Langford to the figures, and suggested that the inhabitants were trying to show an opening through the barrier.

Following the indicated direction presently smooth water was discovered. Langford headed the boat for it. The men bent to their oars, and soon parted the quiet waters of the lagoon. The two figures stood in plain view upon the beach still too far for those in the boat to make out who they were. Langford could only see that one was taller than the other; that both were dressed in some sort of loose tunic that fell to the knees and left the arms bare. He was disappointed, and yet hopeful. The suspense was almost unbearable. The men were doing their utmost, seeing the anxiety in his face, but their utmost was too slow for the impatient man.

CHAPTER XIV.

Past and Present.

"How long do you think it will be before they will be here?" asked the man, after they had sat silent on the hill to windward of the fire watching the trail of smoke.

"I should think that it would be perhaps an hour or a little more. Why?" she returned, after a moment' pause. "Are you anxious to have them here?"

For the life of her she could not keep the bitterness out of her question. The man looked at her in surprise. She had never lost her temper before him in the years they had been together. There had been something singularly simple, free and unrestrained in their life. Nothing had ever occurred to vex her, at least not after the man had known enough to notice it. She was a woman of sunny, even temper under any circumstances, and she had felt it incumbent upon her to be as nearly perfect as possible, since she represented humanity to him, nor had it been a difficult task for her to be gentle. This flash of resentment, therefore, struck him as something entirely novel. In his amazement for a moment he forgot the injustice of it, the unkindness of it. He looked at her strangely and said to her, with a little touch of severity:

"You know that it is not that, Woman."

He had no terms of endearment. He had never heard the words that lovers use, and although he knew that her name was Katharine, and he believed that his was John, and though sometimes they made use of these names, generally they called each other by the broad generic terms which stood for sex. Names are only for differentiation and identification in any event, and here was no need for such appellation. She loved to call him "Man," and she loved to hear him call her "Woman."

"You know," he said, "that 'tis not I who brought the world upon us."

"I was unjust, unkind," she answered quickly enough, stretching out her hand to him. "You must forgive me. You see even the approach of yonder ship brings bitterness into our hearts and into our speech."

"I guessed that it would be so when I saw you weep," said the man. "I wish now that I had not given you the flint and steel; that I had not allowed you to light the beacon."

"My friend, it had to be. Don't reproach yourself for that. Sooner or later this island would have been visited by some one. Sooner or later the ship would have come to fetch us off."

"But we were so happy here," he protested.

"Yes," she answered, "but not since yesterday."

"Are you unhappy because I love you?"

"Because," she made swift to reply, "I am no longer sure that you will love me always."

"But you love me, do you not?" he questioned, eagerly.

"Yes."

"Are you sure of yourself?"

"Absolutely."

"Why not of me, then? Am I less true? Do I love less than you?"

"Not now."

"What is the difference between us, then?"

is the friend of the man who takes care of the fire. The square fire-pot prevents the clogging of clinkers around the sides of the fire. That means all fire—more heat per unit of space. The square pot gives a greater surface for combustion and heat radiation and actually takes less coal for a good fire. And then there's the Boynton special flue for carrying away the dust. You don't sift ashes all over the house when you shake down the BOYNTON.

WANT A DOUBLE TRACK

Dunellen Board of Trade is Against P. S. C. Petition to Lay Sidings.

COUNCIL RECEIVE SUGGESTIONS

Mayor Sanford Brings up Sewer and Drainage Matter—Council to Draft a Building Ordinance and Fix Fre Limits.

That there is a strong opposition on the part of Dunellen citizens and property owners to permit the Public Service Corporation to lay two sidings or switches in the borough, was made apparent last night at the meeting of the Borough Council, when a communication was presented from the Board of Trade in which that organization suggested that the P. S. C be given permission only to lay another track through the borough and that the company pay for the privilege.

The Board of Trade also suggested that the company also be compelled to sprinkle North avenue and pay two thirds of the expense involved in repairs and removing the snow from that thoroughfare. In the communication the Council was reminded that in the past the company have received franchises and permits free of charge.

The suggestions in the letter are the sentiments expressed by Mayor William A. Sanford at a recent meeting of that body. Mr. Sanford reported last night that a local representative of the company called on him yesterday and requested that the Council defer action for one week. The request was granted and the matter will come up for action next Monday night, March 14, at a special session.

A progressive policy was also manifested by the Board of Trade in another communication in which it recommended the adoption of a building ordinance and the establishment of fire limits. Borough Attorney Walter L. Hetfield, Jr., made arrangements to meet the committees on Saturday when an ordinance will be framed and presented to the Council next Monday night.

Mayor Sanford announced that the time is nearing when Dunellen will be officially asked to unite with North Plainfield on the sewer proposition, and the Council authorized him to appoint a committee of three councilmen and two citizens to push the matter. Mayor Sanford announced that he would make the appointments at the proper time. In referring to the proposed sewerage system Mayor Sanford said:

"I am more optimistic than ever on the sewer situation. A sewerage system will have a wonderful effect in stimulating the growth of the borough and also increasing the desire of people to come here to live. It will also aid in the accumulation of territory as people will want to come where there are sewers," (meaning that the residents of New Market, south of the Centre street boundary and between the Lehigh Valley tracks, will be anxious to annex to Dunellen.)

A drainage system also was referred to by Mr. Sanford. He declared that it is the consensus of opinion in the borough that something should be done to eradicate present conditions which were a big detriment to the borough. Borough Engineer F. A. Dunham, who was present, was authorized to prepare a map showing the flow of water, the quantity, and the way to get clear of it.

"We have plenty of water," said Mr. Sanford. "The good Lord has sent it to us and we must find a way to take care of it. It's a matter we will have to face in the near future and a map will enable us to face the problem intelligently."

Mr. Bogardus reported that he was still negotiating with the Watchung Water Company for the installation of a register and gauge in the fire house. At the present, he said, the company appeared to be lukewarm on the subject, but he thought a personal conference with Secretary Cook would straighten out matters. Mr. Bogardus explained to the Council that the contract with the water company called for a pressure of 75 feet while the pressure at the recent fire at the Hally Printing Press plant was only twenty feet.

A petition was presented from the Hall Printing Press Works calling attention to the impassable conditions of North avenue in the vicinity of its factory and asking that improvements be made to the thoroughfare.

The street committee was authorized to advertise for bids for concrete crosswalks. Tax Collector Isaac reported $30.40 during February. Mayor Sanford reported having received a check for $116 from the P. S. C., being the share of the P. S. C. for the removal of snow during the storms.

MAYOR SANFORD'S DOG CHEERS MASTER'S SPEECH

Did you ever hear of a dog being interested in politics and municipal government? Well, reader, if you haven't, attend the next meeting of the Dunellen Council and you will see and hear for yourself. Mayor William A. Sandford is the owner of such a canine. At last night's session of the Dunellen law-makers Mr. Sandford's black bow-wow was present and occupied a front seat during the proceedings. The dog displays little interest in the transaction of routine business and generally naps during these tame periods, but when the important subjects are being handled he always cocks his ears, sits up, and takes notice.

The dog appears to be doubly interested in the happenings when his master has the floor and is exploiting a favorite subject. At last night's meeting the dog remained on its front chair until Mayor Sandford began to handle the sewer and drainage questions. When the dog heard the magic voice of the mayor it hopped down and took a position alongside of its master, wagging its tail and bowing its head, apparently endorsing everything the mayor was saying.

In the final stages of the mayor's remarks the dog really applauded its master by a series of encouraging yelps and salutations. "The borough needs sewers," (bow-wow. "They will stimulate the desire of people to come here," (Bow-wow-wow-wow). The mayor and his dog commanded the undivided attention of the lobby for several minutes and everybody appreciated the dog's loyalty to its master.

FIVE NEW ORDINANCES WERE MADE LAST NIGHT

Prior to the regular session of the Common Council, last night, public hearings were granted on several ordinances which had been passed on two readings and advertised. No one appeared to speak for or against the passage of the ordinances and they were adopted on final reading.

The ordinances included one to vacate Byron place, one to vacate a street on the property of John W. Murray and others, one to lay out and open up Thornton avenue, between Park and Hillside avenues, one to lay out and open up a portion of Stelle avenue and one to change the name of Dunellen avenue in the city to that of Myrtle avenue, corresponding with the borough extension of that thoroughfare.

COUNCILMAN STAHL OFFERS A SUGGESTION

The petition in circulation among Duer street residents asking the Borough Council to change the name of that thoroughfare to North Madison avenue is being freely signed and the prospects are that it will be ready for presentation to the Council at the special meeting on Friday night, March 18.

Councilman J. J. Stahl offered a suggestion on the matter this morning. "Why not get the city to change the name of Madison avenue to Duer street? 'Duer' is the oldest name, when it is remembered that Madison avenue was formerly known as Mechanic street, and that the change was made not so many years ago."

Mr. Stahl wanted it to be understood, however, that he is not "butting in" one the wishes of the residents of Duer street on the matter, and that he stood ready to vote to name the street to conform with the ideas of the majoority of the property owners who are interested in the matter.

Funeral of Henry M. Du Flon.

The funeral services of Henry Mahler Du Flon were held from the home of his brother in Brooklyn yesterday afternoon, and Rev. E. Vicars Stevenson, rector of Grace church, officiated. A large number of Plainfield friends attended. During the services a quartet comprising Miss Etta Raybert, soprano; Miss Grace Carroll, contralto; William Holmes, bass, and William Tallamy, tenor, sang several selections. The burial was in Greenwood cemetery.

Honeyman Tourists.

Several Plainfielders were included in the A. V. D. Honeyman party sailing on Saturday for Brmuda by the Quebeck Steamship Company steamer "Oceana." In addition to Mr. Honeyman there were Mrs. Nancy Dill, Miss Nancy Everett, Mr. and Mrs. William Kelly, Miss C. O. Lewis, Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Woodward, Mr. and Mrs. M. T. Welch.

CITY PAY FORTNIGHTLY

Mayor Fisk, in Message to City Fathers, Makes a Recommendation.

RECEIVE MONTHLY REPORTS.

Shade Tree Committee Wants $2,560—Street Work Commission to Be Appointed—Other Routine Matters.

Mayor Charles J. Fisk, following a conference with the heads of the city departments, recommended to the Common Council, last night, that it pay the salaries of the city employes every two weeks, instead of every month as at present. He explained that the men are not permitted to contract debts and that it is almost impossible for them to avoid doing so as it is often the tenth of the month before they receive their money. The matter was referred to the finance committee and it is expected that favorable action will be taken.

A resolution offered by Councilman Buxton and adopted, authorized the cancellation of a franchise tax of $2,404.63, of the Public Service Corporation, in lieu of the $6,463.82, which the city will receive as five per cent. of the gross receipts of the company for 1909. The law provides that where the franchise tax amounts to less than the amount from gross receipts, the lesser amount shall be cancelled.

N. H. Randolph and others petitioned for two lights on Belleview avenue, and Horace G. Adams and others asked for two lights on Leland avenue, between Front street and Green brook. Both of these petitions were granted.

The Shade Tree Commission certified to the Common Council that its expenses for the coming year would be $2,360 and in addition $200 for the care of the city park. This was referred to the finance committee.

Mrs. Mary Denny, of Johnson avenue and East Second street, asked the Council to remit a sewer assessment of $31.50, as she had already paid $61.78 for the same purpose, and she had been assessed on both side of her property. The matter was referred to the sewer committee.

Residents of Richmond street petitioned for the establishment of a building line on the westerly side of that street between Putnam and East Seventh street. The matter was referred to the proper committee.

Residents of Lyman place asked the Council to accept that thoroughfare and improve the same at the least possible expense. They said that Andrew McCardell had agreed to furnish them with cinders from the Pond Machine Tool Works for filling purposes for the expense of carting. This was referred to the street committee as was also the petition of the Central Park Realty Company for permission to tap sewers in the vicinity of Grant avenue, where its tract is located and which it is proposed to improve.

Building Inspector T. O. Doane reported the granting of seventeen permits during the past month. Overseer of the Poor A. D. Ayers reported outside expenses of $197.76 and almshouse expenses of $472.98. Horace G. Adams, clerk of the District court, reported receipts for the past month of $144.34, expenditures $14.34, leaving a balance of $130.

Mr. Gloak offered a resolution which was adopted asking the Court of Common Pleas to appoint a commission of three men to assess benefits in connection with the work of macadamizing certain streets in this city last year. The appointments will be made March 23.

Three resolutions were offered by Mr. Taylor and adopted. One authorized the installation of one two-way fire hydrant on Leland avenue, between George street and Midway avenue and the other authorized the city clerk and mayor to execute a contract with the Public Service Corporation for the installation of certain electrical apparatus for the new switchboard at fire headquarters. The third resolution authorized the fire committee to purchase one thousand feet of new hose at a cost not to exceed $900.

The Council authorized the placing of an electric light on Woodland avenue, between Watchung and Putnam avenues, in response to a request from A. W. Kleinecke. Sometime ago he wrote Councilman George S. Clay about the matter, and upon the recommendation of Mr. Montgomery, chairman of the light committee, the light was ordered last night. The Common Council then adjourned to meet on Monday night, March 21, at 8 o'clock.

SCHOOL ELECTION NEAR

Rev George A. Warner and Allen B. Laing Mentioned as Candidates.

COOLEY AND JOY TO RETIRE.

Robert Clark, Jr., Is Slated to Succeed Himself—Borough Election to Be Held Next Tuesday Night.

Notices have been posted in the borough calling attention to the citizens that the annual school meeting will be held Tuesday night, March 15. The principal business at the meeting will be the election of three members to the school board to succeed Dr. James R. Joy, Dr. Justice H. Cooley and Robert Clark, Jr., whose terms expire.

Mr. Clark, it is understood, has consented to serve another term if it is the wish of the voters, but Drs. Joy and Cooley have declared that they are determined to step out of harness. Both of the last two named members have served more than ten years on the board.

So far as known there are only two candidates to place on the ticket with Mr. Clark. They are Allen B. Laing, a former member of the board, and the Rev. George A. Warner, rector of Holy Cross church. It is understood that both of these men are in a receptive mood to accept the honor.

The amount of the budget is fixed at $20,000, a reduction of $4,625 from that of last year.

WATER ELECTION APR. 19

Voters to Decide Question of Condemnation Proceedings.

FULL PUBLICITY PROMISED.

Mr. Mygatt's Resolution is Passed Unanimously—President Tolles Places Himself on Record.

The Common Council, last night, through a resolution offered by Councilman F. E. Mygatt, of the committee on public affairs, took steps to submit the question of municipal ownership of the local water supply to the voters and Tuesday, April 19, was the date set for the election. The polls will be open from 6 o'clock in the morning until 7 o'clock in the evening, with the exception of one hour, between 1 and 2 in the afternoon, to allow the election officers to have lunch

The resolution carried with it provisions for giving ample publicity to the voters of the coming election and providing such other information as may be desired. It also ordered that the election officers shall return promptly the result of the election to the Common Council. As framed the resolution was carried without a dissenting vote, although President Tolles said that he did not want his action to be construed as meaning that he would vote for municipal ownership of water supply, but that he wanted it understood that he would be free to vote as he thought best.

Mr. Mygatt explained that the action simply meant that if the question should be adopted by the voters the Common Council may take steps to acquire a water supply, but that it does not bind the Common Council. It simply means that the question is to be put to a vote to determin whether the municipality wants to adopt the provisions of the Legislature act permitting cities of Plainfield's size to buy or build water works.

Somerset Mills Want Help.

The Somerset Mills occupying the two upper floors in the Marshall building on Watchung avenue, is rushed with orders and give employment to a number of girls if they can be secured. The second floor is used for an office, cutting room and piece good stock, while the third floor is for the operators. The concern is now operating fifty machines and will add fifty more if the necessary help can be secured. This firm pays its help every Saturday noon and the experienced operators make from $9 to $15 per week. The floors are large and airy and all the machines are run by power. ***

UNDERTAKER IN TROUBLE

T. A. Moore Haled Before Borough Health Board for Alleged Violations of Law.

BURIALS WITHOUT PERMIT?

The Alleged Infraction of Law is Claimed to Have Taken Place at Mary Scanlon's Funeral.

Thomas A. Moore, the former local undertaker who went into bankruptcy last October, appeared before the Borough Board of Health last night to reply to the charges of burying people without the usual permit. The charge is based in Mrs. Mary Scanlon's funeral which was in charge of Mr. Moore last Thursday. It is alleged by the health authorities that Mrs. Scanlon was interred at St. Mary's cemetery without a permit. The permit, it is understood, was issued after the funeral had taken place.

From what can be learned of the case Moore, it is alleged, has conducted a number of funerals of late acting as an agent for William De Mond, of Somerville. Moore, it is said, would get the business, and have the permits issued in DeMond's name. Mr. De Mond was requested to be present at last night's session but he failed to appear. Moore was there, however, and from all accounts it was an exciting meeting.

The case will be continued at the April meeting of the board when legal efforts will be resorted to in order to have Mr. De Mond present and tell of these transactions. It is the contention of the board that Moore cannot lawfully engage in the business in his own name while he is a bankrupt.

SUPERINTENDENT MAXSON REPORTS A CONVENTION

At the meeting of the Board of Education last night the only absentee was Dr. B. vanD. Hedges and business of the usual routine character used up the greater part of the board's time. A report was presented by Superintendent Henry M. Masson of the recent convention of National Superintendence held at Indianapolis. In his report Dr. Maxson says that there were 1800 members from all parts of the United States present, including twenty-eight from this State. The general subject of the meeting was "The Individual Child," the need for recognition of differences betwen children and modification of educational methods to meet individual needs. This was discussed under separate heads as follows: Mental alertness, moral responsibility, mental attitudes, tastes and tendencies; hpysical conditions, environment and vocational aim.

Special attention was given to the important subject of retarded children and the need for special treatment for gifted children. Physical training was held to be a potent factor in acquiring knowledge and special stress was laid on healthful exercise and play as being essential to the desired end. Athletics, under proper supervision were declared to be doing much toward developing character and good habits. Folk dancing was also strongly endorsed.

The controlling thought of the convention seemed to be that as modern industry is marked by its elimination of waste so the great characteristic of education in the immediate future must be elimination of waste, physical, mental and moral; that even the scope of humanity may be utilized.

CLEVELAND CATHEDRAL DEAN AT GRACE CHURCH

At Grace church tomorrow night the fifth in a series of services for men will be held. These meetings are intended by the rector to represent the Lenten opportunity for men. Many other services are held in Grace church during the week days, always one service daily, sometimes two, three and four daily. The men of the congregation, however, are largely prevented by business engagements from attending these services. Hence the Wednesday evening meeting has been designed. This service is a very short one, consisting of scripture reading, prayers and some bright hymns. The splendid choir of the church is always present and adds greatly to the pleasure of the service.

Several excellent speakers from out of town have been heard already in this course, and for tomorrow night the rector has announced that The Very Rev. Frank Du Moulin, D. C. L., Cleveland, Ohio, will deliver an address. Dr. Du Moulin is a Canadian by birth, the son of a distinguished preacher who is the present bishop of the Diocese of Niagara in Ontario. The Dean of the Cleveland Cathedral has served in churches in Chicago and Cleveland, and when the late Dean was consecrated Bishop of Michigan, Dr. Du Moulin was called to succeed Dr. Williams. He is very well known in the west, and is regarded as an unusually strong speaker. Though the service is designed for men, women are made welcome.

HANSEN APPEALS CASE BUT WITH NO SUCCESS

The Supreme Court has sustained the decision of Judge William N. Newcorn, of this city, in the case of Jacob Wiesner against Christian Hansen for malicious prosecution. Judge Newcorn gave Wiesman a verdict for $50 when the case was tried before him in the Elizabeth District court. Alfred A. Stein represented Wiesner.

Samuel Koestler, who represented Hansen, appealed the case on the ground that the court should have declared a non-suit because "undisputed facts failed to show cause for arrest and did not show existence of malice;" also that "relevant testimony was excluded on the part of the defendant."

The objections, however, were not sustained by the Supreme Court and Hansen will be compelled to pay the $50 damages.

"LOCAL OPTION" BILL "PASSES" THE HOUSE

When the House convened last night at Trenton the news spread that, unknown to anybody, last Tuesday, the Anti-Saloon League's local option bill had passed the House unanimously. John J. Matthews Democratic Assemblyman from Hunterdon, the best parliamentarian in the House, and close watcher of the minutes, discovered that the minutes for Tuesday's session contained the illuminating entry that upon motion of Mr. Bedle, the House took up No. 175, by Mr. Ridgway, and that, under suspension of the rules, it passed 58 to 0.

Mr. Matthews, when Majority Leader Edge moved suspension of Clerk Parker's reading of the minutes, said:

"The minutes are pretty dry as a rule, but if you will look at page 330 this week, you will find them rather wet."

It is perhaps needless to say that the Ridgway bill is still in committee.

The entry is a complete mystery and unwarranted. The House ordered a correction. Last year a similar error was unearthed by Mr. Matthews, but it showed the passage of a liberal Sunday excise law.

The indications are that there will be no excise legislation this year.

Crap Player Fined.

Another crap player was fined this morning by Judge William N. Runyon. He was Thomas Tucker, one of the two who escaped from the police when the raid on a crap game Saturday evening on Madison avenue. The six who were arraigned yesterday were fined five dollars each, but Tucker had to pay an extra five for running away after being notified that he was under arrest. He paid the fine as though it were a mere incident in life and not to be taken as a serious crimp in his bank roll.

Mrs. M. E. Edgerton, of East Front street, left today for Washington, D. C., where she will be registered at the Shoreham Hotel.

CODDINGTON CASE TILT

Alvah Clark Makes Futile Effort to Have Trial Postponed.

IT WILL BEGIN TOMORROW.

Sentence of Joel Coddington Deferred Until the Verdict in Horace's Case Is Made Known.

Prosecutor John F. Reger and Alvah A. Clark, the latter appearing as counsel for Horace Coddington former clerk of Warren township, engaged in a lively legtl tilt in the Somerset County Court, this morning, the time announced for the trial of Mr. Coddington, charged with illegally obtaining money from a municipality while clerk of the township.

The entire panel of talesmen as well as witnesses from all parts of the county, were present and Prosecutor Reger was ready to proceed. Mr. Coddington was not. Mr. Clark stated that he had been called into the case last night and that if the trial proceeded he would have to leave Mr. Coddington without counsel as other engagements would keep him out of the court today.

Prosecutor Reger opposed the motion for an adjournment, but after considerable argument, Judge Schenck fixed tomorrow morning as the time.

Joel Coddington, who was treasurer of Warren township, and who entered a plea of non-vult to the charge of missappropriating township funds, is now out on bail and his sentence is held up pending the outcome of the trial of Horace Coddington.

W. V. Steele was counsel for Horace Coddington, and three weeks ago he appeared in the Supreme Court and made a motion to quash the indictment against his client on the ground that Justice Charles W. Barker had no right to dismiss three members of the grand jury summoned by Sheriff Ross. The motion was denied and the trial was fixed for March 8.

In the meantime Mr. Steele certiorared the case to the Supreme Court for Saturday. Yesterday was appointed as the time for argument and when Mr. Steele renewed his motion to quash the indictment on technical grounds, the motion was denied.

After it was agreed to adjourn the trial for one day, Mr. Clark suggested that the jurors be drawn this morning. Prosecutor Reger opposed this for personal reasons.

Pre-Easter Display of Fashionable Dress Goods

Seems as if Dress Goods manufacturers received advance information, for dress goods of the most beautiful color arrangements have been designed for this season's wearing.

The woman who plans her Spring frocks in advance is ready to enjoy the delightful spring days when spring does come. Too, with Easter only a few days away, one can't begin making Easter clothes too early.

This exhibit of fashionable dress goods at prices now in force again emphasizes the low price mastery attained by this store.

It is generally conceded that our prices are at least 10 per cent. to 20 per cent. LESS than prices of same quality elsewhere. Visit the store and learn to your own satisfaction that you get "more for your money" at Tepper's.

Aside from an extensive range of the new dress fabrics you will find liberal assortments of Dress Trimmings, Wash Goods, Sheer Mercerized Fabrics, Poplins, Foulards, New Madras, Ginghams, Batiste and other cotton fabrics.

These prices are appended as a guidepost to splendid stocks and values in the store.

At 79c yard—We make a strong effort at this price; many stores show duplicates of these 79c dress goods and ask $1.00 for them; it's certainly unusual to see them elsewhere at 79c. The Most Industrious Store in Newark---The City of Industry

Out Pops Beauty From the Bandboxes

The First Day's Show of Millinery Proves a Triumph for the Hahne & Co. Store

Were you here today? Did you see the hats? Were you at the other openings? Did you see the hats there? Did you make comparisons? Did you see any good style of hat anywhere that we did not show? Did you see a color combination that we did not show? Did you see as many kinds of hats anywhere else as here?

Don't bother answering—we know what you'd say to every question, for there is only one answer to each of them, so let us write for those who were not here.

It is needless for us to say that the show of hats we are making today, and will continue to make from this time on thru the season, is the finest and largest to be seen in any New Jersey store. Everybody knows of our millinery magnitude and style supremacy.

But there is this to say—

Hahne & Co.'s store is in closest touch with foreign sources of information on style tendencies. We catch the first hints of changes that are wafted across the Atlantic. Our New York associations put us in most intimate relation with the finest houses in the Metropolis, as well as with some of the more popular concerns, so that we can know exactly what New York women have accepted from Paris. Armed with this knowledge, which no other store can secure so readily, if at all, we fashion our hats for the women of Newark.

That we have in the past judged the taste of the women of Newark aright is evident from the constantly growing patronage accorded our millinery shop. Women from Newark and all the towns of consequence round about for fifty miles—from Elizabeth, from Nutley, from Passaic, from Bloomfield Glen Ridge, Montclair, the Oranges, Chatham, Summit, Madison, Morristown, down to as far as New Brunswick up as far as Dover, from Bayonne, Jersey City, Paterson—women from all around flood us with special orders for the making of beautiful, becoming hats.

Many other thousands buy hats from our stock. From year to year this trade has grown up by leaps and bound till today we sell more hats than any two or three concerns in the State.

We cannot begin to tell what you ought to know about the various styles shown in our opening. But you must do yourself the justice and do us the honor of visiting the store during this opening show that you may see and know just what styles are in vogue. So often there is a lot of fashion talk published which is misleading; for instance, all the talk about the Chantecler hats which you see nowadays would lead you to believe that everybody will wear a rooster on their hats. But don't you believe it. The Chantecler craze has slightly affected colors and has made wings, birds and feathers somewhat more popular; but they will not, by any means, predominate for flowers will be as much in evidence as ever, and will hold their place at the head of hat trimmings—as they should—for Summer wear.

NATIONAL GUARDS TO BE MERGED WITH REGULARS

Washington, March 8.—The initial step toward the organization of an army of 250,000 trained men as a first line of national defense is being taken in accordance with an order just issued by Secretary Dickinson, creating the first field army of the United States. This army consists of three divisions, made up of the National Guard of New York, Connecticut, New Hampshire, Massachusetts and Maine, and the full strength of the regular army in those States. It will consist of 36,000 men. Later other armies will be organized by combining the militia of the other States with the regular army.

It is expected that all the Governors will consent to the State troops being assigned to tactical organizations with the regulars, as in the case of New England. In time of peace the National Guard will remain under the jurisdiction of the State government, but hereafter they will receive instruction with the regular troops, with whom they will be assigned in case of war, and all training will be directed with the end of perfecting an organization which will be relied upon to put into the field on short notice an army of 250,000 men. Each division will have its own quartermasters and ordnance stores and depots.

In case of war the National Guard of New England will mobilize with the regular troops, and come under the command of the head of the department of the East. Similarly when the plan is complete, the militia of other States will mobilize at the selected headquarters under the general command of the regular army head of the division. An effort will be made to encourage National Guard enlistments in the States which are below their quota and an increase in the regular army will, it is expected, provide for adequate instruction of the militia along the lines of the general plan of defense.

Each brigade—consisting of federal and State troops—will have distinguishing insignia in the form of enamel badges and at regular intervals the militia organizations will go to the regular army posts with which they are brigaded for instruction. The scheme is the most far reaching yet undertaken for having an adequate army in the United States subject to immediate call of the President.

MONDAY AFTERNOON CLUB WANTS CHILD PROTECTED

The Monday Afternoon Club yesterday passed a resolution approving the Child Labor Committee's proposed amendment to the Jersey laws. The action was taken after the following letter from Mrs. Cushing, chairman of the Child Labor Committee was read:

Does your organization know that the New Jersey Child Labor laws are below the standard of more advanced States? In order to give the children of New Jersey adequate protection the following changes will be necessary:

1. Extension of the law forbidding the labor of children under 14 so as to include stores, offices, laundries, hotels, theatres, bowling alleys (the present low applies only to factories). 13 States cover all these employments.

2. Regulation of employment of children in messenger service. 15 States have such regulation.

3. Limitation to an 8-hour day for children under 16 years of age (At present limitation is 10 hours a day and 55 hours a week in factories.) 6 States prescribe the 8-hour limit.

4. Prohibition of employment at night of children under 16 years of age. 17 States prohibit such employment.

5. Specific prohibition against child labor in dangerous occupations. (The present law has a vague, general prohibition.) 5 States enforce properly protective laws.

If you feel that it is New Jersey's duty to protect the children on the points stated, will you vote a resolution to that effect and send a copy to Mrs. G. H. Perry, Overlook avenue, Hackensack, giving also the number of your membership.

This should be done immediately as bills covering these questions will probably arise during the present session of the Legislature. The expressed sentiment of your body will be of great value in their behalf.

Very truly yours,
Mrs. G. W. B. Cushing,
Chairman.

Following is the resolution:

Resolved, That the Monday Afternoon Club is in full accord with the object sought to be gained by the New Jersey Child Labor Committee in having the laws of the State of New Jersey changed so as to afford adequate protection to child labor, and approves of the specific points mentioned by that committee in the communication of February 18, 1910.

Respectfully yours,
Lillie G. Hoyt,
Cor. Sec'y.

SOMERVILLE TERRIFIED BY THE LIGHTNING

Somerville, March 8.—An electric storm of unprecedented violence broke over this town at 3 o'clock yesterday morning. Lightning wrecked the fire alarm system and struck a number of residences.

The house of William A. Arkenburg, in Cliff street, was struck and badly damaged. The chimney was demolished and the plaster was knocked from the walls. Gilt molding in a number of rooms which had recently been painted over with a pigment of a dark color because they were tarnished, was stripped of every particle of paint by the lightning and left with a surface like newly burnished gold. Slight fires started in several rooms, and an attempt was made to ring in an alarm, but the fire alarm system had been put out of commission. The fires were finally extinguished before the arrival of the chemical engine.

The residence of Charles Wooley, in Mechanic street, was also struck by a bolt of lightning, which shattered the main chimney of the house and knocked the plaster from the walls of the house without seriously injuring the inmates.

The crash of the thunderbolts was so rapid and terrific as to keep the inhabitants in a state of terror during the half hour that the storm lasted. Electric light and telephone wires fairly bristled with an additional charge of electricity during the storm and many families were terrified by crackling wires and a phenomenal display of blue fire in their homes during the progress of the storm. The electric disturbance was accompanied by a heavy fall of rain and a singular absence of wind.

Kerosene Stove Exploded.

A kerosene heating stove exploded at the home of W. H. Horan, 507 Belvidere avenue, at 8 o'clock last evening. The fire was extinguished before the arrival of the fire department.

Company K's Fair.

Interest is not abating at the fair of Company K now being held in the armory on West Front street. The floor was crowded again last night with merry dancers.

—Richard Waring's cab broke a lamp on the traffic indicator post at the corner of North and Park avenues last night while turning the corner. Mr. Waring replaced the lamp.

Dry Cleaning Talk

Gentlemen's clothes cleaned by a Cleanery with the ability and equipments to produce first-class work, will stay clean longer, as when done by an ordinary suit presser who only brushes the surface dust off and removes the most prominent spots from the surface.

With our process the garments are thoroughly cleaned and disinfected, the linings are cleaned and spots that are removed will stay removed and do not appear again the first time the garments are exposed to the dust and grim of the street.

In the beginning it may cost a little more, but will pay at the end, as the clothes don't have to be at the cleaners every two weeks.

Phone us and our wagon will call.

"MOTHER" SUCCEEDS AT INITIAL PERFORMANCE

"Mother," a play in four acts and as many scenes, had its initial performance at the Plainfield theatre last night before a rather small but critical audience and scored a success from the start. Aside from the expected crudities which are inevitable in a new production and an occasional slip in the lines the play passed off smoothly enough.

Miss Emma Dunn, in the title role, met every requirement of the part of the mother, and she was supported in masterly fashion by the whole company, and particularly well by Frederic Perry, the "eldest son," and "Harry Lake," Freeman Barnes, whose parts aside from that of the leading woman dominated the action of the play. By way of suggestion it may be said that another name for the play would give it a better chance with the Broadway people when it reaches the metropolis in September. The name of the play as now is too suggestive of rushy melodrama, which the play is not.

There is not a dull moment at any stage of the proceedings and the audience last night approved so heartily of the tout ensemble that the actors were forced to acknowledge several curtain calls. Without doubt Mother will take a strong hold on the human hearts as the play is full of dramatic situations in which the maternal instinct rises above the sordid and commonplace conception of forgiveness for sin. No mother ever could be more natural than was Miss Dunn in moments when her heart was full of the love of the son, who through the influence of an unprincipled woman wastes his own and his sisters' and brothers' substance, who even goes to the extreme of forgery to provide the woman with the luxuries of life. The mother even perjures herself to save her son from jail.

The situations are dramatic in the extreme and they were all capably handled. Some comedy is injected into the play by the pair of youthful twins who supply just enough innocent fun to relieve the tension of nervous expectation. There is no possible doubt that the play will meet with success from now on with audiences that are composed of human flesh and blood.

It was the general opinion that the closing scene, the bedroom of the twins, was a too abrupt ending and that a cleverer finale would have been the return of the elopers and a final settling of the whole family in comfort.

As to the plot: It is simple and for a wonder no real villain is revealed. Mrs. Katherine Wetherill, a widow with a large and growing family, together with John Rufus Chase, is trustee for an estate, which at her death goes to the children. William Wetherill, the eldest son, spends his share on an actress and manages to hypothecate the shares of the other members of the family.

In this process of getting money Will Wetherill forges his mother's name to a note for ten thousand dollars and in her almost worship of her son the mother lies to Chase announcing that she herself signed the document. Chase is in love with the widow and tells her so and declares that it is only this love for her which actuates him to save the estate to all hands by having the son pay the penalty for his crime. But after all Mr. Chase does not succeed in convincing the widow that she will better matters and she declines to marry Chase. She connives in an elopement which Lake proposes to her eldest daughter, she separates a younger son from a sister of the woman who has ruined William and in fact she dominates the whole situation in a way which compels admiration.

The play will be given to Trenton tonight and after a week on the road will go to Chicago for the balance of the season. It is booked for Broadway for the beginning of September, but it has seemed good to some to suggest a change in the title of the play, one being "The Awakening."

Three summers ago Miss Dunn, the "mother," was a guest at Camp Berkeley at Berkeley Heights and while there told of her desire for just such a play as that of last night. Hearing of William Jeffery's presence in town last night Miss Dunn paid him the unusual compliment of the offer of a box which he accepted. This morning Mr. Jeffery said that in his opinion the play was a wholesome one and one that every mother and child in the country should see.

Still in Jail.

Frederick Lewis the alleged embezzler, is apparently taking things easily at police headquarters and does not sem to worry much. Although the sureties for his bail bond of $5,000 have not yet put in an appearance he holds to the belief that all will be in readiness for his release tomorrow. The time limit for the furnishing of bail expires tomorrow morning.

JUNIOR ENDEAVORERS GIVE AN ENTERTAINMENT

The entertainment given by the Junior Society of Christian Endeavor in the Sunday-school rooms of Trinity Reformed church last night was well attended and afforded the audience good opportunities to applaud the efforts of the young people who acquitted themselves admirably. The decorations reminded one of a midwinter scene and were very effective. Music was provided for the occasion by Miss Mary Radford. The title of the entertainment was "Mistress Mary's Contrary Reception," and following is the program:

Recitation, a boy's poem on Washington, Howard Willett; piano solo, The Storm, Gladys Hubert; recitation, The Last Hymn, Maud McAfee and Adele Freeman; piano duet, Lawrence and Elmer French; Cradle song, Alma Allegar; violin solo, Millard McAfee, accompanied by Harold Storr; song, I'd Rather Love My Old Rag Dolly than a Bashful Boy Like You," Adele Freeman.

Following this came some pretty tableaux illustrating Mother Goose. Little Jack Horner was represented by Cecil McAfee; Simple Simon and the Pieman, Millard McAfee and Charles Allegar; Jack and Jill, Alfred Willett and Vera McCrady; Blackbirds in the Pie, Carman Trembath and Albert Baker.

The part of Mistress Mary was assumed by Helen Leitheusser and her reception committee was composed of Maud McAfee, Adelaide Cole, Jennis Sears, Adele Freeman, Nellie McAfee, Alice Auten, Alice Thatcher and Elizabeth Chickering. The flower girls were Elsie Zepp, Marion Wooley, Gladys Hubert, Alva Hansen, Alma Allegar, Vera and Hazel McCrady, Dorothy Van Winkle, Grace Soden, Ellen Sharback Helen McAfee, Ella Van Arsdale, Ruth Freeman, Helen Willet and Marjory Storr.

At the close of the entertainment ice cream was served and post cards of Rev. John Y. Broek, Rev. C. Schenck and Dr. Paul W. Harrison were sold. Those who assisted with the refreshments were William Van Nest, Russell Sears Russel Kenney and Ray Stevens. Mrs. R. V. Kinney and Mrs. Lafayette Rosentiehl had charge of the program and A. J. Everett, of Fairview avenue, assisted with the decorations. The proceeds of the entertainment will be devoted to missionary work. The society has an enrollment of 80, with an average attendance of 60.

The Loyal Temperance Legion will hold a regular meeting in the W. C. T. U. rooms tomorrow afternoon at 4 o'clock.

RETURN OF STARLINGS SURE SIGN OF SPRING

More than one sign of spring has come to the knowledge of the people of the East End of the city during the past few days. Budding trees and blades of green grass of course are parts of the earliest signs but the birds which make for the best part of the season count more.

On Thursday evening about sundown a flock of about twenty starlings was noticed on a tree in the rear of the James T. Closson estate. On Friday the number had increased to fifty; on Saturday a hundred more were added and Sunday there were perhaps a thousand of the beautiful black birds with irridescent wings whirling about and chattering away like a lot of magpies.

It was interesting to watch them as they would apparently settle down to roost for the night and then in an instant see the whole flock in flight frightened from the shelter of the big pine trees by a passing automobile or a carriage crossing the bridge to the borough with a loud rumble. A singular thing was noticed in the manner of their flights. As the first frightened pair winged their way toward safety in another direction showing the way to the others, the whole mass of black rose as from a given signal and whirling about made straight for the Watchung hills only to return and repeat the performance. This entertaining spectacle was kept up until darkness finally hid the birds from sight.

Doubtless tonight will witness a return of the harbingers of the spring season in even greater numbers than were seen Sunday night.

ADVANTAGES OF COMBINING TELEPHONE AND TELEGRAPH.

Mr. Brooks, the new manager of the Western Union Telegraph Co., in telling of the new system of letter messages, said:

"Co-operation between the American Telephone and Telegraph Company and the Western Union, which has been the dream of Theodore N. Vail for so many years, has brought about added efficiency to the telegraph service. And it will be our aim to further work together so that the telephone shall be a strong auxiliary to the telegraph. In this general plan of co-operation between the two big services, the very first step whereby telephone subscribers are given charge accounts with the Western Union have proved a great success. The public thought well of it from the start, and the results have been even more encouraging than were anticipated. Of course, the volume of the service will grow with time, because in any new service it take a little while for the general public to learn that a new facility has ben afforded them. Under the new co-operative system, a telephone subscriber can dictate a telegraph message to the office of the Western Union and the cost of the message is charged against the telephone."

HORSE ATE DIAMOND ON EX-JERSEYMAN'S BOSOM.

Joplin, Mo., March 8.—Captain E. O. Barlett, veteran of the Civil War and a wealthy Joplin mine owner, discovered unsuspected epicurean tastes in King, his $1,600 black horse, Saturday, when the animal picked a four carat diamond from his master's shirt front, crushed it between his teeth and swallowed it.

Captain Bartlett was getting ready to go for a drive and went to the horse's head to loosen the hitching strap. The big stone glistened in the sun and attracted King's attention. Reaching over his master's outstretched arm, he calmly picked the diamond from its setting. Captain Bartlett grabbed the horse's mouth and tried to make him disgorge the gem, but King calmly kept on munching. The diamond was valued at $750. Captain E. O. Bartlett formerly lived at Pemberton, Burlington county, N. J.

Miss Laura Clayton, daughter of Thomas Clayton, of Manasquan, and Frank C. Emmons, of Asbury Park, have announced their marriage, on January 12, at the parsonage of the Simpson M. E. church, Long Branch, by the pastor, Rev. Dr. F. A. De Maris.

The statement made at the last session of Millville's City Council that when the official dog catchers capture a valuable dog they trade it to boys for two "ordinary" curs, has caused the city legislators to hold up a bill for $74.25, presented by the officers for a few days' work.

Stricken with convulsions as she was going upstairs Sunday, Mrs. Emma Boggs, fifty-two years old, of 819 North Sixth street, Camden, fell to the floor below and broke her neck. When a physician arrived he said death had been instantaneous. Coroner Litchfield gave a certificate of accidental death.

Charged with inflicting eight severe cuts in the head and face of George H. Arrested near his home on a charge of disorderly conduct and threatening Policeman Kiker, early Sunday morning, Stanley Minick, twenty-two years old, of Seventh and Liberty streets, Camden, is believed to be deranged. He tiptoed upstairs and pushed open his bedroom door to be confronted by a burglar with a pistol in his hands. The robber ordered Bissell to throw up his hands and he did so, but first yelled to his wife to call the police. Then he backed into the doorway, but the thief threw him aside and bounded down the stairs, jumped past Mrs. Bissell, who was standing at the 'phone, and escaped.

New Law Not Needed for Armory.

Trenton, March 8.—Assistant Attorney-General Gaskill has written a letter to Brigadier-General E. F. Collins, of the Second Regiment, stating that it will not be necessary to secure the passage of a bill by the Legislature authorizing the construction of an armory at Elizabeth, provided the State Military Board acts favorably upon the project and the sum required is put into an annual appropriation bill. In connection with the proposed armory in Elizabeth Senator Ackerman announces that the Legislative Appropriation Committee will give a hearing next Monday at 3:30 p. m., on the request for an appropriation of $100,000 for this purpose.

"I have seen the world and you have not."

"But I tell you that will make no difference; that—"

"No man can say that who has no experience to draw upon."

"You are my mentor," said the man, gently. "You have taught me all I know, but sometimes I think that about some things I know more than you, and this is one thing of which I am sure."

"Yes," said the woman, "you can be sure so long as conditions remain as they are at present, but other times, other manners—"

"You have something to tell me?" interposed the other, swiftly.

The woman nodded.

"You said yesterday you would tell me to-day. Why not tell me now?"

"Because—"

She hesitated.

"Are you afraid to tell me?"

"Yes," she said.

"Afraid of what?"

"Of losing you."

"Banish that fear."

"But 'tis not that that keeps me silent."

"What then?"

"I would have the world's comment on what I say when I say it."

"The world's comment! What is the world's comment to me?"

"A test, a trial of your feelings! If it breaks my heart, you must know."

"If you feel that way about it," said the man resolutely, "you need tell me nothing at all."

It was a brave thing to say, for her mysterious words filled him with dubiety and dismay. He had no idea what it was that she could tell him. He had no experience by and through which to embody her vague hints into something real and tangible. He knew that he was terribly grieved, and but that he had no way to describe the pain of jealousy, he would have said that he was racking with that unhappy emotion.

"Tell me nothing," he repeated again, "if it grieves you."

"Are you afraid of the test?" she asked, swiftly.

"I am afraid of nothing, except losing you."

"I am not worthy of you," returned the woman, "as I told you, but if you will still have me if you will take me when I have said what I must say, and when the world has said what it will say, then I shall be yours as long as I live."

"It is well," said the man. "I wait the ship now eagerly that I may show you that what I have said is true."

"The vessel is nearer now," she said at last, rising from where they had been seated together upon the grass absorbed in each other, and pointing seaward.

"Yes," he answered, "I can even see the figures upon the deck."

"Your brother men."

"Will there be some women on the ship?"

"I do not know," she answered, quickly. "It isn't likely. Do you wish to see other women?"

"None," was the instant answer. "I wondered if my brothers would bring you sisters. That was all."

There was absolutely no dissimulation about the man. There had been no coquetry about her. He would simply have failed entirely to understand what it was. He was as honest, as straightforward, as absolute simplicity and sincerity must ever be, and she had met him exactly on his own ground. It was impossible, therefore, for her to misapprehend his mere casual interest.

She stood quietly studying the approaching vessel. As she did so, it came to her mind that there was something strangely familiar about the oncoming ship. She stared longer, and the conviction grew upon her. When she realized it she clasped her hand to her heart with a sudden gasp and turned a white face upon him. He was all solicitude in an instant.

"What is the matter?" he cried. "Your face is white; you look so strangely."

"It is a sudden pain," she gasped, terror and dismay constricting her throat.

She wavered. He thought she was going to fall. He stepped closer to her and put his arm about her.

"No, no!" she said, repulsing.

It was the first command she had given him in those bygone days when he had stood dumbly before her.

"No, no!" she pushed him away. "I shall be all right."

"And has the approach of men deprived me of the privilege of touching you?" he asked, wistfully. "What is the matter?"

"Don't ask me now," she answered. "I—I—cannot explain."

The vessel was nearer now and as she stared it came to a stop and swung broadside to the reef. There was no mistaking it. It was the Southern Cross. She knew it as well as she knew her own face. The thing which she had dreaded so when she fled from that vessel in the launch, which she had dreaded for a time in the first period of her sojourn on the island, had come to pass. It was the very yacht from which she had escaped. Undoubtedly it bore the man from whom she had fled. He had come to claim her. Of all the teeming millions which the world held, this was he whom she would fain have avoided. Rather anyone and every one had come to her than he! What would happen when these men met? The story that she would have told him to-day in her own way had the ship not appeared, the story that she would have told him on her decks, had that ship been other than it was, he must now learn by the brutal force of circumstances, through some compelling necessity which she could not in any way influence or alter. She loathed the man who was coming to aid her. Her Christianity trembled in the balance. She would fain have called invectives down upon his head, and for the moment she swept the whole sex together in one unreasoning hatred and resentment in which the man of the island participated. What sorry jest had blind fate played upon her?

She moved farther away from her companion under the constraint of these thoughts, and when he would have approached her nearer, she flamed upon him in sudden anger that left him appalled. But under the influence of it he kept his distance. She saw the way of the yacht checked. She saw the boat dropped from the davits and manned by the men. She saw a figure, too far off to recognize, but which she divined must be his, descend the battens from the gangway. She saw the little boat headed toward the shore. Then she turned to the man. He was standing with folded arms, his brow black as midnight, staring out to sea. He knew nothing, understood nothing, comprehended nothing, suspected nothing. His only realization was that she, his gentle goddess, whom he had loved, was angry with him, so far as he was concerned, without rhyme or reason or cause.

ELIZABETH ON TOP IN EXCITING STRUGGLE

The Elizabeth Y. M. C A. basketball aggregation downed the locals on the home court Saturday night in an exciting struggle, by the score of 30 to 28. It was the hardest game of the season and was marked by brilliant playing on both sides. So keen was the play that at the end of the first half the score was 10 to 10 and when the whistle blew at the end of final half the score was 27 to 27.

It required eleven minutes to decide the issue and Reeves won the game for the visitors by shooting a sensational goal from midfield. Both teams had opportunities to win on fouls in the extra period, but the players were so nervous that they were unable to negotiate the basket. The lineup:

REACH'S BASEBALL FOR 1910 IS ISSUED.

Reach's Official American League Guide for 1910, published by the A. J. Reach Company, of Philadelphia, and edited by Mr. Francis C. Richter, of "Sporting Life," is out, and is, as usual, first in the field, thus making it the harbinger of the base ball season. It can be said without any qualification that, excellent as all of the editions of the Reach Guide have been in recent years the 1910 Guide is the best hand book of the kind ever issued by this or any other publisher. The special distinction of the 1910 Guide is, next to the text, quality of paper used and the number and beauty of the engravings furnished, the world's championship series being specially well dowered with splendid action pictures. The American League Guide for 1910 is in all respects a first class hand book for the National game and a decided credit to the American League and to the publishers, the Reach Company. This is the ninth annual issue of the Reach Guide as the official handbook of the American League and the twenty-eighth consecutive year of its publication as a book of record and reference for the entire base ball world.

N. P. H. S. RECEIVES THE BASKETBALL TROPHY.

Superintendent H. C. Krebs, of the borough High School, received yesterday morning from Physical Director Listman, of the Y. M. C. A., the silver loving cup, emblematic of the interscholastic basketball championship which was won by the borough school five. This makes the second cup won by the school, its team having also won the championship last year.

Accompanying the trophy were six medals which will be given to members of the victorious team which includes Russell Conroy, Carlton Smith, Harry Smith, Preston Dunning, Fred Becker and Herbert Stine. The trophy will be officially presented to the school at the chapel exercises tomorrow morning by Mr. Krebs, on which occasion the latter will also present the medals to members of the team.

All Day Shoot

An all day clay bird bird tournament will be conducted at Tom Brantingham's clubhouse on Park avenue on Wednesday. Loaded shells can be procured on the grounds.

SAYS BIBLE FOLK TRY TO HURT HER BUSINESS

Miss B. L. Clarke, publisher of "Daily Attractions in New York," has sued and obtained an injunction against a supposedly rival publication called "Every Day in New York" and published by Rev. Dr. K. P. Ketchum and Rev. Dr. A. L. White, of New York. Dr. Ketchum was formerly a pastor of the First Presbyterian church, of this city. Miss Clarke avers that the scheme of the two clergymen is to spoil her business and as they have intimated the type, cover and general appearance of her little magazine she has instituted proceedings to prevent her business being ruined.

At the office of "Every Day in New York" it was said yesterday that no papers had been served and that the owners of the publication, which by the way is being financed by Miss Helen Gould, would welcome its appearance in court in order to settle the question and the sooner the better.

PRESENT MAYORS' BILLS

Senator Wakelee Introduces Two Important Measures for Municipalities.

ONE FIXES A DEBT LIMIT.

Other for Municipal and County Accounting—Mayor Fisk, Chairman of Mayors' Conference, Interested.

Following the instructions of mayors of more than fifty municipalities, who organized at Trenton as a State association last month, the legislative committee of that body last night had Senator Edmund W. Wakelee, of Bergen, introduce two bills in the Senate.

The first is a measure which fixes a debt limit for all municipalities and counties in the State and method of issuing and providing proper sinking funds for all bonds. The other provides for a uniform system of municipal and county accounting in this State.

One act provides for the establishing and enforcing of a uniform system of accounts in all mupnicipalities throughout the State and an annual audit under State control, creating a department, which would bear a similar relation to all municipalities as the department of Banking and Insurance does to the banks and insurance companies in the State.

The importance of this bill is obvious as it will require in all cases a systematic system of accounting, showing where and how the taxpayers money is used, and accounts of all municipal officers are subject to strict audit.

In States where similar laws have been put in force, in every instance it has resulted in a large saving to the taxpayers. In the State of Massachusetts at this time a great deal of attention is being given to this matter. In the State of Wyoming the head of the department reports that it has brought about the saving of over 30 per cent. in the taxes during the last ten eyars, although the population of the State has increased over onehalf. In the State of Ohio the head of the department States that during the last decade they have saved over one million of dollars a year.

The other bill is entitled "An Act to define and limit the powers of counties, cities, towns and other municipal corporations, to issue bonds or other evidence of debt and to provide for the payment of such debt."

This proposed act, if it becomes a law as indicated by the title, defines the method of arriving at the net funded debt" and limits the powers of counties, cities, towns and other municipalities to create indebtedness to a certain percentage of the ratables. The limit proposed for counties is 2 per cent., cities 7 per cent. and other municipalities to 10 per cent. of the ratables.

Also provides in cities hat the governing body shall not create a funded debt over 5 per cent. without first submitting the question to the legal voters and in other municipalities no debt shall be incurred without the approval of the legal voters. The law also provides for the creating of a board of sinking fund commissioners and a sinking fund to provide for the payment of bonds as they fall due. Also provides in a general way for the purposes for which bonds may be issued. All bonds issued for the purpose of constructinfg a water plant are not included in the percentage of net debt allowed.

The present laws relating to indebtedness are vague and in some cases conflicting, and although the limitation is supposed to be fifteen per cent. of the ratables in boroughs and some other municipalities, there are laws permitting indebtedness for certain purposes far in excess of statutory or charter limitations. There are now over two hundred laws on the statute books relating to the issue of bonded and floated indebtedness of musnicipal corporations, most of which will be superseded by this one general law authorizing municipalities to incur debt for most any permanent improvement up to a certain maximum limit. The importance of a law of this kind in connection with the laws providing for equitable assessment of general property subject to taxation and limiting the tax rate is obvious to all, nearly every State in the Union has such a statutory of Constitutional limitation of municipal indebtedness.

Taking the above into consideration together with the laws of various States limiting the investment of trust funds and saving banks in municipal bonds to such cities where the bonded indebtedness is limited and does not exceed a certain percentage of the ratables. Also the genral tendency to increase indebtedness for the constructing of public improvement in advance of requirements and beyond a safe and conservative limit, the importance of such a law to the taxpayers in all municipalities in this State cannot be over estimated. It is admitted, however, certain adjustments or amendments may have to be made to provide for local conditions where the limit proposed has already been reached or exceeded, and if it should develope that such was the case and that in some places a safe limit had been already exceeded, it would be all the more apparent why such a law should be enacted to protect the interests of the taxpayers in the future.

Mayor Charles J. Fisk of this city, as chairman of the legislative committee of the conference of mayors, explained the two measures which represented the sentiment of the municipal executives of more than half the State's population. There is no debt limit fixed by law in this State, and consequently no outside market for New Jersey bonds.

Y. M. C. A. NOTES.

The Y. M. C. A. State championships will be decided at Paterson on Saturday. Although Plainfield won the title last year little interest is being displayed in this year's championship, and the chances are that this city will not be represented in the meet.

The crack Belleville quintet will be the opponents of the locals next Saturday night.

Arrested for Theft.

Patrick Moore, a colored man, hailing from Montclair, was taken into custody by Detective Sergeant John Flynn yesterday at noon while at work in Burns' barber shop on Watchung avenue. Moore is accused of having stolen about fifty dollars' worth of barbers' supplies from a shop in Montclair. Detective Riley, of that city, took Moore to Montclair this morning to answer the charge.

Bernard Kelly.

Bernard, the eleven-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Nicholas Kelly, of Westervelt avenue, died last night after a brief illness. The funeral service will be held tomorrow afternoon at 2:30 o'clock.

Charles L. Hyde is ill with pneumonia at his apartments at Truell Hall.

Declares He Saved David Henriques From Felon's Cell, and Others From Financial Stress.

If the story told by Frederick Lewis, the aged prisoner at police headquarters, who is being held pending extradition, is true, then the persons who have caused his arrest on the charge of embezzlement will have some difficulty in proving their case against him. Mr. Lewis was in the mood for talking yesterday and gave a succinct and graphic account of his connection with the Henriques family.

According to the tale, Mr. Lewis was by intermarriage with the family intimately associated with its various members and on one occasion has prevented at least one member from going to prison to say nothing of the countless number of times he has rescued the entire family from penury and disgrace.

"Why," said Mr. Lewis, "those people instead of having me arrested ought to look upon me as their benefactor. They are ingrates. Once, not so long ago I paid out of my own pocket $450 for board for them so that when they wanted to change from one place to the other they might do so without having trouble about getting their personal belongings.

"On another occasion when the insurance policy for $5,000 which had nearly lapsed because of deferred payments of premiums I stepped into the breach and paid the money, thus securing to the family the full amount of the policy and this I did without ever receiving anything in the way of recompence for my outlay. Then, you know, when David Henriques died I actually took the whole family under my care and looked after them. Talk about stealing money, why I had no chance to get even what they actually owed me.

"Mrs. Henriques tells the story of one of the family starving to death. Well, as a matter of fact, that is all huncombe. One of the female members of this bunch of people did go to the Island, but through no fault of mine. She was sent there for the reason that she was mentally incompetent and had to be sent to some institution for safe keeping and there were other troubles leading up to this which would hardly bear presenting to the people in a newspaper.

"I cannot see anything in this whole affair, but a piece of petty spite, which becomes greater by the same means that a little story grows in common gossip. I never handled the sum of money mentioned in the indictment they found against me in New York. Altogether I believe there were $9,000 in the entire estate and that has been accounted for long before now. No, sir, I am not any more guilty of embezzling the money than you are and I am not afraid to go to New York city to face those who would do me further injustice. I fight against it only on account of my son and daughter who will feel the disgrace and obloquy of even the suspicion that their father is dishonest.

Mr. Lewis has some mighty interesting documents to prove at least a part of his contentions and perhaps enough to save him from filling a felon's cell. He is at least optimistic.

This morning it was announced that Robert Newton Crane had withdrawn from the case and that Craig A. Marsh would conduct the further proceedings in person. Mr. Lewis will remain at police headquarters until requisition papers arrive. Assistant Prosecutor Walter Hetfield, Jr., has consented to the arrangement for Lewis' detention here as it involves no expense to the city, Mr. Lewis paying his own board.

The actual process of identification of Lewis by Detective Sergeant Flynn was a simple thing. The photograph of the man was taken so long ago that the features were not easily recognizable, but in the scarf which he wore when the picture was taken appeared a pin peculiar to the fashion of the time and it was through the pin that Detective Flynn's curiosity was excited. Quick comparisons while facing the man on a street car led to closer inspection of the features which finally induced the detective to place Lewis under arrest.

FUNERAL SERVICES OF MISS CATHARINE BOND

The funeral of Miss Catherine L. Bond was held from her late home, 720 Kensington avenue, at 3 o'clock this afternoon. There was a large attendance of relatives and friends. Rev. Dr. C. E. Herring, pastor of the First Presbyterian church, of which Miss Bond was a life-long member, officiated and spoke words of eulogy concerning the exemplary Christian life of the departed, which had been lived in a quiet and unassuming way.

There were many beautiful floral tributes from relatives and friends. The burial was in the North Plainfield cemetery and the pall-bearers, all nephews, were Clarence E. Bond, Clarence Leslie Bond, G. P. Hinman, Russell Bond, of this city; Alexander Linnett, Jr., and Edgar B. Linnett, of Newark.

PLAN TRIP TO 'FRISCO ON THEIR BIKES SOON

George Adams and Percy Haberle, two young men of this city, who have achieved considerable fame as bicycle riders, having taken many prizes in competition in road races, are planning to take a trip to California on their wheels. They have not decided just when they will start, but it will doubtless be early this summer as they want to spend the warm weather on the trip.

Both Adams and Haberle are carpenters by trade and they will plan to do odd jobs at their trade en route across the country. If they reach their destination next fall they will be satisfied. The young men believe that the trip will afford an ideal way of spending the summer and at the same time give them a chance to see the country, all of which is new to them.

Adams, who resides on Netherwood avenue, and who has been working in Newark at his trade, has found abundant exercise and good training in riding his wheel to and from Newark each day when the weather would permit. Both he and Haberle are considered good long distance riders and they have no fear of being unable to cover the distance to the Pacific Coast.

REV. ROYAL A. STOUT HAS ACCEPTED CALL

Rev. Royal A. Stout has accepted the call to the Netherwood Reformed church, which was presented to him on Saturday, and he will be publicly installed at the church early in June. A committee comprising Enoch Berry, Claude Gopad and John Johnson representing the church waited on Mr. Stout on Saturday and secured his acceptance.

Mr. Stout is in the Theological Seminary, New Brunswick, and ever since the Netherwood Reformed church was established, he has been acting pastor. He has been successful in the work and is well liked by the members of the church and congregation. The fact that he has accepted the call to the pastorate has been received with much pleasure.

AS WILSON FREDERICK KNEW SENATOR PLATT

Although tributes by the thousands have been paid to former U. S. Senator Thomas C. Platt, president of the U. S. Express Company, whose death occurred in New York on Monday, and who was buried today at his old home and birthplace, Tioga, New York, there are none more eloquent or sincere than the praise bestowed on the dead political leader by Wilson S. Frederick, of Dunellen, the local manager of the U. S. Express Company.

"Mr. Platt was a man of genial nature," said Mr. Frederick to a Daily Press reporter today, "and he was liked by everybody who knew him. As president of the U. S. Express Company, he was beloved by the thousands of employes of the company. Any employe could approach him, even the humblest office boy. The men in the U. S. Express Company will miss him greatly.

"Mr. Platt was a man who was always trying to do good to somebody. He always did it in a quiet way and the outside world will never know the extent of his good deeds. He was always temperate in all things and he never went to extremes. One of Mr. Platt's fine traits was that he never got angry."

Mr. Frederick as he came in contact with Mr. Platt constantly for several years while stationed at the New York offices of the U. S. Express Company.

In speaking of Mr. Platt, Mr. Frederick referred to the time when he was injured in the Westfield wreck seven years ago last January. When the former man was apprised of the accident he telegraphed the New Jersey superintendent of the company to engage as many doctors and nurses as necessary. The telegram read in part: "Get six doctors and nurses if necessary."

FOR CHILDREN'S GOOD

Owen F Lovejoy Tells Why Better Legislation is Needed.

AT CRESCENT AVE. CHURCH.

Urges Men and Women to Use Influence with Senator Ackerman to Favor Bill Before Senate.

Owen R. Lovejoy, general secretary of the National Child Labor Committee, in his lecture before the Men's Club of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church last night besought the influence of the members with Senator Ernest R. Ackerman to urge the passage of the Child Labor bill which is now before the Senate. This bill which prohibits the employment of children under the age of sixteen years in factories has already passed the House and is to come up shortly in the Senate.

Another project which the committee has before the Federal Government is the establishment of what is termed a "Federal Children's Bureau," whose object is to collect and disseminate information affecting the welfare of children, similar to bureaus already established by the Government regarding various forms of our material wealth as Bureaus of Entomology, Chemistry, Animal Industry and the like.

Lindsay Best, president of the club, introduced the speaker of the evening and remarked that the days of Knight Errantry are not gone, in so far as the care of the weaker by the stronger of mankind is concerned. Children being weaker than men are entitled to the chivalrous concern of everybody with red blood in his veins.

Mr. Lovejoy, taking up the theme of chivalry declared that when knighthood was in flower the great principle was to defend the weak and it was even so with primitive man, but with the onrush of commercialism instead of putting the children in the rear with the women they have been rushed to the front to bear the brunt of the fight and those who were strong survived while the weak ones succumbed to the overpowering adversaries, disease and moral obliquity.

Child labor is not accidental nor incidental. It has been a study and there were according to the census of 1900 more than 1,700,000 children employed in factories in these United States, all of whom were under the age of sixteen. After the publication of these figures an investigation was started which revealed that not all of the children were working under conditions which called for more humanitarian conditions so the investigation was partially dropped, but there was enough misery depicted in the reading between lines to cause the formation of the child labor committee which has worked with unflagging zeal ever since. The motto adopted by the committee is "The Evils of Child Labor Must be Abolished."

Methods in vogue in England a couple of centuries ago were worse if anything than some of the conditions here. In those places where children of tender years were chained to a coal car in the bottom of a mine were made to do the work of an animal. Farm work at early years does not usually hurt the child in fact he grows stronger with the outdoor air, hearty food and pleasant environment. But these things are not the portion of the sweat shop worker. Their is the fetid atmosphere, absolute drudgery twelve, fourteen and even eighteen hours every day and night and this is the cause in many thousands of cases of the physical, moral and mental downfall of many of the American born children. This committee wants to show the child the value of honest labor to the betterment of his manhood.

Pennsylvania with its coal mines and glass factories is one of the worst States in the union for the abuse of the child. Mr. Lovejoy described graphically the conditions under which the boys work at the coal breakers and at the furnaces, telling of the great percentage of accidents to boys as compared to men (300 per cent.) The law which went into effect on January 1 last has been the means of liberating some fifteen thousand boys from the slavery of the mines.

Mr. Lovejoy also paid his respects to a misleading article in one of the recent magazines in which the child labor problem in the cotton mills of the South were held to be the best thing for the children that could be devised. The South is not alone in employing children in its cotton mills for in Rhode Island there exists a similar state of affairs. If we educate all our children, the speaker said, there will be no so-called unskilled laborers by and by. Everything can be done better by the educated laborer than by the one who

The affair is arranged in honor of Supreme Chief Ranger Elliott G. Stevenson, of Detroit, Mich., who will make an address. Several selections will be given by the Lotus Glee Club.

Supreme Chief Ranger Stevenson will be entertained by the Elizabeth Foresters tonight and Former Governor Foster M. Voorhees will preside at the reception.

MANY OFFENDERS IN POLICE COURT TODAY

Clifford Hill, of Scotch Plains, was fined five dollars this morning by City Judge William N. Runyon for being drunk and disorderly on Madison avenue last night. Hill caused the arrest of Samuel Hunt, of West Third street, claiming Hunt had robbed him of seven dollars. Hunt escaped with a suspended sentence. Both men are colored.

Mrs. Essie Brango, who owns a pair of goats and keeps them on her premises at George street and Jackson avenue, will have to tether them so that they will not break away and annoy the neighbors. Several complaints were made against the animals for foraging on adjourning land. Mrs. Brango promised to chain them up.

Albert Brinkley, of 308 Berkman street, a colored bicycle rider, was caught riding his wheel on the sidewalk yesterday at Woodland avenue and East Seventh street. This morning Judge Runyon warned him that a repetition of the offence would result in a fine.

George Lewis, colored, arrested on complaint of Mrs. Annie Estell, also colored, of West Second street, for assault, was discharged this morning. It was shown that the "green eyed monster" was responsible for the charge.

Someone stole a bicycle belonging to Walter Kennedy from in front of the First M. E. church last night.

PLEASANT EVENING FOR TRINITY'S ENDEAVORERS.

Under the auspices of the Christian Endeavor Society of Trinity Reformed church, a largely attended business meeting and social was held in the Sunday-school room of the church last night. Only routine matters were considered at the business session.

During the social hour there were piano duets by the Misses Minnie and Marie Hahn, and then games were played. A feature was a guessing contest. A large card-board elaborately decorated and representing pictures of "Priscilla" and "Puritan" was displayed. Open spaces were left for the face and various members of the society would stand behind the cardboard show their face and the audience would then guess the name of the person, affording plenty of amusement. Refreshments were served.

The committee in charge comprised Miss May Randolph, chairman, Miss Edna Dilts, Miss Elsie Dunavan, Miss Edna Cole, Miss Marie Hahn, Miss Minnie Hahn, Russell Doeringer, Edward Honeyman, Elmer Gayle and Alfred W. Dunavan.

MISS PETRIE WILL TELL OF THE AMERICAN INDIAN.

The monthly missionary meeting of Warren chapel will be held tonight at the chapel, when Miss Josephine Petrie, the missionary, will give an interesting account of her trip to Alaska. She will tell of the American Indian. There are very few women missionaries who have been to Alaska and Miss Petrie is one of them.

This meeting is held at this time instead of March 31, owing to the fact that the missionary accounts in New York close earlier than usual and the members of the chapel are anxious to make the collections complete tonight.

BALL CLUB TO GIVE BANQUET TO PLAYERS

At a meeting of the Plainfield Baseball Club last night it was voted to tender a farewell banquet early in April to Clifford Randolph, James Emery and John Martin, former members of the local team, who will play in the the minor league arena during the coming season. The committee in charge is Manager Ernest Dorflinger, Arthur Fluck and Russell Randolph.

The New Jersey League proposition was also discussed. Mr. Dorflinger and Adam Shott were named as a committee to attend the meeting of the league at Perth Amboy next Sunday. A meeting of the club will be held on Tuesday night, March 22 to make a decision on the matter.

Ira Van Arsdale, a former player of the team, was named as umpire for next season.

COPS NEED PISTOL PRACTICE; SO SAYS MRS. VICTORISON

According to Mrs. Oscar Victorison, of Summit avenue, some Plainfield cop is badly in need of practise in markmanship. Mr. Victorison had a dog. The animal wandered away from home on Sunday and bit a woman on Watchung avenue. A local cop captured the canine and telephoned to police headquarters for instructions.

"Shoot the dog" was the order that came back on the wires.

The cop, therefore, tied the dog to a tree and drew his trusty revolver from his pocket. Taking aim he banged away at the dog four times. Two of the bullets hit the dog, one missed, while the final shot ploughed through the rope and enabled the bullet loaded dog to make its escape.

Yesterday the dog returned home in a suffering condition. Mrs. Victorison called in Dr. L. S. Pocock, a veterinary surgeon, and he recommended that the dog be shot, as there was no chance of saving its life. The dog went to the land where all good bow-wows go at 10 o'clock this morning.

LEWIS THOMAS IS ILL IN THE PHILIPPINES

Word has been received by relatives of Lewis Thomas, the former local newspaper reporter, that he is seriously ill in the Philippine Islands. Mr. Thomas was stricken down with a fever several months ago and the last heard from him was that he is still in the hospital. His relatives are trying to prevail on him to return home soon as he is able to make the long trip.

Mr. Thomas laid down the pad and pencil in local newspaperdom nine years ago next August, when he went to the Islands as a school teacher in the employ of Uncle Sam. He taught school for one year and then quit to engage in mercantile pursuits with a large American trading company. He has traveled all through the Archipelago and has been successful.

MRS. SHERIDAN DEAD AT THREE SCORE AND TEN.

Mrs. Bridget Sheridan, widow of the late James Sheridan, died at the home of a daughter on West Second street last night after an illness which dated back to January. She was about seventy years of age. She was a native of Ireland where she was married. About fifty years ago Mr. and Mrs. Sheridan came to America, and for twenty-two years she had been a resident of this city. Mr. Sheridan died fourteen years ago.

Eight children survive the deceased, Mrs. John Cahill, Mrs. George Hipp, and three sons, Thomas, Peter and Philip, of this city, and three other daughters, Mrs. William Gray, of Meriden, Mrs. Arthur Youngman, of New York, and Miss Annie Wallace, of Brooklyn. The funeral arrangements will be announced tomorrow.

Trolley Frightened Horse.

A horse attached to a delivery wagon belonging to Frank Neidig and driven by Bert Mulford, was frightened by a trolley car on Somerset street yesterday afternoon and ran away. Mulford secured control of the animal before any damage resulted.

Always the Same Story.

A woman on Park avenue lost a black satin waitress' dress on Saturday, and it was found by Charles Curran, a hackman of 469 West Third street, a reader of The Daily Press, who saw the advertisement in this newspaper, and returned to the owner.

ORGANIZE A CIVIC CLUB

Municipal Problems are Discussed by Men Who Form a Society.

OPPOSE PERSONAL TAX IDEA.

Water Scheme and Sanitary Garbage Collection Also Topics at a Truly Interesting Meet- of the Body.

The Plainfield Civic Club is the new name given to the Plainfield Board of Trade auxiliary, which has been known as the Board of Trade Class and the Board of Trade Debating Society, during its brief, but active existence. The name was adopted unanimously at the meeting of the organization which was conducted at the Plainfield Business College. President Jeffery announced that there would be no dues or cumbersome rules but when funds were needed for incidental expenses he would pass the hat among the members.

The program ararnged for last night was a discussion of the water question, but owing to the inability of Councilman Mygatt to be present, owing to pressure of councilmanic duties, the subject was discussed in an informal manner along with the personal tax question, sewers, sidewalks and the postal savings bill, which is now before Congress.

In the discussion of the measure which recently passed the Assembly and is now in the Senate making a $200 exemption on personal property Council L. B. Woolston, of the borough, and Mr. Jeffery endorsed the bill in plain language. The arguments which were put forth resulting in a resolution being adopted urging Senator E. R. Ackerman to use his best efforts to have the measure passed in the Senate. Speaking in favor of the measure Mr. Woolston said in part:

"I don't know whether you gentleman know it or not, but we have a system of taxation in this State which only effects the poor. I refer to the personal tax law which I claim is most unjust. The law is wrong and the matter should be righted. There are lots of people who should be exempt. The poor people are being taxed out of proportion to their means. There are pictures hanging on the walls of the houses of rich men, worth far more than the poor man's furniture that are not taxed at all."

Mr. Woolston cited an incident which came under his observation in the borough recently and called attention to his hearers that the bill to exempt personal property taxation to the sum of $200 is now before the Senate and that efforts should be made to have it passed. Mr. Woolston also rapped the assessors of Newark who recently opposed the passage of the bill in the House. He declared that these assessors represented 40,000 small assessments.

Mr. Jeffery declared he was glad to see that the people are waking up on the subject of taxation. He declared himself in favor of having the personal tax law eliminated altogether and in referring to the present measure he said:

"A $200 exemption is charity; the people don't want charity, but want justice. A personal property tax is either right or wrong. The people who have lots swear it off, but the people who don't have lots of it, can't swear it off. I believe in paying to the government in proportion to what one receives.

"The personal property tax operates hard on the farmer. The tiller of the soil is taxed for his horses, wagons and cows and on every hand, while the man who owns stocks and bonds escape. The farmer is always caught with the goods on.

"I want to go on record as favoring the exemption of all personal property taxes. The government has no business to collect taxes in that manner, no more right to do so, than it did in taking slaves. There is too much government interference nowadays.

F. A. Duttenhoffer, also echoed the sentiments expressed by Messrs. Woolston and Jeffery. He declared it is a vital question and that there are lots of people not paying one cent personal taxes who should be paying.

Mr. Woolston also had something to say on the water question. He declared he is not in sympathy with the present movement for municipal ownership of a water plant. Plainfielders, he said, should be thankful that they are able to get good water at reasonable rates.

"I think the city shoul have owned its water works when it had an opportunity. A charter was kicking around for $200 or $300 a number of years ago, but the Council would not touch it; today it will cost one million dollars.

"Bigger things are wanted by

HOME NEWS.

Of Interest to Everyone in Plainfield.

In every newspaper in the country you will read statements made by people living in out-o-the-way places, who are supposed to have been cured or derived great benefit from some wonderful remedy or "cure-all." But here in Plainfield we only publish statements made by Plainfield people—the testimony of your friends, neighbors and fellow-townsmen.

Mrs. C. Rosseter, 127 Watchung avenue, Plainfield, N. J., says: "Several years ago I had severe backaches and occasional attacks of rheumatism. Being told that Doan's Kidney Pills were very effective in cases of this nature and believing that my trouble arose from disordered kidneys, I procured a box of this remedy from Randolph's Pharmacy. I soon found relief and since that time I have always kept Doan's Kidney Pills in the house. Whenever I feel out of sorts, I take a few doses of this preparation and I am soon feeling good. Doan's Kidney Pills have my highest endorsement."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

Remember the name Doans—and take no other.

STRONG SENTIMENT FOR TROLLEY LEAGUE

Should the proposed New Jersey State League fail to organize at Perth Amboy, next Sunday, it is probable that steps will be taken to form a four club circuit to consist of Plainfield, Dunellen, Bound Brook and Somerville. Manager Dorflinger favors such an idea and between now and Sunday the status of the managers of the other three towns will be obtained.

Mr. Dorflinger entertains the belief that if a schedule of four games with each club is adopted, on the same lines as the old city league arrangement, it would be a big success. Such an arrangement would permit the championship season to open on Decoration Day and close about Labor Day. It would also give all clubs opportunities to play exhibition games with out of town teams, and also play Sunday games independent, if desired.

Chester McCauley will doubtless handle the managerial reins in Somerville and he will be assisted by Bogert Conklin in the formation of a team to represent the Somerset county seat. McCauley is said to favor such circuit and is counted on to support the movement.

The managements of the Dunellen and Bound Brook clubs will be sounded in the next few weeks. Charley Newhouse the veteran backstop, will pilot the team from the Raritan and Dunellen is to select a manager in the next few weeks.

SHARP BATTLES IN SUNDAY SCHOOL A. L.

Keen contests marked the basketball contests in the Sunday School Athletic League at the Y. M. C. A. Monday night. The most exciting encounter was between the First Baptist and Scotch Plains fives, which was won by the 'Plains aggregation by the score of 18 to 11. The Congregational five downed the Crescent Avenue quintet by a score of 35 to 12, and Hope chapel forfeited to Grace P. E. on their non-appearance. The teams lined up as follows:

First Baptist—J. Manning, Stine, forwards; Collier, center; Vail, L. Manning, Fountain, guards. Scotch Plains—J. Todd, Clark, forwards; Lidgate, center; H. Todd, Beeken, Carter, guards.

Officials, Doane, timekeeper; Dunning, scorer.

Y. M. C. A. NOTES.

The Grays and Blues were scheduled to play in the Business Men's League Monday afternoon but the former team forfeited the game to the Grays as only three players put in an appearance.

That basketball is popular as a sport among the boys of this city is demonstrated by some statistics furnished by Physical Director Listman. Mr. Listman stated yesterday that there are twenty-three leagues in operation at the Y. M. C. A. with a total enrollment of 198 different players.

The victory of Scotch Plains over the First Baptists in the Sunday School League Monday night was a popular triumph. The 'Plains team had a full complement of rooters out who cheered their favorites on from start to finish.

The Marathon A. C. baseball team, of Newark, has written Director Listman for dates.

Swimming For Boys.

Beginning on Monday, March 14, the free swimming classes will open at the Y. M. C. A. The enrollment will be limited to 303 members and boys from this city, Dunellen and Westfield are eligible to join the classes. There will be half hour periods, from 2 to 4:30 o'clock.

Pastorate for Newarker.

New Brunswick, March 9.—George H. Donovan, of the Theological Seminary, has accepted a call to the Reformed church of Cobleskill, N. Y., and will take charge June 1. He will succeed Rev. Alexander S. Vandyke, formerly pastor of the Highland Park Reformed church. Mr. Donovan is a Newark resident.

TAFT AND HIS APPETITE AS SHOWN AT NEWARK.

Washington, March 9.—Eating may not be one of the best things President Taft does, but it is certainly one of the things he does best.

For instance, not long ago, the President attended a banquet at Newark, N. J. He did ample justice to the provender, and there was no scarcity thereof. The menu was at least two feet long, and in these days of high food prices it would have struck terror to the heart of the bravest housewife. After the banquet the President delivered a rather lengthy speech. Perhaps that explains what followed. Maybe speaking whets his appetite, for when the President climbed aboard his private car, fifteen minutes after rising from the banquet board, he hailed the porter with:

"Anything to eat?"

There was, and the President got it.

Pre-Easter Display of Fashionable Dress Goods

Seems as if Dress Goods manufacturers received advance information, for dress goods of the most beautiful color arrangements have been designed for this season's wearing.

The woman who plans her Spring frocks in advance is ready to enjoy the delightful spring days when spring does come. Too, with Easter only a few days away, one can't begin making Easter clothes too early.

Glad You Like Our Gowns Thank You for Your Compliments

Our Reward

When we have looked at the multitudious samples of Suits and Dresses presented to us for selection by the vast tailoring houses of the country; when we have studied styles and made comparisons of quality and price until we are well nigh driven to despair; when we have finally decided on certain styles and selected the best from the lines that most appealed to us—it is tremendous satisfaction, measureless gratification, to hear women of acknowledged taste, women of refinement, speak approvingly of the Gowns, Suits, Dresses, Coats and other apparel which we have gathered for them.

Believe us when we tell you our task is no easy one, and that our chief pleasure lies in your approval of what we select.

Those who favored us with their presence yesterday and today seemed delighted with our exposition of the new styles, which you may rest assured are truly representative of the most favored fashions.

There are so many novel creations here that it would be a waste of space and time to undertake pen descriptions, for the best we might write of them would fall far short of giving you a right knowledge of the styles, colors, and especially of the way they are tailored.

Take the time to come to the store and enjoy looking at the show.

GOLF.

This time the Western Golf Association is an insurgent on the open championship conditions. Instead of the traditional seventy holes of medal play the Western open championship will this year begin with an eighteen hole qualifying round, 16 to keep on at match play. The match play will be at 18 hole rounds except the final, which will be at 36 holes. In accordance with a petition presented at the annual meeting the Western amateur championship will be according to the method of the United States Golf Association championship, an 18 hole qualifying round on Monday, 64 to qualify; 18 holes medal play again on Tuesday morning, 32 to qualify; first match round of 18 holes on Tuesday afternoon and all subsequent match rounds at 36 holes.

The Tom Morris memorial interclub team match against par will be played under the same conditions as last year, except that the half stroke has been abolished. A special committee has been appointed to prepare a new scale of distance figures on which to compute the par scores. Possibly the new par table of the Metropolitan Golf Association may be adopted.

The Western open championship will last from Tuesday to Friday under the changed conditions. These are the dates given out at Chicago on Saturday for the season's fixtures:

Western amateur championship, Minikahda Club, Minneapolis, July 25-30; Olympic cup, Minikahda Club, Minneapolis, July 23; Western open championship, Beverly Country Club, August 31 to September 2; Westward Ho Golf Club open tournament, July 7-9; Calumet Country Club open tournament, July 12-16; Skokie Country Club invitation tournament, July 19-23; Tom Morris memorial trophy, June 16.

The amateur championship of the Massachusetts Golf Association will conflict with the open championship, just as the open tournament of the Montclair Golf Club will do. An amateur with national aspirations must forego his home attraction, but it is not easy to waive action in such an enjoyable time for golfing and leave the week free for the professionals. These are the Massachusetts dates:

Amateur championship, Brae Burn Country Club, June 15-18; team match with Connecticut either at Greenwich or New Haven, June 25; open championship on course to be announced, June 29-30; team match with Rhode Island Country Club, Brookline, September 24; Lesley cup trinity match, Myopia Hunt Club, September 30 to October 1.

At the annual meeting of the Oakland Golf Club an amendment to the constitution is to be voted on limiting the membership to 350, exclusive of honorary members and officers of the army and navy. The following will be elected to the board of governors to serve two years: John B. McDonald, M. M. Graham, G. G. Arnold, R. A. C. Smith and L. G. Shearer. The meeting will be at Delmonico's on the afternoon of March 16.

"We remind you that there are many clubs in the association and we cannot hope to succeed in our work unless the reports are sent in promptly," is the preface to the circular sent by the Metropolitan Golf Association handicap commitee to each club's handicapper. It contains the new par table and the information in detail as to how it should be applied in fixing the individual ratings, which must be based on the average best game of each player. Each club must furnish the names of all players from scratch to eleven strokes.

Plainfield, N. J., March 9, 1910.

When Borough Councilman L. R. Woolston said at the Civic Club meeting last night that "the garbage and sewer matters are far more vital than the subject of municipal ownership of water supply," he told the absolute truth. When he added that in his belief the public control of the water supply was advocated mostly by newcomers he expressed a general opinion. We do need public control for the collection and disposal of garbage and ashes and we do need a more satisfactory and adequate sewerage disposal system.

It is encouraging to hear that a body of men strongly interested in the city's welfare have organized a civic-society and will work aggressively for the advancement of the taxpayers' interests. Their co-operation should be of material benefit to the city's fathers who are entrusted with the solution of the municipality's problems. This organization will take the place of that society of "pleasant memory," the Plainfield Protective Association.

The Avon Borough Council has enacted an ordinance which might well be copied by our city's fathers. The ordinance in question imposes a penalty of $10 in case of conviction, where complaint is made that chickens are allowed to run at large. The nuisance here is found in every section and some means should be found to abate it.

Dry Cleaning Talk

Gentlemen's clothes cleaned by a Cleanery with the ability and equipments to produce first-class work, will stay clean longer, as when done by an ordinary suit presser who only brushes the surface dust off and removes the most prominent spots from the surface.

With our process the garments are thoroughly cleaned and disinfected, the linings are cleaned and spots that are removed will stay removed and do not appear again the first time the garments are exposed to the dust and grim of the street.

In the beginning it may cost a little more, but will pay at the end, as the clothes don't have to be at the cleaners every two weeks.

ORGANIZE A CIVIC CLUB

Plainfield than a water plant," said Mr. Woolston. "I find out that the fellows who are agitating for the municipal ownership of water in most cases are newcomers to this city.

"The city could better afford to look after its sanitary conditions. It is the worst city in the State for garbage. I believe that the garbage and sewer matters are far more vital than the municipal ownership of water.

An argument for the municipal ownership of a water plant was presented by Mr. Duttenhoffer. He took the ground that if private individuals can make money in selling water, a city can also, if honest and competent men are placed in charge. He cited an instance where a city owns its plant that the rates are $6 to $12 a year. By selling water at those rates, the city in question, he said, was able to pay $50,000 on its plant during the first year of its operation. "If other cities make a profit, why cannot Plainfield," was Mr. Duttenhoffer's argument.

"Men are not in business for fun. The Plainfield Water Company has a good thing and the men in it know it, and they will hang on to it as long as the citizens will let them. We should not be concerned about getting cheaper water, but to center our efforts in acquiring a plant and lake.

An interesting discussion on the sewer problem was given by Street Commissioner A. J. Gavett, and John R. Campbell, a noted chemist who is a member of the Dunellen Board of Health. Mr. Gavett went into detail and explained the operation of the local disposal beds and other systems. Mr. Campbell entertained the belief that the Board of Trade should consider a new sewerage system before anything else. Mr. Campbell favored a co-operative arrangement between the city and adjoining municipalities. He predicted that the development of Plainfield and neighboring towns will be greatly handicapped unless the sewer question is taken up and settled quickly.

Ira La Rue spoke against the postal savings bills now before Congress and as a result of his argument it is probable that several local bankers will be invited to attend the next meeting of the society, on March 22, and give their views on the question.

Remarks were also made by Mayor William A. Sanford, of Dunellen, and Editor Deering, of the Dunellen Call.

JUSTICE SENDS SON AND AFFINITY TO JAIL.

Bridgeton, March 9.—It is bad enough for a young man of respectable family to be in jail at all, but to be sent there by one's own father on the testimony of one's own mother and wife looks to Harry Johnson like hard luck. Harry is the young son of Justice of the Peace A. P. Johnson. He has been married two years. He and his wife live with the elder Johnsons.

Young Mrs. Johnson began to notice some time ago that her husband had grown rather cold to her. She kept her own counsel for a time, but later communicated her fears to her mother-in-law. The elder Mrs. Johnson, despite the mother love, decided that no boy of hers should ill-treat his wife, and there was a decision to break up what they were sure was an alliance elsewhere.

The two unhappy women—the mother and wife—started out Sunday night soon after young Johnson left the house ,ostensibly to "go downtown." They saw him board a trolley car, and, getting the next one learned that he had dropped off at Fairton. They were not long discovering his whereabouts. They said they found young Johnson at the home of Jennie Vineyard, in Fairton. There was a smash of glass, and the angered women walked into the house, seeking vengeance. Young Johnson escaped by a rear door, and the girl also managed to get away for a time. Mrs. Johnson senior and junior, returned to Bridgeton and imparted their information to Justice Johnson, who issued a warrant for the arrest of his son and the girl. They were later brought to his office. The squire read the complaint made by the wife, and then formally committed the pair to jail, in default of bail, upon a charge of disorderly conduct.

PRINCETON PRESIDENT IS LOUDLY CHEERED.

When Woodrow Wilson, president of Princeton University, rose to begin his first lecture yesterday at Princeton, since his absence in Bermuda the 150 upper classmen in the room made it the occasion of a small but enthusiastic greeting of the "Back-from-Elba" order, indicating their pleasure at his return with applause unusual in a lecture.

Dr. Wilson acknowledged the demonstration with the statement that he was glad to be back in Princeton, and was happy that the students were glad, too. There was no reference by him to the discussion existing on his departure February 11, but it is taken to indicate that it has brought about no change in the popularity of the president among the under-graduates.

JOURNALISTIC OPINIONS

The Mayors and Excise Laws.

Mayor Fisk, of Plainfield, explained at the Conference of Mayors, held in Trenton last week, that there was so much legislation pending in the Senate and Assembly this year, varying from prohibition measures to that providing for wide open liberty for the saloons, that the committee appointed to consider the excise question had thought it wise to leave the whole matter alone. The committee is to be congratulated on its good judgment. Nothing could be more unpopular with the thinking people of New Jersey at this time than an attack on the Bishops' law, and the sacrifice of the protection, through the law, which has been given the Christian Sunday. The volume of sentiment which has been so quickly developed in this city of late in connection with an attmept to stand by the excise laws is good evidence that Elizabeth at least is not ready to take the lead in securing greater liberties for the liquor trade.—Elizabeth Journal.

Church Membership Increased.

The Lord's Supper was observed at several churches on Sunday. Thirteen new members were received at Trinity Reformed church, four of whom came from the Sunday-school on confession of faith. At the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church three were received, two being by letter from the Brick church, New York city. There were seven additions to the membership of the Congregational church; five at the First M. E. church, three on confession and two by letter.

Watch for a Present.

Miss Lelia Reusch, of Watchung avenue, was tendered a surprise party last night in honor of her eighteenth birthday. Forty guests were present from this city, Westfield, Elizabeth and New Brunswick. Miss Reusch was the recipient of numerous presents, one of which was a diamond studded watch.

HORACE CODDINGTON TAKES WITNESS STAND

The trial of Horace Coddington, former clerk of Warren township, who is charged with illegally obtaining money from that municipality, was continued before Judge Schenck in the Somerset County court today. The defense opened its case at noon and it is not probable that the case will get to the jury before tomorrow afternoon.

At the time of going to press Horace Coddington was on the stand testifying in his own behalf. Witnesses put on the stand by the prosecution this morning told the jury of $600 in checks deposited by Joel Coddington. James Sykes, a former township clerk, of Warren, testified that the expenditure of such amount was never authorized by the committee at the time.

It is the contention of the defense that Joel Coddington deposited a number of checks in question in the bank without the knowledge of the defendant.

WOMEN PAINT THEIR CHURCH.

Balked Only When It Came to Climbing Ladders on the Street Front.

Lest church improvements should be halted by a lack of funds a dozen prominent society women of the fashionable St. Barnabas Prostestant Episcopal church, Burlington have undertaken the job of painting the exterior of the church. Headed by Mrs. Philip Smith, a young English woman, and wife of the rector, and Miss Florence Stewart, a popular society girl, the women astonished residents this morning by appearing with ladders, paint pots, and brushes and bravely setting to work.

By noon they had completed a thirty-foot section, from the eaves to the ground, and declared they will finish the work before the week ends.

The women balked on using the ladders on the front facing St. Mary's street, and after a consultation formed a pin-money club to employ a real painter to do that section. No crowds would stop to gaze at a mere man up a ladder.

"We have used so much money on the new guild houses and their furnishing that it looked as if the church would have to wait until fall for a new coat of paint," said one of the women today. "We talked it over with Mrs. Smith, and she suggested that we women do the painting if the men would furnish the paint. We made the bargain with the men, who didn't seem to think we would live up to our contract. Well we are doing our part, and we expect also to help grade the lawn and dig up the new flower beds. Mrs. Smith will direct us, as she can use a paint brush, spade, hammer, or saw as well as any man."

When the new roof was put on the church recently the contractors declared a certain section had not been included in the bid. When a squabble seemed imminent Rector Philip Smith brought about peace by donning overalls, and, unassisted, finished the disputed section.

DAUGHTER-IN-LAW NOW P. M.

Branchville, March 9.—Mrs. Mary E. Ellett, who succeeds Job C. Ellett as the postmaster at Normanock, is the latter's daughter-in-law. Ellett was postmaster at Normanock for many years, from the time the mail station was established there, and at one time enjoyed the distinction of having two offices under his supervision, the other one being at Bevans, where he removed a number of years ago. The former office was conducted by his wife.

A little more than a year ago the Postoffice Department decided that he must give up one or the other and appointed Mrs. Clinton Bevans, nee Keen, to succeed him at Bevans.

A few months ago Ellett sold his farm at Normanock to his son William, and, having no interest in the neighborhood, decided to give up the postmastership, which only nets him a few dollars each year. His son's wife was an applicant and secured the appointment.

Osteopathic Society Protests.

At a meeting of the New Jersey Osteopathic Society held in Newark Saturday night, resolutions were adopted protesting against the passage of Assembly bill No. 156, drawn by the New Jersey Medical Society, introduced by Assemblyman Ramsey, M. D., and known as the Medical Bill, which is designed to overcome a decision of the highest court in New Jersey, "That the practice of Osteopathy is not the practice of medicine."

STATE OPENS FIGHT ON THE MOTH PEST

Professor John B. Smith, State Entomologist, has issued the following warning in opening a warfare on the gypsy and brown tail moth:

"During the season of 1908 and 1909 brown tail moths have been unusually abundant in Continental Europe, and especially in France. The winter nests, filled with caterpillars, have, therefore, been correspondingly numerous and have invaded nurseries and plant growing establishments.

"During the winter of 1908-'09 thousands of these pests arrived on nursery stock at the ports of this country, chiefly New York, and the most rigid inspection work was needed to prevent the establishment of these pests in New York, New Jersey and other States where the insect does not yet occur. An attempt was made during the summer of 1909 to secure the co-operation of the foreign plant growers in keeping out infected stock, but, so far as France is concerned, with practically no effect.

"Brown tail nests with living caterpillars have already been found this season on plant stock recently received, and all gardeners, florists and growers that have ordered stock from abroad are requested to notify Professor John B. Smith, State Entomologist, New Brunswick, that arrangements may be made for its inspection on arrival.

"The establishment of this pest in New Jersey would mean even heavier loss than that inflicted by the San Jose scale, and would affect more interests, since it feeds on shade as well as orchard trees. The insect is also a direct nuisance to the individual, the poisonous hairs of the caterpillar producing the brown tail rash, which is very painful and often difficult to cure.

TAFT WILL DINE AT PASSAIC ON MAY 9.

Victor Mason, president of the Passaic Board of Trade, and the twenty-three other members of the committee that went down to Washington to invite the President to the board's banquet, had a banquet there themselves Monday night to celebrate Mr. Taft's acceptance of the invitation.

The President is going to Passaic on May 9. To get him, the committee had to change the date of the dinner, but they didn't mind that a bit. Everybody in the delegation was happy, and Mason told the President Passaic would give him such a greeting he would want to stay there all his life. Mason was one of the secretaries of the Republican national committee in 1908 and in accepting their invitation, the President told the Passaic people yesterday afternoon that his election was partly due to Mason's efforts.

During the visit of the Passaic delegation there they called on Senators Briggs and Kean, Vice-President Sherman, Speaker Cannon, Secretary Ballinger, Secretary Knox and several other prominent officials.

Several Cabinet officers and the two New Jersey Senators were invited to dine with the delegation at the Willard last night, but did not appear, and the committee had as guests Congressman William Hughes and a number of local newspaper correspondents.

CHICKENS MUST BE PENNED.

Avon Gardens Suffered, So Residents Are Made Subject to Fine.

Avon residents must keep their chickens penned up or pay a fine of $10. The Borough Council has passed an ordinance warning citizens that this fine will be imposed in every case where complaint is made that chickens are running at large and scratching up neighboring gardens.

Avon is a small municipality just south of Asbury Park, but almost every family has a flock of chickens and a garden. The municipal authorities declare the ordinance will be enforced.

Neptune Township passed an anti-dog-barking ordinance last year, but up to date there has not been a single conviction, though several complaints have been logged with Magistrate Peter F. Dodd.

Want Pupils Taught Religion.

Trenton, March 9. — Religious training for public school children was discussed at the meeting of the Trenton Ministerial Union Monday. While no definite plan was outlined, yet a resolution was adopted requesting the Interchurch Federation to consider the whole subject of religious education for children of the public schools and also the subject of social purity, as related to these children. This resolution was adopted with the idea that the federation inquire into the conditions and then suggest in a report the method of carrying out ideas for the religious education of the school pupils.

P. H. S. NOTES.

The High School fellows are getting in training fast for the coming interscholastic meet which is to be held at the Y. M. C. A. on the eighteenth of this month. The fellows who look good for the relay team are Miller, Earle, Todd, Ricketts and Ramsey. Todd and E. VanZandt are coming along finely in the jumping and C. Vail and "Piggy" Bristol expect to make a showing in shot putting. Last year P. H. S won the cup and it will be a pretty hard struggle to get it away from them this year.

The baseball team, under the guidance of Captain VanZandt, is showing up wonderfully. The material is very promising. Many of last year's men are on the squad with several new men. VanZandt is pitching with great activity while Lidgate is always there in the catching act. Doane and Smith are competing for the initial sack, while Nash looks good on second. Clark has a sure thing on third Zeraga, a new light, is doing wonderful work at short and VanZandt is pretty sure of him. Riffert, R. Runyon and Carpenter expect to play in the field.

Dr. Stelle, the city dentist, spent the morning at the High School examining the teeth of the pupils. This is a new thing that has not been tried before and has been very successful.

The P. H. S. basketball team will play the Bound Brook High School five on Friday at the local High's "gym."

The try-outs for the senior play will be held on Thursday afternoon in the High School auditorium. The play will be "as you like it."

THE BOROUGH NATIONAL BANK

Is not altogether selfish when it recommends the wisdom of starting a Savings Account. Hundreds of our citizens are showing their enthusiasm over the little beginnings that are growing with each added deposit.

Hoping for competence will not bring results and savings added to savings will.

ELOPER'S BRIDE IN EUROPE.

Easton, Pa., March 9.—An echo of the recent elopement of Miss Sarah, daughter of Joseph Pearl, a prominent resident of South Bethlehem, and Victor Lang, of the same place, was heard in habeas corpus proceedings bfore Judge Scott Monday when young Lang sought to have Mr. Pearl turn the custody of his daughter over to him. Pearl is the owner of three general stores in South Bethlehem. Lang was until lately employed in one of the stores as a clerk.

On February 17 Lang and Miss Pearl eloped and went to Elizabeth, N. J., where they were married. Pearl, discovering their whereabouts, went to Elizabeth and had both arrested. Lang was locked up for a week, and finally discharged. When he was liberated his bride was gone, and he was unable to discover where she was until testimony at Monday's proceedings disclosed the fact that she is in Europe.

After Lang was liberated from prison he was accused by his father-in-law of the larceny of money, but he voluntarily returned to South Bethlehem and demanded a hearing. There was no evidence against him, and the case was dismissed. Lang is a clean-cut, fine-looking fellow, about twenty-five years old, and has always borne a good reputation. His missing bride, twenty-two years old, is one of the prettiest and most accomplished young women of South Bethlehem.

Owing to the fact that Lang was unable to prove that his bride was being restrained of her liberty by her father, or was in his custody, the court dismissed the writ.

N. J. Freshmen at Harvard.

Boston, Mass., March 9.—According to the official figures for the freshman class at Harvard University, as just announced from the registrar's office, ten of the 664 men in the entering class are from New Jersey. The entering class shows an increase of sixty-two over that of a year ago, while the total undergraduate enrolment of 2265 shows a net gain of thirty-four.

Egg Harvest Coming in Montclair.

Most of the permits granted in the office of the building inspector, Jesse H. Lockwood, at Montclair, during the last week were for chicken houses, more or less pretentious, but all designed to aid in reducing the price of eggs.

ELIZABETH DEMOCRATS TO HOLD DOLLAR DINNER.

Prominent Democrats from all parts of the State will attend the big dollar dinner to be given in Turn Hall, Elizabeth, Tuesday night, March 29, under the auspices of the Elizabeth Democratic City Eexecutive Committee. Covers will be laid for more than seven hundred persons.

A committee composed of Alfred A. Stein, chairman; Robert H. McAdams, City Clerk John F. Kenah, John Heck and Richard Williamson are arranging plans. Already there is a large demand for tickets, not only by Democrats in Union county but also by prominent members of the party in Hudson, Middlesex, Essex and other counties. The list of speakers has not yet been completed, but it is assured that some of the foremost Democratic orators in New Jersey will make addresses.

It is rumored that the feature of the dinner will be the launching of a gubernatorial boom either for Frank S. Katenzenbach, of Trenton, or State Senator George S. Silzer, of Middlesex.

AIDS OF PROSECUTORS UNDER CIVIL SERVICE.

Trenton, March 9.—Supplementing a previous opinion that sergeants-at-arms in district courts are amenable to the civil service law, Assistant Attorney-General Nelson B. Gaskill has informed Secretary Gardner Colby of the commission that in his judgment county detectives, probation officers and other employes in the office of the county prosecutor, employes of the county boards of taxation and county probation officers are in the same class and subject to examination. The opinion of the assistant attorney-general was based upon the principle established in the so-called Pierson case which established the status of sergeants-at-arms with relation to the civil service law.

Briefly the principle laid down was those who derived their authority from and are appointed by an operative branch of the State government, are considered as parts of the State government irrespective of the sources of their compensation.

Franklin Council, No. 41, Jr. O. U. A. M., will initiate several candidates at its meeting Thursday night, March 17.

The Island of Regeneration

By Cyrus Townsend Brady

Illustrations by Ray Walters

(Copyright, 1909, by W. G. Chapman.)
(Copyright in Great Britain.)

The stoppage of the ship, the lowering of the boat, its approach to the island were now matters of indifference to him. She was angry. He could think of nothing else and there was bewilderment in his dismay. Nothing had given him power to solve the enigma of her conduct. Where she gazed with serious intentness, he looked listlessly. Her heart smote her again. The sense of justice upon which she prided herself came to her rescue. She stepped close to him and laid her hand upon his arm.

"Forgive me!" she murmured and her heart leaped within her bosom to meet the great flush of pleasure in his face as he responded instantly to her caress and her appeal.

"You said you knew men," the man asked as they threaded their way through the trees and won the hill along the familiar path, "do you know anyone on that ship, do you think?"

The question was an absurd one under almost any other circumstances than that. Yet chance had shown him the one point in her armor and his innocent and casual question had driven into her soul a stab. Evasion should have been easy. Indeed, his trust in her was so great that deceit would have been simple. But she had always told him the truth and she could not begin now.

"Yes," she said, "I think I do."

He stopped abruptly, illumination and anguish, the light of pain in his soul.

"Was it because you know that man that you suffered so on the hill?"

"Yes," she said, again forcing herself to speak.

"Is he one of those who loved you?"

"He said so, but—"

"And you, did you love him?"

"I hate him."

"Why?" asked the man sternly. "Had he injured you in some way?"

"In the greatest way," she answered with deepening gravity. And here her sense of justice pricked her. "But it was partly my fault."

"And have you forgiven him?" he asked with a little softening of his voice.

To him forgiveness was as natural and inevitable as breathing. In his ethics there was no other course. He had never had anything to forgive, be it remembered. She was not so true to her standards as the man she had taught. The pupil was more devoted than the master.

"There are some things," she replied bitterly, "that a woman cannot forgive, never forgives."

"What things?" he persisted, wondering ignorantly as to her meaning.

"Don't ask me," she answered, impatiently. "I told you I would tell you the story to-day and you will have to wait until then."

"But that comment of the world?"

"You will hear it from that man's lips, if I mistake not," said the woman, wearily, "but you must press me no further. See, they are close to the reef. We must hasten."

She drew her hand away from his and ran rapidly to the beach. Naturally he followed, overtaking her in a few swift steps and running as was his wont by her side. If he had stopped to indulge in the luxury of self-examination, he would have found his feelings in such a turmoil of such strange emotions as would have defied classification and description. Of but two things was he very clear; that he loved this woman, and that in some way, for causes unfathomable and not present to him, he hated the man or the men in the boat off shore.

By the woman's directions just before they reached the shore, the man picked up two fallen branches of palm. They ran to the beach opposite the entrance and waved the palm branches above their heads. It was too far for the voice to carry and there was too much noise from the breakers on the reef if the distance had been shorter. But the men in the boat evidently caught sight of the signals and understood them, for she was presently about and in a few moments they saw her prow cut the blue waters of the lagoon through the one entrance to the barrier. The man and woman stood silently, a little apart, watching the swift approach. Unerringly steered, the boat struck the gently shelving beach bows on, and a last sturdy pull drove her fairly out of the water. The man in the stern sheets rose, stepped forward between the oarsmen and leaped out on the sand.

The present was in touch with the past, conventional faced the unconventional, civilization and primitive confronted one another.

CHAPTER XV.

Accusation and Admission.

Now that the great moment had come—for Langford had at last recognized the woman whom he sought in spite of her strange garb—he became suddenly acutely conscious of trivial details and accurately responsible to matters of no moment. He stepped, for instance, near the bow of the boat, told the coxswain that he might allow the men to land but that they must remain close to the beach and within easy call and see that the boat was properly secured. Then he turned and walked slowly—singular how eager he had been for that moment and how tardy he was in availing himself of it when it came—toward the two who stood silently watching a little distance away.

He was dressed in a boating suit of white and wore a white yachting cap. He was distinctly good looking. His repentance, his anxiety, his disappointment had refined his face to a certain degree and he was not an unworthy specimen of humanity in appearance. The man looked at him with vivid curiosity and a sudden sense of dismay to find the new comer so worthy of respect on the ground of appearance at least.

The Telephone Aids the Traveler

WE all make journeys now and then. No matter how frequently or infrequently these journeys are made, the time for starting usually finds us not quite ready. In such an emergency the telephone is invaluable.

Ordering the expressman is only one way in which it may be used. Orders to disconnect plumbing and lights, and final good-byes to friends, may be given. If the trip is to be long, arrangements may be made also to disconnect a telephone in a residence temporarily, and an allowance is made by the Company for the time the telephone is not in use.

WILL HAVE STRONG NINE

North Plainfield High School Ball Tossers Preparing for 1910 Season.

FIRST GAME ON APRIL NINTH.

Athletes Display Fast Form in Outdoor Practice on Hyde Field —New Material Looks Good.

Athletes of the North Plainfield High School are now centering their interest in baseball. The warm weather of the past few days has enabled the borough boys to begin outdoor practice on Hyde field, corner of DeLacy and Jackson avenues, which has been donated for that purpose again by DeLacey Hyde. According to Manager Harry Smith the prospects are rosy for a strong nine. The season will open on April 9 at Bound Brook. Manager Smith expects to compete his schedule in a few days.

Fast work is being displayed in practice and Captain Carlton Smith is confident that the N. P. H. S. team will win the intercity scholastic title this year. The diamond is in fair condition. A new backstop will be erected and the diamond skined and levelled.

Five candidates have thus far appeared for the vacancies at second base and right field. Herbert Stine, who played part of last year, Fred Becker, George Townley, William Taylor and Leon Zeglio.

Captain Smith did good work in the box last year. He should be much stronger this year as a result of his experience. He is cool and steady, and has a specially good inshoot. Smith can play any position on the team effectively. He and Catcher Bailey several times exchangd positions last year in supplementary games.

Conroy gets around the bases with great skill. He excels in running and sliding. As all the men played last year, except two positions, the team should be a formidable contestant.

TELLS OF HER WORK IN INDIA'S MISSIONS

Election of officers, reports for the year together with an address by Miss Emily T. Minor, a missionary at Ratnagiri, India, made the annual meeting of the Women's Foreign Missionary Society, of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church, an interesting one yesterday afternoon.

The reports showed the society to be in an excellent condition. The collections for the year amounted to about $1,300, mostly pledged for teachers' salaries in the foreign field, while a scholarship is maintained in Brazil; $100 goes to medical missions and the balance to the general fund of the society. The society has a membership of 235 an increase of of ten over a year ago.

These officers were elected for the year:

President, Mrs. Isaac L. Miller, first vice-president, Mrs. J. S. Zelie; second vice-president, Mrs. John Gray Foster; third vice-president, Mrs. I. W. Cochran; secretary, Mrs. Orton G. Dale; treasurer, Mrs. W. E. Hoyt; superintendent collections, Miss Julia S. Scribner; superintendent literature, Mrs. Isaac N. Field.

After the business Miss Minor addressed the women. This is her second furlough since going to India in 1891. She is extremely modest yet from her interesting story one was able to learn that she has been successful and deserves much credit for great self-denial. Her work chiefly is in the schools and among the people of the village who will not attend meetings or the schools.

Her description of the work in the leper hospital with a co-worker, Miss Jefferson was interesting. She told of heroic work performed during the plague of leprosy about a year ago. She and Miss Jefferson visit the leper hospitals once a week teaching the gospel.

A social hour during which tea was served, followed. Mrs. George P. Mellick was in charge, while Mrs. Elliot T. Barrows and Mrs. Edward J. Patterson poured, assisted by other members of the society.

James Sutton.

James, the five-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. James Sutton, of West Third street, died yesterday afternoon after a short illness. The funeral service will be conducted on Friday morning.

Back from the Bermudas.

Clarence Munday and J. C. Abbott returned yesterday from a pleasure trip to the West Indies and Bermuda Islands.

EVANGELIST'S ADDRESS ON WORLD'S INFLUENCE

"The Influence of the World," was the subject of the gospel address by Rev. L. Judson Westfall at the evangelistic meeting in the Temple Baptist church last night. He took his text from John 12: 42, which speaks of the chief rulers who believed in Jesus, but did not confess Him because they were afraid of being put out of the synagogue.

Mr. Westfall said that there are many people nowadays who believe in Jesus, but who are afraid to confess Him and live for Him, because they will be thought peculiar and be thrust from their friends in society. He urged the young people who had just taken a stand for Christ to be loyal to Him at all times.

At the close of the meeting several persons responded to the invitation to confess Christ publicly. Interest in the meetings continues unabated and the attendance is larger every night. The meeting tonight will begin promptly at 8 o'clock.

MEAT PRICES HIGHER ALL OVER THE WORLD.

Washington, March 9.—Meat prices have advanced in all the principal consuming and producing sections of the world, according to statistics compiled by the Department of Commerce and Labor. All the meat exporting countries show higher prices per pound in their exports in recent years than those of a decade ago, and all the meat-importing countries show higher rates in their import figures and the current market quotations

The advance in fresh meats is less than that in salted and preserved meats. This is said to be due to reductions made in the last few years in the cost of chilling or freezing and transporting fresh meats.

In nearly all cases the advance in beef is less than that in pork or mutton. The advance in mutton is regarded as due to the comparatively slow growth in the world's supply of sheep, another result of which is the advance in the price of wool.

Repeated Entertainment.

The pupils of St. Mary's school repeated successfully the musical entertainment given several weeks ago. There was a large attendance and a substantial sum realized by the concert.

Sesame Club Meeting.

The Sesame Club will meet tomorrow morning at the residence of Mrs. Frederic Genung, 331 East Sixth street.

GETS SIX CENT VERDICT

Man Who Boarded Mr. Atterbury's Cat Wanted $10,000 for Assault.

DEFENDANT ON THE STAND.

Judge Chatfield Presented at Trial in Circuit Court, Brooklyn, N. Y., Yesterday.

A verdict of six cents damages was awarded by a jury in the United States Circuit Court, Brooklyn, last evening against Albert H. Atterbury, of this city. And thereby hangs the tale of a cat.

Mr. Atterbury has a cat named Jerry, the pet of his home. When he and Mrs. Atterbury went abroad in December, 1907, Jerry was put out to board in the family of Dr. Charles S. Ludekins, of New Dorp, S. I. The very day after the Atterburys got home, March 14, 1908, the cat was brought to Mr. Atterbury's office by Dr. Ludekins, who presented a bill of $11. Then the trouble began. Jerry, immured in the basket, had no voice in the racket until Dr. Ludekins and Mr. Atterbury began a struggle for the possession of the basket, which ended in a Manhattan police station.

Dr. Ludekins sued Mr. Atterbury for $10,000 damages for assault and false imprisonment and the case was tried yesterday.

"Dr. Ludekins brought Jerry to my office and said the bill was $11," said Mr. Atterbury in a dramatic recital on the witness stand. "I told him the bill was exorbitant for the board of a cat for a month and nine days. I offered to pay $8. This Dr. Ludekins refused, and he used violent language and declared he would take the cat home with him.

"'What,' I said, 'drag our pet through the streets back to New Dorp? Never!' We both seized the basket and struggled about the office.

"Finally I let go, but closed the door so that Dr. Ludekins could not get out with the cat. He continued to storm and called out of the window on the eleventh floor to attract attention, but failed. He tried the telephone and also threatened to throw the telephone book out on the street.

"Finally I said to him: 'We have both been foolish. I will pay you the $11, although is is an unfair charge.' I tendered him the money but he refused it and insisted that he would take the cat away with him.

"Then I called a policeman, who tried to settle the dispute, and wound up by arresting Dr. Ludekins on my charge of petty larceny when the doctor tried to get out of the office again with the cat. At the police station Dr. Ludekins gave up the cat to me and signed a receipt for my $11 and I withdrew the larceny charge."

"Are you positive as to the occurrences you have related on that cat day?" asked John Brooks Leavitt counsel for Mr. Atterbury.

"They were burned into my memory," exclaimed the witness impressively.

"And the entire cat controversy was just as you have narrated it?"

"Even so," fervently.

The story told by Dr. Ludekins, a slender, gray-haired man, differed only slightly from that of Mr. Atterbury.

In an effort to show by Mr. Atterbury's testimony that Jerry is not his property but that Mrs. Atterbury, Dr. Lukekins' counsel drew from the witness the retort:

"Mrs. Atterbury and I never had any ante-nuptial or post-nuptial agreement as to the ownership of our cats or other animals."

In summing up Mr. Leavitt laid stress upon the point that Dr. Ludekins' lien against the cat was gone as soon as he set the basket down in Mr. Atterbury's office.

"Here was the scene, gentlemen of the jury," said Mr. Leavitt. "Here were two gray-haired men engaged in a controversy over a cat. 'I want my money or I take the cat,' Dr. Ludekins says. 'Here is your money, then,' says Mr. Atterbury. 'I won't take it now, but I'm going to take the cat,' says Dr. Ludekins, and he takes the law into his own hands by making a dive for the cat.

"'I'm dinged if you're going to take the cat,' says Mr. Atterbury, and wouldn't you, gentlemen of the jury, have done just as Mr. Atterbury did in similar circumstances?"

Judge Chatfield in charging the jury said the case hinged on the question of false imprisonment of Dr. Ludekins in Mr. Atterbury's office.

YOUTHFUL TRAMP BOUND FOR NORTH DAKOTA

Frank Francis, a seventeen year old youth who claims Providence, R. I., as his home, and San Francisco as his birth place, was arrested yesterday by Patrolman McDonald for vagrancy. Francis was resting his weary body at the North avenue station. In court this morning he told a frank straightforward story which impressed Judge Runyon and he was allowed to go. His destination, he claimed, was North Dakota, where he intends to go to work as a harvest hand next summer and fall.

Francis said he had worked for several years as a hard solderer in a jewelry factory in Providence, but the business had become dull and he was laid off. Not caring to loaf he was making the best of his way toward the west when he happened to fall in with a Frank Weinberg, who claimed to have relatives in the borough. He said that Weinberg was going to see some relatives he had over the brook and get money enough to take them both further west. Weinberg had failed to show up at the station rendezvous up to the time that Francis was escorted to headquarters, nor was he visible this morning when Francis was arraigned. It was hinted that, as Weinberg had been in the hands of the police before, perhaps he was going through a similar cross examination in the borough court, but he did not appear there this morning.

TEMPLE BAPTIST CHURCH. MEETINGS CONTINUE.

Members of the Rescue Mission attended the services at the Temple Baptist church in a body last night and the meeting was of unusual interest. Rev. J. W. Musson, pastor of the church, conducted the opening services while the singing was led by Rev. L. Judson Westfal, who was assisted by Rev. C. E. Lewis, Mrs. Charles Quint and Mrs. Charles Griffin.

Tonight Rev. Mr. Westfal will speak and the music will be attractive. Tomorrow night Rev. Mr. Lewis will speak. These meetings are having great success and the public is invited to be present.

RAHWAY ELKS CLASH WITH LOCALS TONIGHT.

Plainfield Elkdom will be out in force on Campbell's alleys tonight when the Rahway team will engage the locals in an Elks' League contest. The Rahwegians stand next to last in the competition, but as the locals have been traveling on the toboggan, of late, and are in sixth place, a battle royal should ensue. After the battle the visiting pin knights will be entertained in the clubrooms of the local lodge.

A Municipal Bill

An important bill was presented in the Senate at Trenton yesterday, when Mr. Osborne introduced a measure authorizing any municipality to acquire, construct, operate and maintain a plant for the production of light, heat and gas, whether the same is owned by a municipality or otherwise. The bill was referred to the Committee on Municipal Corporations.

DR. DU MOULIN PREACHES

ON FOUNDATION OF SUCCESS.

Faith in Jesus Christ Cause of Human Progress Declares Bishop Du Moulin's Son.

A large congregation of men with a sprinkling of women listened to a strong sermon at Grace P. E. church last night by the Very Rev. Frank Du Moulin, D. C. L., of Cleveland, Ohio. Dr. Du Moulin's address was a deep study of the question of what lies back of all human progress and proving beyond doubt that the Christian religion as exemplified by Jesus Christ is the basic principle of all success.

Dr. Du Moulin took for his text "Seek Ye First the Kingdom of God," and said that all history demonstrates that Christ must come first in all our lives. If anything at all is to be accomplished it must come through the acceptance of the teachings of Jesus. All the ethical, moral and practical growth in the human is inevitably attributable to the Son of God.

It is absolutely true that all advancement of whatever good nature has Christ back of it. Our growth as a nation, our world advancement, our material progress, everything influenced by a broad and deep conviction of right is the result of the divine influence of God through His Son. The foundation of success in any enterprise is found in the faith which one ought first to have in the Master who guides our distinies.

The lesson as given by Dr. Du Moulin made a deep impression on his hearers. He is a wonderfully lucid speaker with a powerful analytical ability and impresses one with his virility and forcefulness and clarity of expression. The full choir aided materially in making the service a memorable one.

Dr. DuMoulin is Dean of the Cleveland, Ohio, Cathedral and is very well known in the West. He is a Canadian by birth and is the son of the Bishop of Niagara, Ontario.

STRICT ENFORCEMENT OF EXCISE STATUTES

In granting the transfer of a liquor license in Fanwood township in the Court of Common Pleas yesterday at Elizabeth, Judge Atwater said that he would stand for no excise violations. He declared that there were laws on the statute books and that they must be obeyed. It was further stated by the court that if it came to his notice that anyone who received a liquor license from him violated the law, he would without any question revoke the license immediately.

The license transferred was that of Dora Steiver to Antonio Caroni. The license is for an inn and tavern in Fanwood township.

There was little business transacted in the Court of Special Sessions yesterday, where Judge Atwater also presided.

William J. McCarthy, Jr., a youth of this city, was sentenced to the Reformatory at Rahway after he had pleaded guilty to assaulting his father. The boy has a bad record with the local police. He ran away from home and spent some time in New York. He assaulted his father by bombarding him with stones.

In the case of Charles Smithman and Joan Bloodgood, the two men arrested for stealing $80 worth of metal from the Ball & Wood Company, in Elizabeth, a question arose which caused the postponement of their case for a week. They said they would not plead guilty to stealing $80 worth as it was not worth that amount. They were willing to plead guilty to stealing eight pounds of the metal.

SCOTCH PLAINS TO RE-OPEN ITS LIBRARY.

At a meeting of the executive committee of the Scotch Plains Public Library last night it was voted to re-open the library on Saturday night. The institution has been closed since September 1 for various reasons and the public of that place will no doubt welcome the action taken by the committee last night.

A consignment of new books was recently added to the collection bringing the number of volumes close to 2,000. The library will be open to the public on Wednesday and Saturday afternoons, and on Monday, Wednesday and Saturday nights. Frank Anson has been appointed librarian.

PLAINFIELDER PATENTS SAFETY STARTING CRANK

Charles W. Smith, of 740 West Front street, has just been granted a patent on a safety starting crank for gas and gasolene engines, which it is said should prove of great value. With the increasing use of automobiles and the necessity for a safety device in operating machinery, absolute security in cranking is needed. Many serious accidents result every day from the ordinary methods of starting gas and gasolene engines. The back kick may result from advance sparks, short circuits and carbonated pistons, due to carelessness. Water or dirt in the magnets can cause them or defective insulation or any other disarrangement.

With Mr. Smith's invention it is impossible, it is said, to receive the slightest injury, for as soon as the engine goes back, a pawl is released, which allows the shaft to revolve in the hub of the crank without the handle coming back a fraction of an inch. This can be used on any car. On most cars the device can be applied by removing the old crank. Mr. Smith is about to organize a company for the manufacture of his patent.

A SUMMER BOARDER'S DUPLICITY IS EXPOSED

Mrs. James Hoover, of Neshanic, visited Proctor's theatre yesterday afternoon, enjoyed the performance, and incidentally discovered through the medium of Ala Zaza, the Egyptian mind reader, that she was cleverly duped by a summer boarder last July.

Mrs. Hoover, who earns spare change during the summer season by accommodating city boarders, was married about three years ago. Six months before the wedding her husband presented her with a diamond engagement ring for which he paid $120. Yesterday afternoon while Ala Zaza was engaged in identifying articles belonging to persons in the audience, Mrs. Hoover in fun, showed her ring to the mind reader and asked him if the stone was a genuine diamond.

Zaza paused one moment and said "Nit, it is a rhinestone." Mrs. Hoover paid little attention to the dope handed out by the Egyptian until the performance was over. Then her curiosity was aroused.

After leaving the theatre she visited a jewelry store, displayed the ring, and inquired if the stone was a genuine diamond. The jeweler corroborated the Egyptian's views by informing her that it was a rhinestone. Not fully satisfied Mrs. Hoover visited two other local jewelry stores with the same result.

Then it dawned on her that she was flim-flammed by one of her city boarders last summer. It flashed through her mind, that on a certain day in July a boarder who was a dealer in cheap jewelery admired the ring she was wearing.

"That is a beautiful stone," said he. "I would like to compare it with some valuable stones I have in my trunk." Mrs. Hoover unhesitatingly handed over the ring to the boarder, and a little while afterward she received another ring, which she believed was her own. Instead of it being her $120 engagement ring it has turned out to be a rhinestone ring worth about three dollars.

Soon as Mrs. Hoover realized the truth of the matter she fainted and after recovery waxed indignant. "That fellow is an infamous crook, I know his address, and I'll put Detective Totten on his trail at once. He'll spend his next vacation behind the bars, if I have anything to say about it."

Mrs. Hoover is well known in this city by residents who have been summering at Lebanon and vicinity, as her mother is the proprietress of a summer boarding house at the former place.

Prosperity in Somerset.

The recent sale of live stock at Somerville shows that there is prosperity in this section of the country. Hope, the auctioneer, disposed of 36 pigs at about 35 cents a pound, ranging from $13.50 to $16.80 a pair. At Theodore Case's sale seven cows averaged $81.64 (not fresh); chickens, $1.25 per head. At the Stelton sale fowls sold for 25½ cents a pound (a fine price). At Case's sale one brood sow brought $47.50. Mr. Hope declares that Chicago is not in it with Somerset county.

Will Open a Tea Room.

William C. Dunham, of Craig place, has leased the vacant store on North avenue, adjoining the entrance of the city market and within a short time will open a tea room there for women and the sale of cut flowers.

HAD RECEIVER APPOINTED

WANT THE ASSESTS PROTECTED

Capitalized at $5,000,000 with $200,000 Paid in But Was Never Rated by Bradstreets.

Judge Ward of the United States Circuit Court in New York has appointed William F. Allen receiver for the Seaboard Portland Cement Company, of 225 Fifth avenue, New York, and Olsen, N. Y., on application of Robert C. Morris, of Morris & Plante, attorneys in an equity, suit brought by George A. Beaton of this city, on behalf of bondholders. Mr. Morris said that the proceedings were preliminary to a reorganization and were taken to protect the assets, which are estimated at more than $1,000,000. There is a bond issue of $2,000,000, and the liabilities outside of the bonds are not large.

The company was incorporated in July, 1907, with an authorized capital of $5,000,000, but never had any rating in Bradstreet's. It purchased 700 acres of land at Olsen, on the Hudson near Catskill, and built a large cement plant. In December last it was said that it would require about $300,000 more money to finish the plant. It is said that all the $2,000,000 bonds have been sold, and with every bond sold was given a share of stock. A large amount of bonds were placed on Long Island, and it is said that $120,000 were sold in Riverhead and neighboring towns.

The list of the officers of the concern in 1901 was: George A. Beaton, of this city, president; Joseph M. Shellabarger, of this city, secretary; directors, George W. Roydhouse, Isaac F. Woodbury, Edwin Thomas, Alexander I. McLeod, Francis V. Greene, Charles P. Collins, Daniel E. Jones, M. V. Brewington, Joseph T. Fanning P. T. Watt, Edwin C. Willetts, Dwight C. Rexford and the president and secretary.

MONSIEUR JULES SABER ET SON ABSINTHE, VOILA

Monsieur Julius Saber polite and debonair, but with a sadly disfigured face, took a trolley for Newark this morning at the suggestion of City Judge William Runyon. Monsieur Saber arrived here yesterday afternoon intending to apply at a local factory for a position as machinist, but in the course of the afternoon he sampled the various brands of liquid refreshment dispensed in the thirst emporiums of East and West Front street and by the time the sun had set M'sieur Saber (pronounced Sahbay), was navigating with great difficulty.

Becoming aware of the potentiality of what he had already imbibed and believing he could offset the evil effects of the liquid lightning by resorting to his old French friend, absinthe, he straightway absorbed a sufficient quantity of this insidious compound to make him forget not only his identity, but his whereabouts. He therefore applied for information at the desk of Captain Frederickson in police headquarters.

The Captain informed the man that as he was a stranger it was not unnatural that his name was equally so, and advised M'sieur Saber to seek some other means of entertainment. This the Frenchman refused to do. He went away and had arrived in front of Hedden's livery stable when he collapsed and in falling got two gashes in his forehead besides a blackened eye. When informed of the facts Captain Frederickson had the man assisted to a berth where he snored his load off.

This morning he declared he remembered nothing of the night's occurrences and begged to be let go. He went to Newark.

SPEEDING MUST STOP, SO SAYS POLICE CHIEF

A narrow, very narrow escape from a collision between two automobiles which occurred at the corner of East Fifth and Richmond streets yesterday afternoon has caused Chief of Police Kiely to issue an ultimatum for the benefit of automobile owners and chauffeurs. "Speeding within the city limits has got to stop," he said this morning. "Automobilists who have had their cars housed all winter and who may perhaps have lost the knack of going at a slow speed should take warning."

"I have tried and am trying to be fair with all these people, but in spite of everything they will persist in driving too fast. If being good to them wont accomplish the desired end I will have to resort to the other thing."

The two automobiles which caused the chief to get wrathy were going so fast when they missed colliding that their momentum turned them both completely around so that they faced the opposite direction from which they had been traveling. Nothing but the quick action of both drivers averted a fatality. Consequently the chief wants everybody who drives an automobile to be careful or they will have to take the consequences.

JOS. MILLS CELEBRATES EIGHTY-FOURTH BIRTHDAY

Older residents here will be interested in the recent celebration of Joseph Mills' eighty-fourth birthday anniversary at his home in Decatur, Ill. The affair was observed on Wednesday, March 2. He is an uncle of Mrs. John A. Koch, of Richmond street, and during his residence in this city was a carpenter. He was an apprentice to E. P. Thorn and built Demler's Hotel in Washington Valley.

Mr. Mills removed from Plainfield to Decatur in 1853, and spent his time in building up the Mills Lumber Company, one of the big industries at Decatur. He was for six years an alderman and for a time an assistant supervisor. Soon after reaching Decatur he secured several big contracts, building some of the best houses in that city. He is one of the oldest members of the Odd Fellows, having received one of the fifty year medals. He joined the lodge in 1854, at Decatur and on behalf of the organization contributed the first money for the relief of the Chicago fire sufferers in 1871. That was $50. Mr. Mills was generously remembered by his friends and neighbors with suitable gifts.

Mr. Mills was married to Miss Eliza Lansing in 1847. To this union five children were born, but one of whom is now living. Mr. Mills has been quite ill with rheumatism and a little later he expects to go to West Baden for treatment.

CHILDREN TO RAISE FUND FOR A CHILDREN'S WARD.

The pupils of the Hartridge School will give a simple little fair at Hartridge auditorium on Saturday afternoon, March 19, from 3 to 6 o'clock. The proceeds will be donated to Muhlenberg Hospital to be used towards the establishment of a children's ward. There is no such ward at the hospital and it seems eminently fitting that this work for children should be carried on by children.

Each grade will be in charge of a table, and the tables will be as different as possible: Fancy articles, useful articles, dolls, toys, cake, candy, flowers and light refreshments will be sold. All the friends of the school, of the hospital and of the children in general are asked to attend

HORACE CODDINGTON, LAWYER, CONVICTED

Jury Finds Him Guilty on All Five Counts of Obtaining Warren Township Money Illegally.

Horace Coddington, former clerk of Warren township was found guilty today in the Somerset County Court, of obtaining money from a municipality illegally. The jury, which retired this morning after the summing up of the lawyers and the charge of the judge, came into court at 1:30 o'clock this afternoon and returned a verdict of "Guilty as charged."

There were five counts in the indictment found against Mr. Coddington and according to the verdict of the jury he was found guilty of all. In his charge to the jury, Judge Schenck instructed them that they could find a verdict on one or all of the counts.

In the minds of many, the result of the trial means the disbarment of Horace Coddington. The sentence that might be imposed seemed problematical in court today. His brother, Joel Coddington, is now out on bail, having entered a plea of non vult to a charge of misappropriating public moneys and was awaiting the termination of the present trial for sentence. It was said today that the sentence might be a heavy fine in both cases.

Prosecutor John F. Reger made an exceptionally strong presentation of the case against Horace Coddington, reviewing the testimony and every important detail was touched upon in summing up.

Horace Coddington was the only witness in behalf of the defense, and his object was to show that the transactions were legal. He said that it was the custom for officials in Warren township to draw their fees in advance at such times as they might need the money. He was clerk of the township, while his brother, Joel Coddington, was the treasurer for the township.

The testimony showed that several notes had passed between the Coddingtons and in one instance Joel Coddington had left a blank note in his office to be filled out by his brother. This was deposited in the bank, but Horace Coddington said he understood that it was drawn to his brother's personal account. When asked whether he knew whether his brother had a personal account, he replied that he did not.

Alvah A. Clark, counsel for Horace Coddington, also made a strong plea in behalf of his client, endeavoring to show that what he had done was regular and that he had no intention of taking anything that did not belong to him.

The sentiment in Warren township as well as other parts of the county is very strong against the Coddingtons and all the pressure possible was brought to bear to secure a conviction. A great many witnesses from the township were summoned at the trial.

The court did not set a day for pronouncing sentence.

Silver and Copper in Mine.

Although they were digging for sulphur at Occoquan, Virginia, which is about twenty-eight miles from Washington, D. C., the Plainfield Mining Company have struck something else besides the stuff from which sulphuric acid is made. A recent analysis of some of the rock taken from the mine shows 2.75 per cent. of silver and over 7 per cent. copper and even traces of gold. The average value of rock taken from the mine is $25 a ton. M. F. Gano is showing the samples of ore recently taken from the mine at his office on North avenue.

Pre-Easter Display of Fashionable Dress Goods

Seems as if Dress Goods manufacturers received advance information, for dress goods of the most beautiful color arrangements have been designed for this season's wearing.

The woman who plans her Spring frocks in advance is ready to enjoy the delightful spring days when spring does come. Too, with Easter only a few days away, one can't begin making Easter clothes too early.

This exhibit of fashionable dress goods at prices now in force again emphasizes the low price mastery attained by this store.

It is generally conceded that our prices are at least 10 per cent. to 20 per cent. LESS than prices of same quality elsewhere. Visit the store and learn to your own satisfaction that you get "more for your money" at Tepper's.

Aside from an extensive range of the new dress fabrics you will find liberal assortments of Dress Trimmings, Wash Goods, Sheer Mercerized Fabrics, Poplins, Foulards, New Madras, Ginghams, Batiste and other cotton fabrics.

These prices are appended as a guidepost to splendid stocks and values in the store.

HE PUTS PEARY IN THE DR. COOK CLASS

Washington, March 10.—Commander Robert E. Peary was put into the Dr. Cook class yesterday by Representative Macon (Dem. Ark.). In a critical survey of the explorer's narrative presented yesterday to the sub-committee of the Naval Affairs Committee of the House of which Macon is a member, the Arkansas Congressman declares that the mere record of miles traveled each day as given by Peary stamps his story as a stretch of the imagination.

"In Peary's travels from Cape Columbia to the point where Captain Bartlett left him and returned," said Macon, "he traveled thirty-one days and made 281 miles or an average of 9.06 miles a day. This was not as good an average of miles of travel as made by Dr. Cook in the same latitudes.

"The astonishing part of Mr. Peary's statement, however, is the number of miles he traveled every day after Bartlett had left him when no white man was with him as witness, his only companion being his valet of twenty years' service and four Eskimos, and his greatest marches singularly were all north of the Bartlett camp. From that time forward, going to the Pole and returning to Cape Columbia (545 miles), he claims to have made an average of twenty-six miles per day, or, to be accurate, 26.4 miles per day for five days, until he reached the Pole (132 miles) and forty-four miles per day from the Pole back to Bartlett's camp (132 miles, three days), and 24.8 miles for sixteen days from the Pole back to Cape Columbia (413 miles), the latter being almost three times as great an average as he made with his supporting party.

"The greatest increase commences, singularly, on the very day they left, and practically ends on identically the same spot. Bartlett left Peary after making a record of 9.06 miles per day for the journey that far (281 miles in thirty-one days).

"After that Peary spent eight days, five going and three returning, in travel north of this point, and says he traveled 264 nautical miles, not counting detours, or nearly four times the speed made when Bartlett was with him. The last three days of this travel, 132 miles from the Bartlett camp, he says he made forty-four nautical miles a day, or over fifty statute miles, not counting detours, and that was done at the end of a fatiguing journey of 545 miles. Could the dogs, in their fatigued condition, haul loaded sleds such a distance daily?"

MISS PETRIE TELLS OF CONVERTING THE INDIAN

Miss Joesphine Petrie, of this city, a home missionary who has been laboring among the Indians in the far west, addressed the monthly missionary meeting at Warren chapel last night. The meeting was in charge of the Men's Association, and Rev. J. O. McKelvey, the pastor, presided. There were nearly one hundred people present and all were delighted with Miss Petrie's talk as she told many things of interest concerning the American Indian. She referred particularly to her last visit to Oklohoma, where members of nearly all the tribes congregate from time to time.

Miss Petrie said that the Indians are becoming civilized rapidly and they not only support their churches, but last year one tribe contributed $150 for foreign missions. At a conference of all the tribes $1,000 was raised to feed the people and twenty fat cattle were brought along to help provide for the gathering. She said that the converted Indian is intensely in earnest in his work and is anxious that the Gospel shall be preached to other members of the various tribes.

Miss Petrie also spoke of the visit of a government official to that section, and his statement that the Nev Perce tribe are wonderfully religious. She also referred to the great work being carried on by two native missionaries, Rev. Mr. Crawford and Rev. Mr. Eastman. She said that they are doing a wonderful work among their people.

At the close of the address an offering was taken for the work. Miss Petrie distributed interesting literature among those present.

FRELINGHUYSEN'S CURB; LIMITS LAWYERS' FEES

A bill introduced by Senator Joseph Frelinghuysen on March 2 is arousing the displeasure of some of the local practitioners who allege that the bill is presented in the sole interests of the public service corporations. Without going into the text of the bill it can be brefly called a bill to prevent overcharging clients who have causes of action against others to recover damages, or accounts or in fact any other thing in which money is involved.

The new bill says that it will be a misdemeanor for a counsellor to charge more than twenty per cent. of the amount involved without first obtaining permission from a Supreme Court justice. The lawyer who makes the strenuous objection to the bill is one who claims that in certain cases where expert testimony has to be secured and other outlays of money made the twenty per cent. will not cover the value of their labor.

On the other hand others say that the new bill deserves the support of every member of the House and Senate as it will result in eliminating the shyster from practice in certain cases where they depend entirely upon the success of their suits for compensation. The opinion of one man who has had experience in litigation of the sort mentioned is that this bill is one of the best ever introduced by anyone and ought to become a law.

PEARY'S CLAIM TO POLE MUST BE PROVED.

Congress yesterday refused to award Commander Robert E. Peary any emolument or other reward for his discovery of the North Pole until Peary submits his proofs of the achievement. One member on the floor of the House went so far as to put Peary in Dr. Cook's class. Congressman Macon, who was the doubter and made so forcible an argument on what he termed the "discrepancies in Peary's story," that Congress almost unanimously decided that the proofs must first be submitted before any favorable action be taken.

If Peary traveled at the rate he claims he did Cook could have done the same thing, and according to other authorities, Lieutenant Shackleton, who got farthest south and Commander Greely and others, the average rate possible within the limits of human endurance was about twelve miles per day, while Peary claims to have averaged something like twenty-three miles, from the time he left Captain Bartlett. It is up to Peary to show how he did it.

Mr. Frelinghuysen's Prediction.

Joseph S. Frelinghuysen, of Somerset Ccounty, President of the New Jersey Senate, at the sixth annual dinner of the Board of Real Estate Brokers of Hudson County, at the Jersey City Club, last night, predicted in a speech that the bill introduced in the Legislature to have the Morris Canal through Jersey City abondoned would become operative.

SUGGEST TAXING BANKS TO RELIEVE HIGH RATES

Should the banks be taxed for the millions of deposits they hold, or should the real owners of that money pay the tax? And would the taxing of the money equalize the ratables so that the average man would have a chance to live as he desires? These are questions which a citizen has asked the Board of Trade to take up with a view to solving it.

The argument in favor of taxing the bank deposits seems to be based on the belief that the money while lying in the various depositories of the city or employed by the banking institutions in out-of-town investments is not helping the building up of the city, neither are taxes being levied upon the actual worth of the owner of the money. For example: Smith has $100,000 in the bank and owns a house worth $20,000 including its contents. He is assessed for the $20,000, but the money in the bank escapes the assessors' eyes and so no taxes are levied upon the actual property of the man. On the other hand the poor man or he whose sole possession is a lot with its house and furnishings valued at the highest estimate $2,000, must pay the rate on all he owns.

The citizen mentions these things to show the inequality of the system of taxation and insists that if the banks were taxed or the individuals had to pay for their surplus wealth the ratables would be reduced to a normal figure and instead of having their money earning four per cent it could be made to earn six per cent. in mortgages on improved real estate and the building of houses would receive a boom and a natural, healthy growth would become noticeable in the city.

There are now nearly $7,000,000 in the banks of the city and borough, yet it is almost impossible for real estate loans to be had, especially where building is the purpose for which the money is to be used. Last year the citizens of the city paid taxes on about $23,000,000, while the amount of money deposited in the banks was nearly one third of this amount. Would not a tax levy on the bank deposits have reduced the tax rate and have produced the amount needed for the city's expenditures? Another thing which according to the citizen who is agitating these tax questions is the amount for which a man should be exempt from paying. He suggests that $1,000 would be about the correct figure and thinks a bill for this as well as the taxing of bank funds could be passed by the Legislature and receive the signature of the Governor. At any rate the question opens a field for some argument.

UNIQUE MUNICIPAL MEASURE.

Provides for Cancelling Special Elections Asked by Petition.

Trenton, March 10.—A unique bill was introduced by Mr. Tatem, of Camden, in the House yesterday afternoon. It is for a specific case in Camden county, but might lead to complications if enacted.

The bill amends the borough act by providing that when a petition is filed with the municipal authorities calling for a special election to vote upon any proposition, the Common Council or other governing body will not be required to call such an election if a petition is filed against the calling of a special election.

The latter petition, however, must contain a greater number of names than the petition calling for the special election.

Rev. H. N. Jordan, of the Seventh-Day Baptist church, New Market, will speak at the Plainfield Rescue Mission meeting tonight at 8 o'clock.

Dry Cleaning Talk

Gentlemen's clothes cleaned by a Cleanery with the ability and equipments to produce first-class work, will stay clean longer, as when done by an ordinary suit presser who only brushes the surface dust off and removes the most prominent spots from the surface.

With our process the garments are thoroughly cleaned and disinfected, the linings are cleaned and spots that are removed will stay removed and do not appear again the first time the garments are exposed to the dust and grim of the street.

In the beginning it may cost a little more, but will pay at the end, as the clothes don't have to be at the cleaners every two weeks.

Phone us and our wagon will call.

SOLONS PLAY POLITICS

Republicans and Democrats Clash in Senate Over Cost of Living Resolutions.

ACKERMAN ACTS SPEEDILY.

When Osborne Wants His Resolution Resurrected From Committee, Union Senator Introduces Another Resolution.

One of the most bitter partisan fights of the present session occurred on the floor of the Senate yesterday when Senator Osborne gave notice in writing that he will move to relieve the Committee on Judiciary of the further consideration of the resolution introduced on February 21 last, which "requests the New Jersey Senators and Representatives in Congress to do their utmost to obtain the immediate repeal of so much of the statutes as imposes a tariff on foodstuffs and the necessaries of life."

Senator Ackerman, of Union, the majority leader of the Senate, immediately introduced a concurrent resolution heartily endorsing the action of the Senate of the United States, which has for its object the relief of the people from a burdensome situation, if such relief can be secured by legislative enactment. The resolution pointed out that the United States Senate had appointed a committee to investigate the increased cost of living; whether such increase has been caused by the increased production of gold, currency expansion, tariff, or other legislation of Congress.

Senators Fielder, Osborne, Gebhardt and Silzer spoke in favor of Mr. Osborne's plan to have the sentiment of the New Jersey people expressed on the question through the resolution now in the hands of the Judiciary Committee. Mr. Ackerman and Mr. Frelinghuysen spoke in favor of the Ackerman resolution and said that as long as the United States Senate is investigating it should suffice. Mr. Gebhardt tried to have the resolution referred to the Judiciary Committee, but this was voted down and the resolution was then adopted.

There was another spirited discussion on the third reading of House bill, No. 87, which increases city and county committeemen's terms from one to two years. The minority members spoke against the bill and Senators Ackerman, Frelinghuysen and Wakelee expressed their approval of the measure. Just before the measure was to come up for final passage Mr. Frelinghuysen asked that it lie over until he could propose some amendments.

CAST SELECTED FOR HIGH SCHOOL PERFORMANCE

The junior play "tryout" was held yesterday afternoon at the Plainfield High School and this cast was chosen: Bella, Miss Thyra Stiles; Lyvia, Miss Margaret Hutchinson; John Rokesmith, Everitt Smith; Mr. Boffin, Nelson Ramsey; Mrs. Boffin, Miss Bertha Nelson; Mrs. Wiper, Miss Louise Bird; George Sampson, Sewall Ulrich.

The play is a comedy in four acts, entitled "Our Mutual Friend," by Dickens. Mr. Howe is the coach and he is much pleased with the material and prospects for a successful performance.

Broken Axle Causes Wreck.

The breaking of an axle caused the derailment of seven or eight loaded coal cars on an eastbound train near the Grant avenue station, early this afternoon. The "spill" is not a serious one and traffic was not delayed to any extent.

—A. S. Case, of Three Bridges, will sell 35 head of horses on Wednesday, March 16. See adv. in classified column under miscellaneous heading. **

PERSONAL.

Mr. and Mrs. William A. Woodruff, of East Second street, are sojourning at Atlantic City.

Edgar Davis, of 303 West Front Fourth street, has gone on a business trip to Butte, Montana, in the interest of the Ingersoll Rand Drill Company.

Miss Ruth Thompson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Thompson, of East Second street, has been appointed a teacher in the public schools of Morristown. Miss Thompson is a graduate of the Plainfield High School, class '07, and a graduate of the Massachusetts State Normal School of Westfield, Mass. Until several weeks ago Miss Thompson was a teacher in the public schools of North Attleboro, Mass.

MORRISTOWN WANTS TO CELEBRATE BIRTHDAY.

Morristown, March 10.—Morristown wants to celebrate its 200th birthday if it only knows when it arrives. Mayor Theodore Ayers is doing his part and has appointed a committee of ways and means, which in reality is a commitee of discovery.

Local historians are unable to agree on the year of birth. All the old books and newspapers in the Public Library and in private libraries have been persued with vigor in hopes that they might settle the question, but up to date nothing definite had been found. Rev. Andrew Sherman, of this city, author of several historical works, says Morristown was born 1710, while others declare it was a later date, probably 1715. In that year, they say, the proprietors of West Jersey conveyed land in Morris county "from the stock," so Morristown couldn't have been settled before that date.

But according to tradition, Morristown was settled about 1710 by the English, who came here from Phippany, then called Whippanong, and put up houses at Water and Spring streets. Whippany, it is known, was inhabited by the English as early as 1700. Whether or not the exact year of the birth of the town is determined, Morristown has about made up its mind to have an "old home week," and is going to celebrate in good style, so it is said, and if some bookworm finds afterward that this city wasn't known of until 1715 or thereafter it won't make a particle of difference.

Whole Family Arrested.

Bayonne, March 10.—The whole family of Abraham Wagman, including father, mother, son and daughter, were arrested on a charge of larceny preferred against them by the son-in-law, Joseph Weinstein. Weinstein claimed that his entire stock of household furniture had been taken from his home and that his wife joined her parents and brother in making the haul. Besides his wife is charged with taking $500 belonging to them jointly from a New York bank.

Proctor's New Show.

The Todd Nards, acrobats, will appear at Proctor's theatre today in an unusual act. Leonard & Phillips, form a comedy pair. Mr. Leonard impersonates a Swede and Miss Phillips sings several good songs. Marion Kay is a clever little woman. Her songs and impersonations are great. Trainor & Hunt, a comedy team, complete the bill. The films d'art are now better than ever.

No Enumerators Names Yet.

The announcement of appointees as census enumerators has not yet been received by Louis V Hoagland, suprvisor of the census at Elizabeth. He will notify those who are to be enumerators as soon as he knows their names and will open a school of instruction for them in Elizabeth.

—Daily Press want ads pay.

—William G. Mangan, of Netherwood avenue, who has been in charge of the soda water department at L. W. Randolph's drug store, left yesterday for Atlantic City, where he will take his old position at Fralinger's. His position here has been taken by Frank Smith, of East Second street.

LOCAL AMUSEMENTS

Ever since Charles Klein achieved success with "The Lion and the Mouse," every announcement concerning a new play by this dramatic author is read with interest. It will no doubt afford great pleasure to the theatre-goers of this city to know that Henry B. Harris will present at the Plainfield theatre on Friday evening, March 18, Mr. Klein's latest play, "The Third Degree." Like "The Lion and the Mouse," an attempt has been made to disclose certain conditions that exist, but in this instance, instead of taking up the realm of finance, civic institutions are the subject of dabte. A notable cast has been engaged to delineate the different characters in "The Third Degree," and include such actors of repute as Marion Kerby, Irene Oshier, Lawrence Eddinger, George Summer, Gladden James, A. W. Ellis and others.

BURLINGTON CALLS TO PRESIDENT FRELINGHUYSEN.

Burlington, March 10.—People here are wondering what effect the results of the special elections in this town on voting machines will have upon President Frelinghuysen of the Senate, who last year could not perceive that there was any public demand for the abolishment of the voting machines and who calmly sacrificed the repealer introduced in the Senate by Senator Hinchliffe.

There are four wards and five districts with five voting machines in Burlington and the total vote was 719, a very large vote for a special election, approximating the vote in the election against the machines and only 70 in their favor. The 70 votes were mostly those of officeholders and political workers influenced from Trenton. Every ward in Burlington gives large Republican majorities in a general election. The total vote for Senator last November was 1,437, and the Republican majority was 441. It will be seen that the verdict was a Republican one as well as a popular one. There is general congratulation that Burlington has got rid of the machines, but how about Frelinghuysen and the Legislature?

The total vote was 629 against, 70 for. The summaries are: First ward, 124 against, 17 for; Second ward, first district, 114 against, 8 for; Second ward, second district, 92 against, 17 for; Third ward, 144 against, 16 for; Fourth ward, 155 against, 12 for.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Prayer Meeting Topic For the Week Beginning March 13, 1910.

Topic.—Patient faithfulness that wins the crown.—Rev. ii. 1-10, 18, 19. Comment by Rev. Sherman H. Doyle, D. D.

The book of Revelation is divided into seven parts, each one of which is subdivided seven times. The first general division is that of the churches, of which there are seven, and each one is described just as they were in John's time, and yet typical of the churches in all ages. Most churches today can find in one of them a description of itself. In this review of seven typical churches Christ finds none altogether good and none altogether bad. He praises the good, denounces the evil and gives warnings against the continuance of the evil. The letters are addressed to the "angels," or pastors, of the churches, showing the high estimation of the pastoral office that Christ Himself possessed, a position which certain classes of people, who are trying almost constantly to belittle the Christian ministry, might well observe and find in it a profitable example.

The circumstances in which the churches of John's day found themselves no doubt led Christ in writing to them to emphasize "patient faithfulness" or faithfulness in connection with a spirit of patience. It may be easy to be faithful under difficult circumstances if we could only give way to our impatience amid the difficulties. But to be both faithful and patient under sore distress is a united virtue, well deserving the Saviour's commendation. They lived in troublous religious times. These churches were largely made up of gentiles, who found it hard to give up the faith and forms of long years of training. Then there were some Jews in them, who practically still cling to the Jewish religion. False teachers and false doctrines rapidly arose. Outside persecutions made a Christian's life an uncertain quantity. Martyrdom was of frequent occurrence. To be faithful and to be patient at the same time must have sorely tried the souls of men. Yet they were faithful and especially patient. Christ frequently says, "I know thy patience." The early Christians were not all saints, but they did possess an abundance of patience, which is worthy our emulation today. Patience is not the overcrowning virtue of the present age, but when we think of the patient faithfulness of these early Christians, who endured even martyrdom without a murmur, and the example of Him who, though "led like a lamb to the slaughter, yet opened not His mouth," we should learn to exercise to a far greater extent than we do patience in our faithfulness.

Christ places a high reward upon patient faithfulness. To the church of Smyrna, which He declared must pass through many tribulations and trials, He also said, "Fear thou none of these things which thou shalt suffer; behold the devil shall cast some of you into prison that ye may be tried, and ye shall have tribulations ten days (a short time; be thou faithful unto death (not only until the end of life, but in death, if it should be martyrdom), and I will give thee a crown of life," or eternal life as a crown. What a precious promise for patient faithfulness! Eternal life as a crown! The same promise holds good to us. The Christian life today is not a pathway of perfect peace. There are still trials and tribulations to be endured and things to suffer, but if we, too, are faithful and patient in our faithfulness there is laid up a crown of eternal life for us—Christ's reward for fidelity amid trials and tribulations. Let us see that none of us lose that crown which Christ has prepared for us.

BIBLE READINGS.

Matt. xxv. 31-46; Rom. v. 1-5; viii. 24, 25; Phil. ii. 1-12; I Cor. ix. 24-27; II Tim. iv. 1-8; Jas. i. 1-12; I Tim. vi. 11, 12; I Pet. i. 1-9; v. 4.

A Heartening Word.

A Minnesota pastor says: I glory in Christian Endeavor work, upon which God has set His seal.

I remember when a lad of fifteen in my English home yearning my heart to God and yearning for the other young people of our church and community for whom no special effort of any kind aside from the Sunday school, was being made.

Within three weeks I had banded six of my comrades into a young people's society. The number grew with every weekly meeting. There were conversions, and in time we heard of the American organization known as the Christian Endeavor and at once added the name Christian Endeavor to that of our society.

From that society preachers of the gospel have come. The society is now twenty-one years old, but is ever green and strong.

It has been my plan as a pastor in this country to give a Sabbath evening to the installation of the new Christian Endeavor officers in the presence of the whole church and congregation, knowing full well the increased interest that this will arouse on the part of the church in Christian Endeavor work.

I once had an elder (I am a Presbyterian) who was very skeptical about giving a whole valuable Sunday evening to such a procedure, but after the meeting he said: "It was grand. That was good for the church to witness."

I have but recently come to the north country, the woodland. This kind of work is missionary in deed as well as in name, and for that reason I chose it. There is no society here now; there never has been, but if it is God's will there soon will be.—Christian Endeavor World.

The Island of Regeneration

The glance that Langford gave the man was at once casual and indifferent. His whole interest was centered upon the woman. He found himself trembling violently in spite of the superhuman efforts he put forth at control. It was only the most iron constraint indeed that enabled him to approach her at all. As he drew near to her, he took off his cap, bowed to her and strove to speak.

"Katharine," he said at last hoarsely, "thank God that I have found you!"

"Woman," said the man by her side, stepping swiftly forward and confronting Langford, "who is this man?"

"His name," returned the woman steadily, "is Valentine Arthur Langford."

"What did you do to her," asked the man with the bluntest possible directness, "that she weeps at the thought of you; that she is filled with horror as you approach; that she looks at you as she does now? I have never seen that look upon her face since we have been upon this island."

Langford turned and faced the man as these singular queries were put to him.

"Who is this man, Katharine?" he asked, an angry flush in his face.

"I don't know for certain," the woman answered, "but I think his name is—"

"What has my name to do with it?" interrupted the man persistently. "Will you answer my questions?"

"When I know who you are and by what right you put them, I will decide," was Langford's contemptuous answer.

The woman had never seen her companion in a temper, but he was perilously near the breaking point now, and Langford, although he realized it not, had never been and would never be in so much danger as at that instant. A swift glance showed her the man strung to the very outbreaking point. The woman laid her hand upon his arm, a calming touch.

"In the world," she said, "people are presented to one another."

How she loathed Langford. She thought for a moment that she had only to say the word and her island companion would tear him to pieces. She wondered how far after all she had succeeded in instilling into his mind the restraints of civilization. She began to see dimly that such an achievement was beyond the power of any single individual; that it had been in the past and would always be in the future the result of the co-operation and restraint of the many. Yet she forced herself to speak evenly to the visitor.

"Mr. Langford, I believe this man's name to be John Revell Charnock. I believe him to be an American, a Virginian. I found him here upon the island."

"This matters nothing," said the islander, "I don't care what this man's name is, or who he is. I want to know why he distresses you."

"Sir," said Langford, wondering what was the best tone to take with this singular being, "pray let us withdraw yonder to the shade of the trees where we can be more private."

The men in the boat who had scrambled out upon the sands had been eager spectators and auditors of everything that had gone on. Their curiosity was greatly excited and their propinquity was evidently distasteful to Langford.

"You are refusing to answer my questions," said the man. "I will not be put off further."

"Man," said the woman, laying her hand upon his arm, "it is my wish."

"Oh, if you wish it."

He turned without a word and led the way rapidly across the beach out of earshot but not out of sight among the trees.

"Now," he said turning and facing the other two.

He noticed that the woman was ghastly white and that Langford was scarcely less pale.

"Sir," said Langford firmly, "I decline to answer your question. I have business with this lady and with her alone. It does not concern you and I beg you to withdraw for a moment and give me free speech with her. After that I may have some questions to put to you."

"Everything that concerns her concerns me," said the man, sternly. "What you have to say to her must be said to me. Speak on."

For a moment Langford looked as if he would have sprung upon the other, but he was so clearly no match for the wild stranger that discretion came to his aid and kept him still. Besides he had no wish for vulgar brawling then. He turned to the woman.

"Katherine," he said, "I have much to say to you. Can't you make this man hear reason?"

"She has made me hear reason for three years," answered the man for her before she could speak, "but her power ends in this hour."

The woman looked at him piteously and nodded her head. She realized that the thread of destiny was taken from her hands and forever.

"Mr. Langford, you will have to say to me whatever you wish before this man," she said at last.

"Why, 'tis impossible," cried the other.

"It must be."

"And," interposed the man, "you shall say nothing to her until you have answered my questions."

"There must be no violence," cried the woman, stepping between the two. "No violence!"

For answer the man gently, but with irresistible force, lifted her out of the way. She knew now where he got the strength to tear down the rocky wall, and while she trembled, she thrilled.

"Katharine," said Langford—to do him justice he was not afraid—"what is this man to you?"

"I am nothing to her," answered the man, "except that I love her."

"And you?" said Langford, hotly, still addressing the woman.

"She loves me," again answered the other, "and we were happy until you brought the world to our shores. Since then she has wept. Look at her now."

"My God," exclaimed Langford, "is it possible?"

"It is true," said the woman, finding voice at last and looking steadily from one to the other.

Langford's emotion now passed all bounds. He had trembled before; he shook now as if with the palsy. He reached out and caught the trunk of one of the trees to steady himself.

"What are you to this man, in God's name?" he cried.

"Nothing. Ever since I fled from the ship on that hateful night and landed on this island, we have been friends, good friends. He was a castaway. He had forgotten his speech. He had lived here since he was a child. I taught him everything."

"To love you?" queried Langford in hot and bitter jealousy.

"That was one thing I learned myself," answered the man. "And yesterday, you might call it chance, but I call it God," said the man gravely, "discovered to us the love we bore each other and that is all."

"Are you—forgive the question," said Langford, addressing the woman, and there was agony in his voice, "as you were when I left you?"

"I am a different woman, thank God!"

"Different?"

"Yes, but in the sense in which you mean the question, I am just as I was, save that I love this man."

"But you had no right to love him or any one," burst forth Langford bitterly.

"And do you reproach me with that?"

"Do I?"

"Think of your wife."

"She's dead," said the man hoarsely. "I have searched the world for you. I have come back here to make amends, to own my fault, to marry you before God and man, to take you back, to do for you as long as I shall live all that a man can do."

There was such genuine passion in his voice and in his appeal that the most inimical and indifferent would have recognized it, but there was no response to it in the woman's heart. A greater love than his had come into her soul. The whole current of her being flowed to the man by her side.

"No," she said. "Your words have no appeal for me. They awaken no response in my heart. I love this man, not you."

"Have you thought," cried Langford meaningly, "that you are not free to love any one but me?"

"By heaven!" cried the man springing forward, "this time I will be answered. Why is she not free to love me or any one?"

"Because," said the other resolutely, "before she came into your life she belonged to me."

"Belonged to you?"

"Yes, to me."

"And by what tie?"

Langford hesitated. He was furiously wrought up. He saw that it was necessary to make a break, a rupture between these two. He thought that if he could do so, his own suit might the better prosper. He was in deadly earnest and therefore he took the risk. How frightful it was, he had no preconception. He did not understand that he was dealing with a primitive man. How should he? He did not understand what passions slept beneath the surface. And perhaps if he had understood, to do him justice, for he was a fearless man, he would have ventured just the same.

"She was my mistress!" he said through his teeth.

"Shame! Shame!" cried the woman, and then fell silent, clasping her hands and waiting for what might come. The hour of her travail was upon her.

Langford flashed a look at her and then his gaze reverted to the man. The expected outbreak did not instantly come.

"Mistress!" said the other. "I know not what that means, but 'tis a word of bitterness. Say further and more clearly your intent."

"Why, you fool!"

"He that calleth his brother a fool shall be damned," said the man.

Langford stared at him.

"Where have you lived," he cried, "that you don't know the meaning of words?"

"I have lived nowhere but here and I have known no language but what this woman has taught me."

"Yet she could easily have taught you the meaning of that word," the other responded with cruel, ruthless meaning.

"I will take the lesson from you."

"You will have it then!"

"I will."

"She was my wife, but without the blessing of God or the law of man. I owned her, do you understand? I possessed her body and soul."

"Not soul," said the woman, but the protest was lost.

"You lie!" cried the man, swiftly leaping upon him.

No tiger ever sprang with such swiftness or such ferocity. Langford

"Woman, Shall I Throw Him Down and Kill Him?"

was prepared for an attack. He dealt a blow at the oncoming figure with all the force of his arm, and skill and training enabled him to put into it more than one would have fancied from the slightness of his figure. He struck the man fairly in the chest. The blow apparently might have staggered an ox, it had no effect whatever upon the other. In an instant Langford was caught as if in the grasp of a whirlwind. He was lifted from the earth and held high in the air. For one tense moment, unable to struggle, he hung upon uplifted arms. He heard a voice beneath him cry:

"Woman, shall I throw him down and kill him?"

"Do him no hurt," said the woman, "for what he has said, as he sees it, is true."

CHAPTER XVI.

Confronted.

At these appalling words the strength seemd all at once to go out of the man's arm. Heavily, but not with purposeful ungentleness, he slowly set Langford down upon his feet on the sand.

"You brute!" cried the other man, trembling with impotent anger.

There was nothing that he could do personally. If he had possessed a weapon he would have killed the islander, but he was unarmed and helpless. Therefore he turned toward the beach and called to his men. They had seen the sudden attack and were already running across the sands.

"No," said the woman, "that word belongs to you. You have told the truth, and yet not all." She turned to her companion of the island. "Man," she said, "you have loved me. You must hear what I have to say."

"You have said that it was true," he muttered, hoarsely. "And the man who has said it lives. Lives!"

His voice rose to a cry. He turned toward Langford again. But by this time the six blue jackets who made up the gig's crew were close at hand.

"Haley," cried Langford to the coxswain, "seize that brute yonder, and—"

The woman was still wearing the knife that she habitually carried. She used it often and kept the blade bright and of keen edge. She whipped it out on the instant, her civilization falling from her like a discarded garment when the man she loved was threatened.

"Let no one lay hand upon him," she cried, aflame to defend him. "I swear that I will drive it into my own heart if he be touched."

"Give me the knife," said her companion, suddenly.

Before she could prevent him, he whipped it out of her hand.

"And now," he said, springing toward the huddled group of sailors, the bright blade lifted, "which of you will touch me?"

The men shrank back. There was something so furious in the aspect of the man, his power was so evident and his temper as well that none wished to precipitate the fray.

"I appeal to you," said the woman, turning to Langford, "send back the men. A moment since I saved your life. At a word from me he would have thrown you from him and broken your back. Be generous. You must. And this man shall give me a hearing. You are safe from him, I promise you."

What might have been the result of this appeal can never be determined, for at that moment a new factor entered upon the scene, a factor whose presence was as surprising and unexpected as it was determinative. From out to sea, yet near at hand, came a muffled detonation, the roar of a heavy gun. Around one of the headlands that rose on that side of the island there swept the white sides of another great ship beside which the yacht, imposing though she was, was a toy. It was the woman who saw it first.

"Look!" she cried. "A ship of war, a cruiser. See, from her staff the flag of the United States. This land is American. I claim it by right of discovery. Lay but a hand upon this man, and I will have you hanged for murder, Langford. They see us there. Their glasses have searched the shore. They have seen this encounter. That gun was a warning. A boat puts off. Thank God, we are saved from you!"

Things had transpired even as she said. What the cruiser was doing in those seas, how happened she to be there were things as yet unknown, but that she was there was apparent. She had approached the island from the other side, and had sailed around it. Her men had observed the encounter on the shore, which seemed to be between natives and persons from the yacht, which was in plain view a little farther out to sea, and the gun had been fired to call attention to the power of the United States.

This put an entirely new face on the whole affair. Matters were taken out of the hands of the parties to the quarrel. The law had come to the island. The islander did not, could not know it, but his baffled antagonist realized it immediately. So did the woman. At Langford's command, his men, much bewildered at the scene they had witnessed, went back to their boat. He himself presently followed after, and stood upon the strand awaiting the approach of the heavy man-of-war cutter which had been put away from the white cruiser's side.

"Man," she said, softly, "this is what I had to tell you."

He nodded. A hollow groan burst from his lips.

"His mistress," he muttered, brokenly.

"I would not have had you learn in this way, and now that you have heard so much, you must hear more," she went on, not sparing herself, though she might have justly resented the word. She was dealing with more serious things than words now, bitter though they might be. "That ship, which is the ship of our country, stands for law as his for license. I was more sinned against than sinning. When you have heard all, then you shall judge. This is the test."

"Would God that it had never been laid upon me," said the man, hoarsely. "Would God that the beacon had not been lighted on the hill!"

"Nay," returned the woman, gently, "that's past praying for. Decision rests with you, but you must not pass it until you have heard the whole story. The world holds me stained, polluted, it may be said, but I am not the sinner that it thinks me or he portrays."

"You said it was true," doggedly cried the man.

"Yes, but not all true."

"And I had him in my hands, and still he lives."

"Won't you hear me?" pleaded the woman.

The man shook her off and turned away. The very innocence which had prevented his understanding at first the charge made it the more hideous when comprehension came. He had loved this woman with a love that passed the love of man, for there had not entered into his mind the faintest possibility that she could ever be or ever have been other than what she seemed, a daughter of the gods in truth, in sweetness and in purity. And this strange man had come from out the world and proclaimed her his mistress, his cast-off, abandoned mistress. Once the clew was given he found more hideous depths of infamy in that word than would have appeared had his been a wiser and more experienced vision. Indeed, so clear and pure was the soul of this woman that a man of the world would have known instantly that there was an explanation, which the child of nature could not see forthcoming. He wanted to be away from her and alone, and he turned as if to plunge into the depths of the forest, but with gentle force she restrained him.

"You are a man, with a man's power and a man's soul and a man's heart, you cannot fly now. You must stay and face the problem. The question must be pursued to the bitter end. My life and your life depends upon what we do now, perhaps his life, too."

"O, God," cried the man, recurring again to that bitter thought, "I had him in my hands and spared him!"

"But you spared him for my sake," said the woman; "think of that."

"For your sake," declared the man, pointedly. "I would and should have killed him."

"Thou shalt not kill!" said the woman, softly.

"An eye for an eye, and a tooth for a tooth," returned the man. "He and you between you slew my heart. His death would be no murder, but retribution."

"But it was in part my fault," returned the woman, bravely making her confession.

PLAN NEW HIGH SCHOOL FOR ELIZABETH.

Elizabeth, March 10.—Superintendent Clement's recommendations for a new High School building and for the purchase of portable elementary schools, made to the Board of Education last month, have been accepted by the committee on sites and new buildings of the board. This committee so reported at last night's meeting.

It further recommended that the new structure be erected at South Broad, South and Williamson streets, the site of the Battin building. The committee also asked that a conference be arranged with the Board of School Eestimate so as to fix the amount of money to be appropriated for the proposed new building and for the portable schools.

There is congestion throughout the schools in the city because of the constant influx of population. Mr. Clement has made an exhaustive investigation of portable schools and has found them satisfactory.

Ortleb and partner, O'Keefe and Taylor, Burscher and Schaub, Britton and Radin, Matthews and W. Meyer, Vail and C. Meyer, Terry and Conklin and Giddes and Alberts.

ROTH BOWLERS DEFEAT NEUMAN'S QUINTET.

ADAM SCHOTT LOCATES HIS BATTING OPTIC

Adam Schott, the speedy left fielder of the Plainfield ball team, was on Park avenue last night with a broad smile encircling his countenance.

"Wat yer laughing at?" queried George Washington Ruggles, the Park avenue "shine" champion.

"I'm longing for the ball season to open," replied the modest Mr. Schott, "for I've found my batting eye. I lost it two years ago."

This bit of news should be relished by local fans who have been watching Schott's diamond performances during the past few years. Schott is a fast man when it comes to chasing and catching fly balls and cannot be beaten in the local field; but, he has been woefully weak at the bat.

Adam realipes that, so during the past few weeks he has been trimming his eyes, by batting practise. The Clinton Avenue boy is confident that he has recovered his "eye" and that he will have a record breaking season with the club.

"Jack Martin handed me out some of Jesse Burkett's pointers on batting," said Schott to a Daily Press man this morning. "I'm going to put them in practise and I am sure I will clout the horsehide at a speedy clip this season."

Local fans will remember big Jim Robertson, the former Fordham star who covered first base for Westfield and Plainfield. Well, Big Jih will be out of the game this season owing to an attack of rheumatism which has unfitted him for the game.

Ira Van Arsdale should make an efficient umpire for Plaineld. Van was a former player and understands the game from A to Z. He is also cool-headed and that is one of the virtues that all umpires should have.

New Brunswick has decided not to join the New Jersey State League, but stick to independent ball. Here's luck to George Kuhn, Jr., and H. Wasserman for another successful season.

Sporting scribes in New Brunswick are doing a lot of shouting against "bush league" ball. It is because they are educated up to the ten-man game, a la Van Cleef, maybe.

Bogert Conklin, of Somerville, has declared himself in favor of a trolley circuit to include Plainfield, Dunellen, Bound Brook and Somerville. Bogert has the reputation of always entertaining common sense baseball ideas, and what he says generally goes in Somerville.

Manager George L. Listman is engaged in arranging the schedule of the N. J. State Y. M. C. A. League. It will be completed in two weeks according to George L.

William Feiring has a touch of the baseball fever already. He is organizing a team and will issue a challenge to V. W. Nash, Jr., for a series of three games with a team to be composed of local lawyers, the losing team to "blow" to a supper.

N. P. H. S. has strong hopes of taking P. H. S. nine into camp this season. The first game of the borough team will be played at Bound Brook on April 9.

REV. DR. MEAD MAY RETURN TO NEWARK

Announcement was made in Newark yesterday that arrangements have been practically agreed upon under which the Rev. Dr. Charles L. Mead, whose transfer from the Centenary Methodist church of Newark to a Hoboken church was a conspicuous incident of the annual session of the Newark Conference last year, will be returned to his old church in Newark. The action necessary to accomplish this cannot be taken until the annual session of the conference this spring.

The taking of Dr. Mead from Newark was against the wishes of the members of his congregation, and the decision of the conference has not yet been reached as to who will serve as the pastor of Centenary church during the ensuing year as it is said to be quite certain that the Rev. Dr. A. C. McCrea, who was appointed to succeed Dr. Mead, does not want nor will accept a re-appointment and has so announced. The Supply Committee of the church is now engaged in selecting a pastor to recommend for appointment at the coming session of the conference to serve during the coming year.

—Neuman Brothers have received a large shipment of new White Label canned goods, including whole asparagus, asparagus tips, fancy peas, fancy stringless beans, fancy tiny lima beans, fancy Maine corn and fancy Jersey tomatoes at special prices by the dozen or case.

Mrs. Albert C. Clark, of 59 Jackson avenue, is detained at home with an attack of nervous indigestion.

PURSUE MISS BLOODGOOD

Hounds Put on Trail of Missing Society Woman Well Known Here.

FATHER OFFERS A REWARD.

Granddaughter of George W. Van Boskerck Suffered From Nervousness—A Description of Woman Sought.

The disappearance of Miss Helen Bloodgood, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Bloodgood, of Lakewood, has aroused the entire country round about the famous resort and hundreds of men and women have enlisted in the search for the missing girl. As a last resort yesterday bloodhounds were set upon the trail, but after following the scent as far as Maxim, about five miles from Lakewood, the hounds lost the scent and the search in that direction was abandoned.

When the dogs dropped the trail at Maxim the natural conclusion was that Miss Bloodgood had entrained at that point for some other station on the New Jersey Central road, but train crews on the road who would have seen Miss Bloodgood had she taken a train at the time she is said to have escaped from her nurse say that no such lightly clad person had boarded a train at that place.

Besides this befuddling circumstance the young woman had neither purse or money with her when she made her dash for parts unknown. There is a theory that will be worked out today that Miss Bloodgood in a fit of despondency threw herself into Lake Carasaljo nearby and if nothing has been discovered by this afternoon the lake will either be drained or dragged for her body.

Interviews with the parents of the girl show that she could have had no ulterior motive in taking her own life. She was involved in no affair of the heart so far as the parents know. It is believed that her mind gave away under a nervous strain. Some years ago she disappeared from her home under somewhat similar circumstances and then, as now, the cause was practically the same—nervous breakdown. Miss Bloodgood had been under the care of physicians for some time and had two nurses constantly in attendance. Her escape from one of these nurses was effected through a scuffle in which Miss MacArthur, the nurse, who was attending the patient, was thrown to the floor and stunned. Five minutes later Miss Bloodgood was flying through the grounds of the city in the direction of the lake.

Mr. Bloodgood, the girl's father, has offered a substantial reward for information leading to the recovery of his daughter. Miss Bloodgood's grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. George W. Van Boskerck, of West Seventh street, have not received any information which would lead them to a solution of the mystery of the young woman's disappearance.

Farmers, policemen, constables and many private citizens of Lakewood and nearby places have joined in the search for the young woman.

Mr. Bloodgood said last night that he thought it possible that his daughter had managed to get some clothing from a farmer's wife and had satisfied any inquirers that it was all right for her to be escaping from an imaginary pursuer. He thought it possible that she might even hide her identity under an assumed name. The missing young woman is described as being twenty-six years old, five feet seven inches in height; slender figure and hands; hair brown and wavy; slight growth of hair on face; she was lightly clad when she left home, but has undoubtedly secured others.

MISS SARAH BILYEAU NOW MRS. WEIGMANN

Miss Sarah Frances Bilyeu, daughter of Clarence Bilyeu, of 309 Somerset street, and Charles Hugo Francis Weigmann, of the same address, were married at 8 o'clock last night by Rev. Ora J. Shoop, pastor of Grace M. E. church. The ceremony was performed at the residence of the officiating minister. Miss Frances E. Breakey, of Stone street, the borough, was the only attendant.

The wedding was a quiet one owing to the illness of the bride's father. Sometime ago he fell off a ladder and received severe injuries and he does not improve. He is still at Muhlenberg Hospital under treatment.

WRECK A COSTLY AFFAIR

Derailment of Coal Train at Grant Ave. Station Represents a Loss of $10,000.

DEPOT HAS NARROW ESCAPE.

Coal Ladened Gondola Cars Come Within Five Feet of Ploughing Through Building—Traffic Delayed.

Two wrecking crews, comprising a force of seventy-five men, were needed to clear the Jersey Central eastbound tracks of the coal train wreck which occurred at the Grant avenue depot at 2 o'clock yesterday afternoon. It was not until 9 o'clock last night that the last derailed car was tracked. After darkness had set in the men worked with the aid of a searchlight. According to a Jersey Central representative the loss to the company will reach $10,000.

The Grant avenue depot had a close escape from being badly damaged, as two loaded coal cars, each of seventy-five tons capacity, jumped the track and ditched themselves five feet from the ticket office window. Five other cars, of the same type, were also hurled off the tracks and partially demolished.

The signal system at the Grant avenue station and at the bridge was put out of commission. The cars in sinking in the soft turf ripped the wires and destroyed connections. A gang of men began work this morning repairing the breaks.

As a result of the wreck traffic on the eastbound tracks was held up for about eight hours, trains going east being obliged to run over the westbound track. This arrangement naturally caused more or less delay in the arrival and departure of trains at all of the local stations.

Ticket Agent Raymond Carver received a big scare. At the time of the accident, he was sitting in the rear room of his office engaged in repairing a chair. He was startled by a loud crash caused by the buckling of the train and saw the cars dashing towards the ticket office. He quickly telegraphed the railroad authorities. The cause of the accident, according to the railroad people was due to the spreading of the rails. Repairs were being made to the tracks yseterday, and when the wrecked train was sighted a temporary rail was installed, but the precaution failed to prevent the accident. The rails evidently began to spread as the locomotive was crossing the bridge, as at that point the tank of the engine separated from the cab, the former part being yanked off the truck.

A sharp blow of the whistle was a signal that something was wrong. The train was being pushed by another locomotive on the rear end, but before the engineer shut off steam, the rear locomotive had succeeded in pushing the seven forward cars off the tracks on the depot platform. Two derricks were in commission one hour after the accident. Three hours time was consumed in replacing the locomotive tank on its truck, and in order to get the wrecked cars back on the tracks it was necessary to empty them of coal. A pile of several hundred tons of coal is still on the station platform.

MEFFORD RUNYON DIES AFTER AN ACTIVE LIFE

Mefford Runyon, one of the oldest and most highly respected citizens of Piscataway township passed away at Stelton early yesterday morning, aged 83 years. He had been in poor health for some time.

Mr. Runyon belonged to that family of Runyons whose lives are so closely linked with the history of that section. The Runyons were settlers with the Stelles of the township and a long line of Runyons has left behind it an honorable record.

Mefford Runyon had tilled the soil al lof his life. He had been successful. He had been one of the earnest supporters of the Stelton Baptist church and for many years had been a deacon. His farm is just west of the Stelton railroad station. Mr. Runyon had been a deason of the old church since 1879.

Mr. Runyon was a descendant of Vincent Runyon, who spelled his name Rugnion, who came to this country in 1663. All of the Runyons in Piscataway descended from Vincent.

The progenitor of the family in this country is supposed to have been among the French refugees who fled their country following the revocation of the famous Edict of Nantes in 1865, whereby so many Protesants were driven to Holland and thence to the New World.

Forty years or so ago Mr. Runyon was a merchant as well as farmer and conducted an extensive hay business.

He was a widower. He leaves four sons and two daughters: Jephthah, Ephraim, Frank, Charles, who is supervising principal of the township schools; Mrs. Furman Walker and Mrs. William E. Drake.

TRAVELING SALESMAN HAS NARROW ESCAPE.

Frederick Martin, a salesman for B. Spegleberg & Co., New York paper box makers, narrowly escaped being run down by a Somerset street trolley car this morning at 11:30 o'clock. Mr. Martin was about to cross West Front street when the strap holding together his sample boxes of various sizes became loosened and the boxes spilled out on the trolley tracks.

Martin was busy picking up his wares and did not notice the approach of the trolley car and he was hidden from the motorman by a passing wagon. The car was stopped about two feet from the salesman's bent body.

BIG RALLY OF FORESTERS

Supreme Chief Ranger Stevenson Greeted by a Large Crowd Here.

HE SINGS ORDER'S PRAISES.

Plainfielders and Many from this Section Hear What Fraternal Organization Has Accomplished.

Supreme Chief Ranger Elliott G. Stevenson, of the Independent Order of Foresters, of Detroit, was enthusiastically greeted by an audience that filled the Plainfield theatre from pit to dome last night. The occasion was in the nature of a reception tendered to Dr. Stevenson under the auspices of Court Plainfield, 1144 and Court Watchung 3871, I. O. F., of this city. It was one of the largest fraternal gatherings in the history of the city and in the audience were visiting Foresters from Raritan, Somerville, Bound Brook, Dunellen, South Plainfield, Westfield and Elizabeth.

In the principal address of the evening Chief Ranger Stevenson exploited the objects and the past history of the order in a manner which commanded the closest attention of his hearers. Dwelling on the history of the Foresters, he referred to the organization in Newark in 1874 with an enrollment of 400 members. He cited the rapid growth in all parts of the United States and Canada by declaring that the present membership has reached the quarter million mark. In New Jersey he stated that the membership has reached the 12,000 mark.

The speaker called the attention of his hearers to the fact that the order has paid $29,000,000 in death benefits since its inception and that it has on hand a surplus fund of more than $15,000,000. In this connection the speaker said:

"There are chronic kickers in all orders, the Foresters not excepted. There are Foresters who want to know about our large surplus, and how it is obtained. If these members will take the trouble to read last year's report of the Supreme Court they will see that $666,000 in interest was earned on investments made by the Supreme Court."

The Orphan's Home was also extolled by the speaker. He referred to the successful operation of the home situated at Oakdale, Canada, which is maintained by taking one cent each month from the regular court dues paid by each member, aggregating about $30,000 a year. That fund, he declared, provides for the care and education of children of deceased Foresters. Fifty children, he said, are now being cared for in the institution.

A feature of the Orphan's fund, explained the speaker, is that mothers are not obliged to send their children to the institution in case of the death of the father. Such being the case the lodge has created a fund for the payment of five dollars monthly for each child to widows for the purpose of educating their children and bringing them up in the home.

The tuberculosis sanitarium, at Rainbow Lake, in the heart of the Adirondack mountains, which is conducted by the Supreme Court was also referred to by the speaker. He said that the sanitarium is fully equipped for the treatment of members afflicted with tuberculosis in its incipient stage.

In his address Dr. Stevenson paid a high tribute to Dr. Oronhyatekha, the late supreme chief of the order, who died several years ago at Toronto. He told how that noted Indian studied medicine, but gave up his profession an took up the work of organizing the Foresters simply because of his love for his fellow men.

The speaker congratulated the two local lodges on their rapid growth and advancement. Court Plainfield

COURT GIVES GEER ONE MORE CHANCE

Charles Geer, of this city, retracted his plea of not guilty and entered one of non vult in the New Brunswick court yesterday to a charge of stealing a $25 horse and a $30 buggy from Spencer Gardner, a mail carrier of that city. Robert Adrain appeared for him.

Acting Prosecutor Russell Watson told the court that at one time Geer was a man of standing in the community, conducting a large carriage business, but that he had failed and had lost all of his money and had since been going lower and lower. He said that Geer claimed that he had been dickering for the purchase of the rig from Gardner, while Gardner claimed that Geer had had no right to take the rig without first paying for it.

Geer, he explained, had expressed a desire to pay for the rig and Mr. Watson recommended that the sentencs be lenient owing to the man's previous good record and to his desire to pay Mr. Gardner for the loss of the rig.

Judge Lyon placed Geer in charge of the probation officer for three years, with directions that he must pay Gardner for the loss of the rig.

SENTENCE NEXT FRIDAY

Joel and Horace Coddington to Be Arraigned Before Judge Schenck Mar. 18.

JAIL TERM IS PREDICTED.

Conviction Admittedly a Victory for Circles on the Square—William Jeffery Is Satisfied.

The red badged band which with William Jeffery as a leader has done so much to purify the politics in Warren township, was slapping itself on the back, metaphorically speaking, yesterday afternoon and this morning over the conviction of Horace Coddington at Somerville yesterday. Prosecutor Reger asked Judge Schenck this morning to set a day for sentence and he named next Friday morning. Alvah A. Clark, Coddington's counsel, although in court did not make any motion for a new trial and it was generally believed that both the Coddingtons would receive jail sentences.

According to testimony disclosures were made at the trial of Horace Coddington which convinced the jury that Joel and Horace had connived to divert the town's money to their own use and purposes and the pleading of non vult by Joel strengthened the case against the other brother. The Circles on the Square got busy when rumors of misappropriation of funds became whispered about and instituted the investigation which has resulted in the apprehending and prosecution of the two men.

As a result of the investigation and notwithstanding their powerful political pull indictments were found against both men by the Somerset county grand jury. The Circles on the Square became a great factor in the prosecution and it was openly declared that ultimately the members of the Circles and the Coddingtons friends would come to blows over the matter. But this did not disturb the men who were working for the cleaning up of rotten conditions in the township's affairs and the prosecution went merrily on.

At the trial five checks were put in evidence showing that Joel had signed them as treasurer and the money appropriated by brother Horace. These five checks aggregated $600. It was alleged that Horace tried to make a scapegoat of his brother Joel, charging him with the full responsibility for drawing the checks. The jury failed to see the crime that way. After the verdict of the jury it is said the members of the Circles paraded the streets of Somerville giving vent to their jubilation over the conviction.

LITTLE GIRL RUN OVER BY BEEF CONCERN WAGON.

Margaret Conger, the five-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Conger, of West Second street, was knocked down by one of the Union Beef Company wagons at Second street and Madison avenue yesterday afternoon and severely bruised and scratched about the body and face.

The child had been playing with othr children and started to run across the street just as the wagon came along. Robert Marks, colored, the driver, stopped his horse as quickly as possible, it is said, but not soon enough to prevent the accident. One wheel of the wagon ran over the child's leg, but Dr. Albert Pittis, who was summoned, could not discover that any bones were broken.

M. E. Conference Protest.

Protests were telegraphed to Governor J. Franklin Fort and the Speaker of the House of the Assembly yesterday by Bishop Henry Spellmeyer, presiding at the annual conference of the Methodist Episcopal church, in Atlantic City, against bills in the Legislature which would change present excise regulations and permit Sunday baseball playing. The telegram was the result of a resolution introduced by Rev. E. G. Reed.

N. Y. AMUSEMENTS.

Can anyone, even a girl herself, imagine the sense of mingled trepidation and surprise a young woman would feel if she found herself suddenly possessed of a prospective but unknown husband as the result of a daring purchase of a lottery ticket? Whether done in a spirit of innocent mischief or with the view of actually tempting Fate, to find oneself the holder of the winning number would prove one the less astounding. This is the situation which confronts Lizzie, the elderly spinster in "The Lottery Man," now currect at the Bijou theatre. The fact is, Lizzie is decidedly pleased with her bargain, and the dismay is all on the man's side. One must see Lizzie to appreciate his point of view. Helen Lowell, who plays the part of Lizzie, is both attractive and charming. A great deal of credit therefore, can be given to her clever art which produces this exceedingly amusing character.

At the Colonial theatre next week Denman Thompson and company will head an unusually strong bill in a one-act adaptation from his famous play, "The Old Homestead," and which has been given the familiar name of "Joshua Whitcomb." The interpretation of this well-known character brought fame and fortune to Mr. Thompson. The act is quaintly staged and the star has the assistance of two capable artists. An act quite new to Broadway theatregoers is "La Petite Revue," an operatic offering. Reproductions of the life-like figures of famous operatic stars pass in panoramic view on a miniature stage while selections from the most noted operas are rendered by several well trained voices hidden from view in the background.

Plans are rapidly forming for the road tour which begins in Boston on April 25, and which will end in Chicago several weeks later. Early in the season it was feared it would be necessary to rebuild much of the scenery as it was fitted for The New theatre's large stage, but experiences in Brooklyn where performances have been given, prove that the original scenic effects can be employed outside of New York as well as in The New theatre. On the home stage, the acts are set on a turn table, whereas on the average stage it is necessary to reset each scene. The scenery, however, is so simple that it may be assembled with great ease, and long waits will be conspicuous by their absence, even when heavy Shakespearean plays are produced.

Collarless Gowns.

The semi-decollete frock of last year is well established this season. America has accepted it with universal approval as the correct compromise between the street and full evening wear. It may be slightly V or square in shape, but it must show a little below the line of the neck for beauty's sake. It can be three inches low for afternoon house affairs; for indoor wear in the evening the opening at the neck is much more pronounced. This is the gown to be worn with a picture hat. It is so attractive and so commonly accepted now that the high necked frock is entirely disappearing.

Rose Kerchief Folder.

Two pieces of rich silk, one of rose-colored grosgrain, the other a creamy satin for lining, will make a perfect handkerchief holder if they are each lined with scented wadding, their edges turned over it and the two slip-stitched together. Tack along the joint a rosecolored cord of heavy silk and knot it at each corner as you would fasten it on. It is, of course, oblong in shape and generous in size, and when folded over the kerchief it will form a perfect square large enough to cover handkerchiefs folded in quarters.

Lace Flowers.

Brussels lace or fine, cobwebby malines can be fashioned into flowers and spread in this form on the dark softness of a fur hat. Petals are made of the lace and the centres are supplied from the millinery department of any store. Occasionally the veins are traced in gold or silver thread to give a faint suggestion of brightness to the scheme. These lace flowers are always large in variety, and the blooms most favored are the cabbage rose, the dahlia and the chrysanthemum.

Too Much Club.

Bronx—Why has Jones become so opposed to clubs?

Harlem—He was introduced to his wife at a country club, proposed to her at a golf club, married to her at a church club. Now the alimony he pays her just meets her club dues."—Judge.

The Proper Way.

STRAIN ON P.S. PUPILS TOO MUCH SAY TEACHERS

That the demands on the children in the grammar grades of the public schools are a strain on them, being far in excess of their mental ability, was the consensus of opinion among fifty or more teachers, members of the Essex County Teachers' Guild, who met in the Free Public Library Wednesday afternoon for a "round table" discussion on the crowded curriculum of the schools. Miss Elizabeth M. Stringer, president of the guild, was in charge of the meeting, which was held behind closed doors. The teachers discussed the proceedings of the meeting freely at its close, but would not name any of those who participated in the discussion, because, it was said:

"Almost every one present had something to say."

Most of the teachers were of the opinion that an injustice is being done to the pupils and also to their parents as well, inasmuch as children are obliged to take subjects that most of them will have no use for when they enter business life.

One teacher, who has been in the schools for a long term of years, said:

"We don't want to appear as if we were antagonizing those who map out the course of studies, but the present system is all wrong. Considering the money and effort expended on the enriched curriculum, pupils should be far in advance of those trained along the old lines, whereas facts show that they are less reliant, more superficial and study simply for card results."

This teacher declared that the teachers do not desire to lessen their own labors.

"We merely want the time to perform work that will show the best results," she asserted.

"The way the children have to cram and work for examinations" one of the teachers is credited with saying, "has little lasting effect; there is no time for drill and practise, and the result is that the knowledge obtained by the children is merely superficial. The minds of children are no keener now than they were fifty years ago, and no one will dispute that more substantial results were obtained fifty years ago."

Obtain Pernicious Knowledge.

One sixth grade teacher was strong in her condemnation of teaching civics and physics to pupils in her grade.

"The children cannot comprehend them," she declared, "in the time assigned, and the result is they merely get a glossing over of the subjects. I have pupils who will repeat page after page of these studies, parrot fashion, but when questions are turned around, or they are asked for their own explanation or understanding of the subject, they are hopeless—they simply don't know." These two subjects, to the minds of most of the teachers, are entirely out of place in upper grammar grades.

"It seems unnecessary for children of thirteen years to be made acquainted with detailed facts regarding panel institutions of the State, as required in the study of civics," one teacher contended. "It is in total variance with the movement now on foot to suppress crime. We find children searching the newspapers for lurid pictures and reading proceedings in the various courts to obtain their information with the result that children obtain pernicious knowledge, of which, at their age, they should know nothing."

"The same conditions pertain in the High schools," declared another teacher. "Demands of the college crowd the High school, and in consequence work all along the line is crowded, making demands on children before they are ready to meet them. A child is capable of putting forth just so much effort and if that effort is expended in too many directions, the results are weakened."

"Business men are complaining that boys and girls who go into offices to work cannot spell, and know little of arithmetic," was the statement of another teacher. "We should have the time to give them more drill in these studies, and others that will benefit them when they must earn their own living, rather than give them drawing and subjects that they will have no use for. If the curriculum in the grammar grades was cut down to the studies that are really necessary to our boys and girls of today, the results would be better, and pupils would have a wider knowledge of studies that will be of vastly greater benefit to them."

FIREMEN PLAN CARNIVAL.

Basking Ridge Vamps to Hold Big Celebration.

SPORTS HERE AND THERE

GOLF.

The Western Golf Association will abolish the half stroke in its official handicap table, which means that hereafter the par figures will consist entirely of whole numbers. In other respects, however, the chances are that the Western body will agree with the Metropolitan Golf Association, which recently adopted a revised table of distances.

The Women's Metropolitan Golf Association has decided not to make any further effort at present toward bringing about a mixed foursome championship tournament for the district. The dates already assigned for the two main fixtures of the men's and women's associations will not make it feasible to hold the proposed mixed foursomes immediately after the women's tournament at Montclair, consequently an effort will be made to bring about the innovation later in the season.

James Donaldson, the golfer, who arrived the other day from Aberdeen, Scotland, to take the position as professional at the Glenview Golf Club, near Chicago, is credited with many brilliant performances on the other side. Not long since Donaldson played with Harry Vardon in a four-ball challenge match against Taylor and Massy for $100, and the latter pair did not win a hole.

Tom Chisholm, formerly with the Canoe Brook Country Club, and for a time last season with the Philadelphia Cricket Club, has been engaged as "pro" at the Lawrence Park Golf Club. This is a new organization in Bronxville, with a nine-hole course.

Two new soloists will be engaged for the First Baptist church choir, beginning May 1, Miss Louella C. Harris, soprano, and Miss Josie Bracker, contralto, retiring.

CITY NATIONAL BANK

ORANGE TO CELEBRATE CHARTER ANNIVERSARY

From the reports made Wednesday night, the celebration which will be held in Orange tomorrow to mark the fiftieth anniversary of the adoption of the first charter will be one of the greatest intermunicipal demonstrations ever held in New Jersey. Fifty years ago the territory now included in East Orange and West Orange was a part of Orange, and for this reason the officials and residents of these municipalities have been invited to participate. Since this invitation was extended both East Orange and West Orange have entered into the arrangements with so much enthusiasm that the Orange officials have had to be on the alert to make the demonstration by that city as representative as the demonstrations proposed by the sister communities.

Alderman Joseph A. Birkholz, chairman of the special committee appointed by the Common Council to assume charge of the arrangements for the celebration, reported last night that every detail had been attended to, and that the only feature now necessary to make the demonstration one of the most significant events in the history of the Oranges was fair weather.

Councilman Joseph Lee, from East Orange, and Councilman Carl Fentzlaff, from West Orange, also submitted enthusiastic reports about what was being done in their respective municipalities to contribute toward the success of the day.

The two principal features of the celebration will be a parade in the afternoon and a banquet in the evening. With the exception of a very few police officers and firemen, who must remain on duty in case of emergency, every officer and official of all three municipalities will participate in the parade. Military and fire apparatus will also be included, and not the least among the participants will be the former Mayors and other former officials of Orange. Reminiscences of half a century ago will be given by the speakers at the banquet in the evening.

David L. Pierson, secretary of the special committee of arrangements, who first suggested the plan to celebrate the fiftieth anniversary of the charter, will act as grand marshal of the parade, which will form at the historic Military Common in Orange. It is planned to start the procession promptly at 2:30 o'clock tomorrow afternoon.

Following the parade refreshments will be served the out-of-town soldiers and other participants in the Orange Armory. Another feature of the late afternoon will be a demonstration of the high pressure of the new water system under the direction of Fire Chief Matthews.

Mayor Arthur B. Seymour, of Orange, will act as toastmaster at the banquet in the evening, which will be held at the headquarters of the Union League Club. Addresses will be made by Mayor William Cardwell, representing East Orange; Mayor Walter A. Flint, representing West Orange; Judge Thomas A. Davis, President Camillus G. Kidder, of the Orange Board of Excise, Ira A. Kip, Jr., president of South Orange Village; George Spottiswoode, the only living official of the initial town government, and James E. Reynolds, of East Orange. The invocation will be asked by Rev. Lewis H. Lighthipe, and Rev. Matthias J. McDonald, rector of St. John's church, Orange, will pronounce the benediction. Mr. Lighthipe is the only clergyman in the Oranges who is a native of the city.

In accordance with a proclamation issued yesterday by Mayor Seymour, many business men have already started to decorate their buildings for the celebration tomorrow. One of the features of the Oranges' holiday attire will be an enormous flag suspended between the Orange National Bank and the Music Hall buildings. The East Orange City Hall has also been decorated.

was organized eighteen years ago and Court Watchung is the outgrowth of the pioneer court. The total membership in this city is now about 600 members.

Presiding over the meeting was F. T. Dickerson. Dr. Marc L. Clawson was chairman of the joint committee which was composed of members of the two local courts as follows: John M. Lewin, Charles S. Hayes, Frank E. Woodruff, A. M. Vanderbeck, George E. Volk, Edward J. McCue, John Casey, Joseph E. Keily, Henry Hansen and Dr. A. K. Brennan.

In addition to the speechmaking the audience was entertained by several selections by the Lotus Glee Club and monologues by a New York comedian.

HERE AND THERE.

Accepting a dare this morning Hugh Gormley, the horseman, rode his black Kentucky hunter into Elston M. French's real estate office, on North avenue, and immediately a crowd gathered to witness the unusual sight. Mr. Gormley was about to dismount from the horse when a friend dared him to enter the office mounted. Mr. Gormley accepted the challenge and while his friend held the door open man and horse entered. Mr. Gormley transacted his business with the crowd looking on. Meantime the rumor had spread that a horse had runaway and had fallen dead in Mr. French's office. The horse was the least nervous of the witnesses of the transaction.

George Spottiswoode, who will be one of the central figures in the fiftieth anniversary of the granting of the charter at Orange, is well-known in this city, where thirty-five years ago he was a partner with the late Wallace Vail in the contracting business. The firm purchased what was known as the "mine lot" in the Notch, which was a colonial grant, established a quarry and stone crushers there and macadamized Somerset street for the first time. The firm also built heavy trucks intending to run the train with a steam traction engine; but this did not prove to be a success and was abandoned. Mr. Spottiswoode enjoys good health, and, in addition to directing the manifold details of his large business enterprise, he serves the city of Orange as a member of the Sinking Fund Commission. Fifty years ago he was collector of taxes for the old Third ward of Orange. Mr. Spottiswoode will give a talk tomorrow night at the dinner to close the celebration of the Union League Club.

STEWED CUTLETS.

To stew cutlets have ready a well-buttered pan lined with sliced vegetables, place in this a slice of ham, a bunch of herbs, and seasoning to taste; lay in the cutlets, cover down the pan, and allow the contents to fry for a minute or two till the vegetables, etc., begin to color slightly; then pour in a little stock, lay a buttered paper over it all and cover the pan.

Bring the stock to a boil, then draw the pan to one side of the stove and allow the whole to simmergently but steadily for an hour or so, after which lift the cutlets out and serve with their own gravy strained and freed from fat, with any vegetable garnish you please.

For the haricot, take two pounds of the neck, trim off some of the fat and divide it into cutlets. Melt two ounces of butter or dripping in a casserole, lay in the cutlets and fry them in this till nicely colored; sprinkle over them one ounce of flour, a little salt and pepper; stir over the fire for a few minutes, then add one pint of stock or water, an onion stuck with cloves, and a bunch of herbs; then cover down the pan and allow its contents to simmer gently for a few minutes, when you skim off all the fat, etc. Have ready a turnip, two carrots, and if liked six small potatoes all peeled and quartered, fry them with a little butter and a pinch of sugar till nicely colored, then add them to the stew; let it all simmer gently for an hour, lift out the bunch of herbs and serve.

NO BAUBLES FOR OLD.

Although the middle-aged gentlewoman insists upon having as many dainty belongings and trinkets as the younger woman finds necessary, however, must express quiet good taste. Simplicity of style and high character of workmanship and material should speak in every detail of her appointments, from the pin that fastens her veil to her smart seal and gunmetal trimmed traveling bag.

The woman of years does not wear imitation jewelry. Such baubles are only for the pretty young girl who takes them up as the momentary fad or matches her millinery with a particularly colored stone. The dowager if she does not possess the real gem, wears in its place a fine cameo, a bit of jade or coral delicately set, or a handwrought brooch of gold or silver in some special design.

Hair ornaments for the elder women styles. Shell pins and combs may be had in a soft gray shade that harmonizes with silvery or white hair. Jet ornaments are also very effective in white hair, and some of the jet combs in butterfly wing and mercury wing patterns are extremely beautiful.

Jet jewelry was never more fashionable, and while these somber ornaments are really most becoming to the young woman with dazzling skin and golden hair, they have a dignity and richness that make them well suited to the dowager.

They Were "Over."

He was a regular patron of the restauran . Perhaps that is why he felt justified in making clever remarks to the waitresses, which they were puzzled to know how to answer. One day however, the smallest and timidest girl happened to be serving this irritating customer, and it fell to her to answer him in kind:

"I'll have some steak," he said coming in late for dinner, "and some squash, and some—Got some baked potatoes, fine, brown baked potatoes?"

"Baked potatoes are all over," said the girl.

He leaned back in his chair and gazed at her quizzically.

"Baked potatoes all over, are they?" he replied. "All over what?"

"With," she replied, simply.—Youth's Companion.

What He Wanted.

"Here," he called to the clerk; "I've only got a minute. I want to get a porn copper."

"A what?" asked the clerk.

"A porp conner."

"Ha, ha!" laughed the clerk. "I guess you mean a con porper, don't you?"

"No, I dont. I mean a pon corper you chucklehead. But I can't get it now because my train is due."

"Silly ass," murmured the clerk, after he had gone; "couldn't say pop corner."—Metropolitan Magazine.

Gentlemen's clothes cleaned by a Cleanery with the ability and equipments to produce first-class work, will stay clean longer, as when done by an ordinary suit presser who only brushes the surface dust off and removes the most prominent spots from the surface.

With our process the garments are thoroughly cleaned and disinfected, the linings are cleaned and spots that are removed will stay removed and do not appear again the first time the garments are exposed to the dust and grim of the street.

In the beginning it may cost a little more, but will pay at the end, as the clothes don't have to be at the cleaners every two weeks.

OSTEOPATHS WIN A POINT; ONE BILL GOES THROUGH

Following the usual long debate which has become an annual feature, the Ramsay bill, House 156, as amended, to give the osteopaths of New Jersey one member on the State Medical Board, passed the Assembly yesterday afternoon just prior to adjournment for the week. The amendments were told of in the Press yesterday and were in the nature of concessions to the osteopaths, in return for which, it is understood, the Goldingay bill House 288, providing for a State Board of Osteopathic Examiners, will be allowed to die in committee.

Mr. Ramsay of Middlesex, the introducer of No. 156, spoke for the bill, while the opposition forces were led by Mr. Goldingay, of Essex. The vote was 44 to 10. Other bills to pass yesterday afternoon were:

House 226, Mr. Goldingay, amends the present mechanics' lien law by requiring retainers to specify the amount due as nearly therein as possible.

House 270, Mr. McCran, the Paterson Board of Works act.

House 96, Mr. Tumulty, authorizes cities to acquire lands for public parks and issued bonds to pay for the same.

Senate 122, Mr. Leavitt, amends the State prison act by providing that insane prisoners confined in the State prison may be committed to the institution in the county in which such insane prisoners had a legal settlement, or to a State institution if the county in which they did reside has none.

Senate 146 Mr. Wakelee, an act to make the proceedings of the department of the Grand Army of the Republic a part of the military archives of the State and appropriates the sum of $500, or so much thereof as may be necessary for that purpose.

Senate 61, Mr. Lewis, amends section 54 of the general corporation act (revision of 1896) by providing that upon the dissolution in any manner of any corporation the directors shall remain as trustees thereof, with full power to settle its affairs, meet and act under the by-laws of the corporation and determine the conditions of the sale of the property and perform all acts that may be necessary to carry out the provisions of this act relative to the winding up of the affairs of such corporation and to the distribution of its assets.

BEEF CORPORATIONS WILL PLEAD TODAY.

Through counsel the incorporations known as the Beef Trust will plead today to the indictments found against them for alleged illegal attempts to keep up the cost of meats.

Former Senator Edwards has a case in Chancery requiring his attention and will not be included among the legal array.

Detective Frank Bennett, of Prosecutor Garven's office, who was sent to Chicago to serve notices of indictment upon officials of the packing companies indicted by the Hudson County Grand Jury, has returned and reported at the office yesterday that he had served personal notices on nearly all of the indicted men. J. Ogden Armour, he said, had accepted the notices both for himself and his son, A. Watson Armour. George J. Edwards was in the East, but the detective says he received satisfactory assurances that he would not plead ignorance of the indictment found against him or surprise at any extradition proceedings that might be taken.

Bennett said that the cordiality with which he was received by the indicted officers was remarkable. All seemed to know just when he was coming, and many had dinners or luncheons ready for him He said he had to plead the urgency of his business and shortness of his time to avoid accepting many of the invitations.

"RAT" IN GIRL'S HAIR ACTED AS A CUSHION.

While exercising on some rings in the rooms of the Warren County Athletic Club Wednesday night, Miss Lila Rapp fell to the floor. She landed on her head and had it not been for a "rat" she was wearing in her hair it is the opinion of the attending physician that her injuries would have been severe. As it is Miss Rapp has a strained back. She was unconscious for about two hours, but she is expected to be out again in a few days.

The young woman, who is about sixteen years old, is the daughter of Howard Rapp, and last night she went to the hall to rehearse in the chorus for the coming entertainment for the benefit of the Washington Baseball Club. During the evening she exercised on the rings. She was swinging in the air when she lost her hold and fell heavily to the floor. When picked up she was unconscious. Dr. T. S. Dedrick examined the young woman and ordered her removal to her home, where she was put to bed.

P. H. S. NOTES.

The interscholastic meet is off. Westfield, North Plainfield High School and Leal's have withdrawn. This is the first year this has ever happened and Plainfield High School is very disappointed.

The North Plainfield High School second team beat the Plainfield High School freshmen yesterday afternoon in a one-sided game at Debele hall. The score was 41 to 12.

The senior class had readings of the play yesterday afternoon in the auditorium. The people who are trying read the various parts.

A Doughnut Hint.

Doughnuts are much improved if they are coated with a layer of sugar as soon as they are taken from the stove. The best way to powder them is to put a small amount of confectioner's sugar in a paper bag and put several doughnuts in the bag at a time and then shake the bag, holding the top of the bag closed. This will coat them with sugar quickly and more evenly the any other way.

Mrs. D. E. Davis Very Ill.

Mrs. Daniel E. Davis of Union street, who suffered a stroke of apoplexy Wednesday night, is still in an unconscious condition and little hope is entertained for her recovery. She was taken suddenly ill during the night. In consequence, her husband, Mr. Davis, who is employed at the Plainfield Trust Company, is not at his place of business today.

Just a Theory.

Professor—Suppose an irresistible force encountered an immovable body, what would be the result?

Student—I don't know exactly, but I imagine it would be something like the meeting of two rival arctic explorers.—Chicago Daily News.

Jersey City Nest No. 74, Order of Owls, has withdrawn from the national organization and its members will affiliate hereafter with the Foresters of America. The reason given is that general dissatisfaction with the order followed the circulation of a pamphlet containing an attack on the supreme lodge.

Camden Division No. 170, Order of Railway Conductors, celebrated its twenty-fifth anniversary Wednesday night in Eagles hall, Camden, with nearly the full membership of 178 in attendance.

Burns caused by the explosion of gunpowder in his face last Fourth of July, physicians believe, is the direct cause of the death of F. Earl Matlack, twenty-year-old son of Harry Metcalf, of Beverly. It is believed that the young man inhaled so much of the flame that his lungs were affected. Since his return from the hospital several months ago he had been helpless. With the oldest son dead in the house, the youngest daughter, Ella, four years old, died Tuesday night. The exact cause of the child's death is puzzling to the physicians. Since birth she had been sightless and crippled.

Tearing the top o a fire hydrant, thereby causing water to spurt fifty feet in the air, to the inconvenience of pedestrians, a runaway team belonging to the Campbell Preserving Company, in Camden, also upset an iron lamp-post, smashed a culvert and wrecked an awning at Second and Arch streets, Camden, Wednesday. To avoid being crushed in the collision with the awning, John P. Plummer, twenty-five years old, the driver, jumped to the wagon pole with reins in hand, and, by standing between the horses, stopped the runaway before any other damage was done. Many excited persons, who expected to see him killed, applauded the driver for his act.

Many attended the wedding of Miss Effie Fisher and James G. Siegel Wednesday in St. Paul's Methodist Episcopal church in Third street, Jersey City. The bride is the daughter of Mrs. J. Fisher, of 245 Third street. The ceremony was performed by Rev. William Trumbower, the pastor.

Anxious to locate her husband, who has been missing since February 21, Mrs. Helen Gartenberg, of Jersey City, sought the aid of the Camden police Wednesday, declaring that she had rented a room in Camden, where she expected to remain until she had definite information concerning his whereabouts. The missing man is a leather worker. A letter the wife received about ten days ago was postmarked Camden, where he had gone in search of employment.

FOR MISSES AND CHILDREN.

Misses, like their mothers, are anxious to keep in touch with the styles and even the school dresses often have to be made with thorough modern frills. The keynote of a dress for a miss must be that it have a portion of the style for the older women, yet retain youthful simplicity. With the younger set of young ladies the two-piece garments with the mannish effect are very popular this fall and winter.

The dresses have very little, if any, trimming, and rely mainly on the grace of the contour for the style and attractiveness. They are worn in cheviots, serges and fancy worsteds. In the more fashionable models the waist line is elongated to a certain extent, the effect being in both the skirts and coats. The Buster Brown belt is used in many of the models and gives a very pretty effect.

The coats are quite long and range from 40 to 50 inches. The deep-yoke effect is quite prominent in the skirts and some have the pleated flounce, while others have the side pleats and panel fronts. The Peter Thompson suits are worn a great deal for school, and yoked skirts go with these. For children's headwear this winter the pretty bonnets have been much used. They are in felt, beaver, velvet, crushed plush, bengaline and bearskin. They are most effective when they harmonize with the coat worn.

FUR TURBANS POPULAR.

Little by little a change has certainly come in the shape of the most modish headgear, and the palm of victory is deserved by the cap of a closely fitting turban, the brim of which hugs the crown. A round hat of this description was made of seal brown panne, with a brim faced with sealskin. Between the brim and the crown a rouleau of black fox was introduced and where the brim was divided the mask of the animal showed in the space that was left.

The coat worn with a hat of this type should be one of those loosely fitting, comfortable models so highly appreciated by the pedestrian. Made of rough brown cloth, it should be trimmed upon the lower edge with a deep flounce of fur, the mere mention of which reminds me to say, in pursuance of the subject already introduced that though the fascinations of the flounce have been for a long time overlooked, I have reason to believe that the neglected vogue will soon be restored to favor, and have to chronicle its appearance also upon the frocks made for girls to wear in the ballrooms of the winter.

The Exception.

"That fellow drawls his 'a's' and drops his 'h's' continually. He has the greatest respect for everything English."

"Yes," replied Miss Cayenne; "everything except the English language."—Washington Evening Star.

NEEDLEWORK NOTES.

An attractive bureau set is made of lawn, embroidered with a design of bachelor's buttons, which can be either tinted or outlined or embroidered with several shades of blue, filling the centre of each flower with French knots.

The sprays and leaves are embroidered or tinted and outlined with shades of green. The flower can be arranged in clusters, placed at intervals on the front of the bureau scarf, and the pin cushion with a cluster of flowers in the centre.

The ruffles on both bureau scarf and cushion can be joined with beading run with light blue ribbon, finished on the edge of ruffle with lace or feather stitching. A lining of light blue is to be used for scarf and cushion.

Pongee buttons to be used on an evening coat can be made without much difficulty and at a much lower cost than they can be bought.

A line of heavy black silk is worked on the button in a circle, beginning in the centre and ending on the outside edge. This is outlined on both sides with fine gold thread, and the back-ground filled in with silk dots in satin stitch, or with French knots worked in the shade of silk used for lining the coat.

When finished the silk can be mounted over the button moulds which are made for the purpose.

Cable stitch is made in almost the same way as chain stitch except that the needle is put through at the side, instead of the centre, and about half way back of the preceding stitch.

The effect is like a cable and is a good stitch to use when one wishes to make an uneven edge

In chain stitch the thread is thrown over the needle and forms the loop in a straight line, when in cable stitch the thread forms the loop from the side, giving it the corded effect, which is very attractive

SIMPLE TAPESTRY WORK.

For the novice who has not yet indulged in the pretty French tapestry-covered fancy work there offers a most simple example, tempting to the inexperience and with not pitfalls.

The desk file, which is also a paperweight cannot prove other than perfect when directions are followed.

Get the plain metal file having a round disk as its heavy base. The disk curves upward like a slice from a globe. Over the file slip a round piece of tapestry. Draw it down round the weight to the point of perfect smoothness and gather it in underneath. Cut off all unnecessary material and flatten the gathers, after moistening them, with a hot iron. Paste a piece of plain felt over these raw edges, and when this preliminary work is finished decorate the little thing with a band of narrow gold-colored galloon, glued on around its largest edge and with a smaller piece at the base of the file. This last piece will first be measured, then draw into a circle, slipped over the file and pasted into place.

In all tapestry work pasting is an art and construction a science to be learned before the more intricate pieces may be accomplished with any degree of perfection. Many carelessly made pieces are not in the least worthy of the time put upon them, therefore it were well for beginners to select first such cardboard forms and shapes as demand little work and present no obstacles.

HINTS FOR KITCHEN.

If you wish mustard to be pungent, whether it is to be used medicinally or at the table, mix it with cold water. The pungency of mustard is due to a volatile oil. This does not exist in dry mustard, but is formed when the dry mustard has been wet with water. Hot water hinders the formation of the oil, and boiling water almost prevents its being made at all.

Take care how you use bitter almonds. They are dangerous things. When wet with water they give rise to prussic acid, one of the deadliest poison known. Fortunately, it is volatile, or fatal accidents would happen more frequently.

Never try to cleanse with soap vessels in which vinegar has stood. Do not apply soap to any article soiled with other acids. The acid will decompose the soap and make things worse. Use washing soda. Bicarbonate of soda should be in every kitchen. If applied on the instant to a burn or scald it will work almost miraculously.

SCENT LOCKETS.

Very long chains which are worn by many women require some bauble or locket to complete their line, which generally reaches below the waist.

A thoughtful jeweler, always on the alert, has harked back to the early Victorian woman who was addicted to swooning, and there is a modern adaptation of the vinaigrette used at that time.

This is in the form of a locket with a small centre of openwork gold, silverware or enamel, and a rim of jewels is used to give brilliancy to this novelty.

Concentrated perfume is concealed in the centre of the locket, behind the grille, and with each swaying of the chain a delightful, faint perfume emanates from the unsuspected holder of scent.

WOODEN STATUES FULL OF PINS

Breton Maidens who desire to get married go to Sena, near Vannes, and stick pins in the foot of the wooden statue of a saint called St. Uferier, who marries off his devotees within the year. The pin must be well pushed, for if it fall out the wedding will fall through; and it must be a strong, straight pin, for if it bend the future husband may be a hunchback or a cripple.

On the Channel, at Ploumanch, on a rock accessible at low tide, there is a little shrine supported by four Roman columns and dedicated to St. Quirec who landed there from England in the sixth century. His wooden image is stuck full of pins.

So is a statue of St. Lawrence, near Quintin. Here the pin should stick at the first push, for each failure postpones the marriage for a year.

There is an old tale told of an idot who broke the statue of St. Mirli on the eve of his fete. In order to hide his crime his mother made him take the saint's place. Now, upon the occasion of his feast there was a great gathering of pious pilgrims, who stuck pins in St. Mirli's knee for all sorts of wants. The first few pins of the day happened to be those of some children and did not much hurt the saint's flesh. A young girl followed and drew blood. A stout old countrywoman then drove a corking pin so far into the poor idiot's leg that he jumped, howling, over the devout and prostrate bodies, with the result that St. Mirli is believed to have flown up to heaven.

When old, wormeaten, decaying statues of the past are replaced by stone figures, which are of course rebellious to pins, the pins are still brought by believers, but they merely place them round the foot of the effigy.

A GOOD LISTENER.

Be a good listener. If you can't talk, listen. Don't chatter. Guests have been "bidden forth" to dine for their listening propensities alone. The cautious hostess is a veritable Chas. Lamb in her appreciation of ears. They are valuable appendages cultivated by those who only jabber when they talk.

We can't all talk; to some of us it is almost physically impossible to get out a sensible word in company. We may be entertaining enough to ourselves, but let something definite in the way of conversation be expected of us in an assemblage and we throw up our hands.

It's only a form of stage fright, this. We could perfectly well enter into the argument that's going round the festive board if something would only let us, but fear, the monster, holds us in his grip.

Enforced silence draws one inward and the tongue cleaves to the roof of the mouth; the very lips are sealed. All the air about one seems a pained witness to one's discomfort. Everything has gotten alive and taken on a critical attitude, but it is ominously silent while it thinks of you—only you—and not another living, breathing soul. But if you keep on letting the quiet thicken around you, it's going to get very dense indeed.

Break the spell always, but better still, prevent it from settling over you. Learn the interested listener part and you won't be in the centre of the stage enough to fluster you.

News for Men

In all the maze of hats and wraps for women, men and boys have not been forgotten in this week's opening display—dear no; we planned to please them as thoroughly and thoughtfully as we did for the women folks, and a good many of our men friends have appreciated it, as was indicated by the groups in front of our windows devoted to men, and the visitors and buyers in the Clothing Store on the Second Floor.

Our clothing for men and boys comes from shops of national renown. We could afford to handle only the best, so we present such makes as Sampeck for young men and boys, and the celebrated Hackett Carhart product and other makes equally worthy, tho perhaps not quite so noted.

We have struck a new note of popularity in Suits for young men, high school and college boys, and others who like to dress smartly. Our buying facilities enable us to offer you suits that would sell in the average store at $12.50 to $25, at such popular prices as $10, $15 and $20.

We have arrangements with the factory by which we get the factory reject—those shoes that will not pass the muster of the very critical inspectors—the slightest variation in sich or, perhaps, a misplaced eyelet, or a crooked tongue will give the inspector sufficient reason for taking the shoes out of the regular Douglas lines. In no instance are the hurts serious enough to effect the wear, and only the most critical could find anything lacking in appearance of the shoe. New Suits and Dresses

Our showing of practical suits and dresses this week was more notable for one thing than any other, that was the fact that the dresses on view were not extravagant in style nor freakish but all sensible, wearable apparel such as appeals to women of refined taste.

It is a satisfaction to us to know that we have again measured up to the expectations of our patrons, and it will be a satisfaction to you o choose from such a stock as this, feeling that the styles are within conservative lines and therefore not likely to be affected by immediate changes, as is the case with more extreme things.

Re-printed from The Weekly Constitutionalist

May 5, 1870.

A lady advertises for sale one baboon, three tabby cats and a parrot. She states that being now married she has no further use for them, for the reason that their amiable qualities are all combined in her husband.

It is proposed to hold a grand "Horse Fair" at Trenton, N. J., on the 24th, 25th, 26th and 27th of May, at which there will be racing for purses aggregating $8,000, for all grades of horses. The fair will be held on the grounds and under the management of the Central Agricultural Society. The trotting to be under the rules of the National Association.

Store Robbed— The dry goods store of John T. Cox, in Somerville, was entered by burglars on Monday night last, and silk goods to the amount of $700 or $800 taken. Entrance was effected by cutting out a pane of glass in the window, and removing the bar from a back door of the grocery department. No clue to the robbers has yet been found out.

Andrew Mcregor, sentenced for ten years from Essex county, three of which he had served, escaped from State Prison the other day. He was at work in the new wing, and opened the iron door communicating with the street with a piece of wire.

While the election for chief engineer and assistants was in progress on Monday evening last, a false alarm of fire was given by some malicious person, which caused a general turn-out of all the apparatus.

Board Wanted—Board for gentleman and wife in a pleasant location, about five minutes walk from the depot. Pricate family preferred. One large or two small rooms. Address "Jersey," Box 543, Plainfield P. O.

Mr. John Taylor Johnston has been re-elected president of the N. J. Central R. R. Company, and Mr. Samuel Knox secertary and treasurer.

PLAYING SAFE.

The year is clean, devoid of blame;
The year is pure.
I hastily advance this claim
As being sure.

The year is pure; the year is young
And clean, I wish.
No peet with a serpent's tongue
Can challenge this.

Why do I all these things avow?
Because I know
The same a fleeting week from now
May not be so.
—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

The Kaiser's Cloak.

A well known dictator of the fasaions has crossed the border and has gone to Germany for one of his successes. It is a cloak modeled upon the well known military cloak worn by the Kaiser. Comfortable and practical is this new style with a large cape that falls over the sleeves to the waist line. A huge fur collar and revers complete the luxury of the whole. When to these points a soft military cloth of silvery gray is added there is every reason to suppose that the model will meet with approval.

Choosing a Wife

As much of beauty as preserves affection;
Of modest diffidence as claims protection;
A docile mind subservient to correction;
A temper led by reason and reflection,
And every passion kept in due subjection;
Just faults enough to keep her from perfection—
Find this, my friend, and then make your selection.

A Long Job.

"Where have you been for so long?" asked the head man of the menagerie.

"But does it take half an hour for an animal to clear its throat?"

"Yes, sir; it was the giraffe, sir."
—Yonkers Statesman.

Prohibition Pathway.

When automobiles choke the ways
And aeroplanists cloud the blue,
Pray tell us, in those coming days,
What will the water wagon do?
With earth and sky both set apart
For buzzing wings and gasoline,
The rider on the water cart
Still has the active submarine.
—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

The Baltimore Brand.

Let the good resolution stick to its last.—Baltimore American.

Go to! Is the good resolution a dilatory and disappointing shoemaker that it should do this thing?

The Modern Sort.

"Yes, my poor brother was killed by savages."

"Indeed. In South Africa?"

"No — college." — Boston Transcript.

LOCAL BALL SEASON TO OPEN ON APRIL 30

Brethren of the local baseball fraternity here's a date to register in your diaries. Saturday afternoon, April 30, is the date set by Manager Ernest Dorflinger for this season's opening diamond battle. Scores of managers are trying to induce Mr. Dorflinger to give them the date, but the local manager has not yet made a selection. Mr. Dorflinger announced today that he will not complete his schedule until the league agitation is settled.

Among the clubs that are desirous of securing the local opening is the famous O. N. T.'s of Newark. This club has a State-wide reputation, which it has enjoyed for a score of years, and if the Newarkers can be obtained for that date the game should prove a big attraction for the fans in this vicinity.

Jack Martin will be one of the guests at the dinner in New York tomorrow night, which is to be tendered by the New Brunswick club to its players.

There is some talk going the rounds about the formation of an Elks Baseball League. If it is organized the local antlers will enter a team.

George Ortleib, the elongated Westfield boy, who twirled several games for Plainfield last year, will pitch for the Elizabeth A. C. this season.

Swatsmith Extraordinary "Brit" Martin declares he will be heard from with the willow as usual after the bell rings.

Dunellen has a reputation of being a dead burg, but it can boast of no graveyards.

The Danish Sociable Athletic Club baseball team of Perth Amboy would like to arrange games for the coming season with first-class amateur teams. Games to be on opponents' grounds, Sundays. Address C. M. Wagner, secretary, 39 Jefferson street, Perth Amboy, N. J.

Turns Light Contract Down.

Cranford, March 11.—A contract presented to the Township Committee by the Public Service Wednesday for lighting the streets of Cranford for five years was turned down because the price asked for the Tungstun incandescent light was considered excessive. The contract presented called for the furnishing of current for the arc light at $9 a year and for the incandescent at $18 per annum.

LOCAL ELKS SCORE OVER RAHWEGIANS

Plainfield Elks triumphed over Rahway in a league contest on Campbell's alleys last night, by taking two out of three games from the visitors.

The Rahwegians made their biggest splurge in the initial combat, when they snowed the locals under by the score of 938 to 842. In this setback, Eddie Laing, shone for the locals with a mark of 203. Crane and Slater carried off the honors for Rahway with respective scores of 218 and 206.

The situation was reversed in the second skirmish when Plainfield was victorious by a score of 944 to 820, Johnny Campbell being the bell-cow in the local procession with a score of 235, which was the classiest mark in the series.

The final game afforded some real excitement. Neither team excuted any top notch pinning but the contest was in doubt until the finish, the locals finally winning out by the score of 861 to 830, a margin of 31 pins.

Johnny Campbell had one of his good nights. Johnny's scores of 235, 201 and 186 represented an average of 207. The scores:

Francis—Allan.

Westfield, March 11.—Mrs. Mary Lawton Allan, of Westfield, became the bride of Harold Francis, also of this town at 2:30 o'clock Wednesday afternoon. The wedding took place in St. Paul's Episcopal church, the Rev. Sydney Cross, the rector, officiating. Only relatives of the bride and bridegroom were present. The wedding march was played by Mrs. Horace Kent, organist of Trinity church, Bayonne. After a short wedding tour, Mr. and Mrs. Francis will reside at 135 Park street.

Charles Klein made fame and fortune by writing "The Lion and the Mouse." Henry B. Harris, who produced it, also made a fortune. Mr. Klein is the author of "The Third Degree," which Henry B. Harris will present at the Plainfield Theatre on Friday evening, March 18. Where "The Lion and the Mouse" dealt with characters high in politics and speculative commerce, in "The Third Degree" the story is laid in New York and deals with men and women of the smart set and the methods of the police in wringing confessions of guilt through the sweating process of the "third degree." The play, while considerably younger, has already equalled the wonderful record of "The Lion and the Mouse," and abounds in fascinating climaxes, typically "Kleinesque" and of unusual virility.

MINISTERS MAY ASSAIL LEGISLATION.

A vigorous attack is likely to be made upon Assembly bill No. 194, fathered by Assemblyman D. W. White, of Camden, in the seventy-fourth annual conference of the Methodist Episcopal church of South Jersey, which opened yesterday with Bishop John Spellmeyer, of St. Louis, presiding. This bill is designed, so it is declared, to take from the courts the power to order bills paid incurred by the prosecutors in enforcing laws. The law gives the power to pass upon bills solely to the Freeholders.

Prosecutor Goldenberg, who employed detectives to aid in closing gambling places in Atlantic City, admits that he would not have been able to get the services of the detectives if he had to depend upon the action of the Freeholders, and declares the bill to be "vicious legislation."

More than four hundred ministers are in attendance at the conference. Tomorrow it is expected that declarations of war on Sunday baseball bills and the proposed changes in the excise laws will be made.

BOARD IS DEADLOCK.

Naming Janitor Ties Up Elizabeth School Trustees.

Elizabeth, March 11.—The Board of Education was again deadlocked Wednesday over the appointment of a janitor to School No. 8, to fill a vacancy caused by death. When the board proceeded to ballot on the appointment last month there were scores of candidates, and after a futile effort to reach a settlement the board adjourned.

Four ballots were taken last night without any decision being reached. The candidates voted for are Frank Dryer, Jr., George Scoles and Patrick J. Savage. When it was seen that no decision could be reached the board adjourned.

He assured them that he would be glad to address the Democrats of Union county at the dinner.

DOG'S BARK SAVES WOMAN.

Boys Attracted by Animal Rescue Miss Sharron from Blair Lake.

Two boys who attend Blair Hall Academy and who declined to give their names, saved Miss Stella Sharron, of Blairstown, from drowning in Blair Lake Tuesday night. The boys were attracted by the barking of a dog.

Miss Sharron, with her pet dog, was crossing Blair Lake when the ice gave way. As Miss Sharron sank the dog barked and continued to do so until help arrived. After seeing that Miss Sharron was cared for by friends the boys hurried away.

Fat Defeating Extraordinary

SLENDER Margaret Knolly, now, if you please. The fascinating leading lady of the Bijou, now more fascinating than ever, astonished all her friends on Broadway the other day by presenting to their admiring gaze a svelt and willowy form in place of the plump, not to say fat, outlines with which she gaily sailed away to new triumphs and foreign shores last January. After a good deal of diplomatic cross-examination from interested fat acquaintances the secret was cautiously whispered to a few dear friends, with the result that everybody knows it now. It was not exercise, nor fasting, nor sea air, nor worry about her new venture that had brought about this wonderful willowy change in the charming Margaret; no, none of these; nothing but a simple mixture which all good druggists are familiar with and can supply at small cost, to-wit: One-half ounce Marmola, one-half ounce Fluid Extract Cascara Aromatic, and three and one-half ounces Pepermint water. "Grown folks need a teaspoonful after meals and at bedtime," explained the now slender Margaret. "It is simply wonderful. It takes off the fat quickly, as much as a pound a day, and keeps it off. You can eat what you like, too. In that respect it is unlike anything of the kind I ever heard of, and besides it has another splendid feature—it is entirely harmless, and will not cause wrinkles. I think it is about as essential a toilet article for the woman who is fat and wants to get thinner as face powder. In order to get the best results, however, you should buy the Marmola in the original package and mix it with the other two ingredients after you get home."

Give Up Your Barren Scepter as Master of the House.

JOHN HAY'S FIRST SPEECH.

A Witty Response to the Toast "Our Countrywomen" at a Banquet in Paris When He Was Secretary of Legation in the French Capital.

By official proclamation President Johnson set apart the first Thursday of December, 1865, as a day of national thanksgiving. The American residents and visitors in Paris deemed it an occasion to be celebrated with more than usual ceremony. The result was that at 8 o'clock on the evening of the 7th of December some 253 of our countrymen sat down to a dinner in the spacious dining room of the Grand hotel in Paris, then regarded by travelers as the most elegant public dining hall in Europe.

After a succession of speeches the chairman closed the entertainment with a toast to "Our Countrywomen" and asked Colonel John Hay, then secretary of legation in Paris, to respond to it. As this was probably the first public speech Mr. Hay had ever made and though nothing he then said could possibly add any luster to his subsequent career, it may justly be said that it was more successful than the first public effort in oratory either of Sheridan or of Beaconsfield. He replied in part as follows:

"My Countrymen (and I would say my countrywomen but that the former word embraces the latter whenever opportunity offers)—I cannot understand why I should have been called upon to respond to this toast of all others, having nothing but theoretical ideas upon the subject to be treated—one, in fact, I must be presumed never to have handled. [Laughter and applause.]

"I have been called up, too, by a committee of married men. I can think of no claim I have to be considered an authority in these matters except what might arise from the fact of my having resided in early life in the same neighborhood with Brigham Young, who has since gained some reputation as a thorough and practical ladies' man. [Great laughter.] I am not conscious, however, of having imbibed any such wisdom at the feet of this matrimonial Gamaliel as should justly entitle me to be heard among the elders.

"So I am inevitably forced to the conclusion that these husbands cannot trust each other's discretion. The secrets of the prison house are too important to be trusted to one of the prisoners. So ignorance of the matter in hand has come to be held an absolute prerequisite when any one is to be sacrificed to the exigencies of this toast.

"I really do not see why this should be so. It is useless for husbands to attempt to keep this thin veneering of a semblance of authority. The symbols of government they still retain deceive nobody. They may comfort themfort themselves with the assurance of some vague, invisible supremacy, like that of the spiritual mikado or the grand llama, but the true tycoon is the wife. A witty and profound observer the other day said, 'Every husband doubtless knows he is master in his own house, but he also knows his neighbor's wife is master in hers.' [Laughter and cheers.]

"Why should not you, husbands of America, admit this great truth and give up the barren scepter? Things would go much easier if you ceased the struggle to keep up appearances. The ladies will not be hard on you. They will recognize the fact that, after all, you are their fellow creatures, and you can be very useful to them in many little ways. They will doubtless allow you to pay their bills, take care of their children and carry their votes to the ballot box just as you do now.

"You had better come down gracefully, and, above all, let no feeling of discovered inferiority betray you into evil speaking of the domestic powers. There have been recent instances of distinguished gentlemen, no doubt instigated by rebellious husbands, who have recklessly accused these guardian angels of your fireside of being extravagant and frivolous. These things are never uttered with impunity. I would not insure the life of one who libels the ladies for less than cent per cent.

"Discite justitium moniti et non temnere Divas, which, as you may not understand the backwoods pronunciation of the classic warning, I will translate with a freedom befitting the day we celebrate:

"Now, all you happy husbands,
Beware the rebel's fate!
Live in obedience all your lives,
Give up your latchkeys to your wives
And never stay out late."

[Laughter and cheers.]—From John Bigelow's "Retrospections of an Active Life" in Metropolitan Magazine.

The Alternative.

Constituent—Say, Bill, the salary that goes with my job isn't half enough to live on. Can't you use your influence to have it raised a little? Alderman—I'm afraid not, Jake. But I'll do better than that. I'll use my influence to have a cheaper man appointed to the place.—Chicago Tribune.

A Quick Thinker.

Dittersdorf—Here come two evil looking rascals. I shouldn't wonder if we were held up. Heinz—I'm afraid so. By the bye, here's that dollar you lent me this morning.—Meggendorfer Blatter.

A Greenroom Quarrel In Which Marie Roze Triumphed.

Minnie Hauck and Marie Roze had quarreled over "Carmen." One night "The Marriage of Figaro" was announced, with Roze as Susanna and Hauck as Cherubino.

"At 3 o'clock that afternoon," writes Mr. Upton, "Hauck went into the theater, and pre-empted the prima donna's room by depositing her things therein. An hour later Roze's maid reached the theater and proceeded to the same room, only to find it filled with the hated rival's traps. Roze notified the colonel (Henry Mapleson). He was promptly on the scene and began moving Hauck's belongings to the opposite room and instructing his wife to be at the theater precisely at 6.

"At half past 5, however, Hauck sent the chevalier (her husband) to the theater to see that everything was right. The chevalier found that everything was not right and ordered Roze's belongings to be removed, replaced his wife's and had everything, including the door, stoutly locked.

"At 6 Roze arrived, prepared to 'hold the fort,' but as she couldn't get into the fort to hold it she sent for the colonel, who sent for a locksmith, who opened the door. Hauck's things were unceremoniously bundled out. At half past 6 Hauck came to the room to dress, and, much to her surprise and to the chevalier's chagrin, Roze was in there calmly dressing. What passed between them probably no one will ever know, but Hauck went back to her hotel and notified the manager that she would not sing that evening. And she didn't."—Pearson's Weekly.

THE BOROBOEDOER.

A Hindoo Temple Built In Java In the Eighth Century.

The Boroboedoer unearthed by Sir Stamford Raffles when the English ruled in Java was built by the Hindoos in the eighth century and is by far the finest example of their work in the island. Standing on a hill in the middle of the valley, this imposing edifice, covering nearly ten acres, rises to a height of upward of a hundred feet above the summit of the hill.

It consists of a series of stone terraces built on top of each other in diminishing magnitude so as to leave circumscribing galleries and crowned by a vast cupola. Entrance to the galleries is gained by four stairways—north, south, east and west—which run from the ground straight up to the big top terraces, in the middle of which stands the crowning cupola, surrounded by numerous smaller latticework cupolas, from which one may step aside into any of the intermediate galleries.

The whole is built of stone, showing an immense amount of carving, and, though there is no genuine inside to the temple, many of the galleries are covered in, innumerable images of Buddha occupying niches or prominent positions on the walls, and the sides of the galleries were paved with bas-reliefs, indicating the glorification of this god and other incidents in his history. When one considers that there are several miles of bas-reliefs alone the work expended on the pyramids of Egypt pales into insignificance before this stupendous undertaking.—Shanghai Mercury.

Wedding Horses.

An old fashioned man who wanted to hire a team for the afternoon saw a nice pair of bays which he thought he would like to drive.

"Can't let you have them," said the liveryman. "They are wedding horses."

"What's that?" asked the innocent pleasure seeker.

"Horses that won't shy at old shoes and showers of rice. Some horses seem prejudiced against matrimony. Anyhow they lose their temper if they happen to be hit by any of the good luck emblems that are fired after a bridal couple and run away if they get half a chance. Every livery stable, however, keeps two or more horses that take a more cheerful view of the wedded state. They may be literally pelted with old shoes without resenting it. These bays are that kind. They are slated to head a wedding procession tonight and are resting up for the job."—New York Sun.

Bed Good Enough For Him.

"Son," called the farmer as the aroma of eggs and ham came up through the trapdoor, "why don't you get up?"

"What's the use?" yawned the college boy as he turned over for another nap. "Don't believe in early rising."

"Don't, eh? Well, how about the early bird?"

"Oh, that's a chestnut! The early bird caught the early worm, and the early cat caught the bird, and the early dog caught the cat, and the early dog catcher caught the dog. So there you are. What's the use of getting up early? It doesn't pay."—Chicago News.

"I will never believe it. It cannot be."

"And yet it was, but you shall have the whole wretched story to-day, and you shall judge. This much I will say, that though all that he said was true, yet I hold myself blameless and innocent. The world judges me harshly, and it may be that you will find its judgment just. Yet I do not hold myself as on trial at this moment, but you."

"I do not understand."

"There are many things that you do not understand, my friend."

"I would that I had been left in ignorance."

"Nay, that is not a man's wish, but a child's."

"Of one thing I am certain."

"And what is that?"

"That I should have killed him!"

"Nay," said the woman again, "that is not a child's wish, but a brute's."

"You said yourself," he flashed at her, "that there were some things a woman could not forgive, and this is one that a man puts in the same class."

The woman sighed. There occurred to her at the moment no answer which was adequate to the stark realism of this fact. The conversation had reached an impasse beyond which it could not progress without the full and complete explanation which now there was neither time nor opportunity to give, for the boat from the man-of-war was approaching the shore. The woman stepped resolutely down the strand to meet it, and the man, after a slight hesitation, followed her.

So soon as the boat's keel grated on the bottom in the shallow water a middle-aged officer rose from the stern sheets and stepped ashore followed by a younger companion in the uniform of a sergeant of marines. A little squad of privates in the bows landed and fell in line with martial celerity and precision. The officer in charge, who wore the white tropic uniform of a lieutenant commander, now faced the people on the island who had instinctively divided into two groups, one on either side of him. To the right stood the man and behind him the woman, to the left Langford, back of him his crew. It was to the latter that the officer first addressed himself.

"Sir," he began, "I am the executive officer of the United States cruiser Cheyenne, detached on special service. We raised this island this morning, ran it down, circled it, saw the yacht yonder—"

He paused.

"It is my yacht, sir, the Southern Cross," answered the other. "My name is Langford."

"Glad to meet you, Mr. Langford. Mine is Whittaker."

The lieutenant commander touched his cap as he spoke. Langford lifted his, and the two shook hands.

"We saw," continued the lieutenant commander, "what appeared to be some sort of a fracas with the natives, and fired a gun to attract attention, and Capt. Ashby sent this boat party ashore under my charge to do whatever was necessary. Perhaps you can explain how you came to be embroiled with the natives."

"Sir," said the woman. And the fact that she addressed him in his own language, and with the cultured accents of the well-bred and the well-educated, caused the officer to start violently—"the island is mine."

Mr. Whittaker turned and looked deliberately at her, his surprise only equaled by his admiration. The tunic that she wore was a rough garment, and shapeless, but few vestments were better calculated to set off her exquisite proportions. The grace and beauty of her figure, the nobility and intelligence of her face took added luster from the contrast of the utterly simple, natural and primitive. Whittaker's glance fell upon a well-nigh perfect woman. The constraining influences of civilization had been so long absent that nature had time and opportunity to reassert its claim. She was tall, exquisitely modeled. Her bare arms might have supplied those missing from the Venus of Milo; her limbs, which the short tunic to her knees left exposed, were perfect in their symmetry and strength; her feet were such as those to which ancient Greece had bowed; her hands were shapely, graceful, yet strong; her dark eyes looked at him fearlessly; her dark hair rose like a somber, cloudy crown above her brow. The fierce sun, the open air, the wild wind had not materially altered the clear, slightly olive pallor of her face. The woman had been beautiful before. Now that nature had had free sway, she was nobly lovely. She had stood a little in the rear of the man at first and the lieutenant commander had not particularly observed her. When she spoke, she stepped into the open. He stared and stared amazed.

Indeed, the direct intensity of his glance added a sudden new perception to the woman's faculties and for the first time in years she realized that she was standing before her fellows half naked. In one swift moment convention leaped across the missing years and caught her in its arm. The red flashed into her cheek; beneath her rude vest her bosom rose and fell. Her instinct for the moment was to fly. She wished that she had put on those treasured garments which she had kept for a scene like this in that cave all those years. It was too late now. She summoned her courage, and realizing that dignity, after all, is not made of clothes or conventions, once more addressed him.

"Sir," she said, "my name is Katharine Brenton. I am not, as you might well think, a savage, but a castaway."

"I beg your pardon," said the officer, a man of wide reading and culture; "is it possible that you are the Katharine Brenton who wrote 'Fate and Destiny'?"

"I am that unhappy woman."

"Unhappy?"

"Yes," returned the other. "I—"

"Madam," said the lieutenant commander, flushing deeply and bowing in his turn. He had taken off his cap at her first word. "I beg your pardon, I have heard something of your story."

He was very much embarrassed. It was Langford who took up the tale.

"Since you know so much, Mr. Whittaker, you may as well hear the rest. Indeed, I am anxious that the world should hear it. Miss Brenton and I, we—er—did not believe in marriage, and we went away—together."

Every word was agony to Langford, who was a proud man; it was worse than agony to Katharine Brenton, who was a proud woman; and it was worst agony of all to the man of the island. But Langford persisted. He did not care how he hurt himself. Indeed, he rather luxuriated in the consciousness of his own pain. It was part of his expiation. He realized that he would have to hurt Katharine, but perhaps the very keenness of her pain would make her realize her position, and he wanted to win her, now that he had found her and seen her, more than ever. Nor was his passion a base one. Again he was ashamed of what he had already said, so he spoke the more frankly. He gave no thought at all to the other man, but if he had, he would have been glad to hurt him until he killed him.

"We went on my yacht yonder three years ago. I—in short—I behaved like a brute on it, I will admit."

"I discovered that he was a married man," said the woman swiftly at this juncture. She, too, would be frank. This grave and middle-aged officer should hear all. "He had professed his belief in those views, which, if you have read 'Fate and Destiny,' you realize that I entertained."

The officer bowed

"And have you abandoned them now?" he asked

"Absolutely," was the firm answer. "I am a Christian woman, thank God!"

"Thank God, say I, too," continued Langford. "Yet I was not altogether a sham or a lie. It was true that I was a married man."

The lieutenant commander flashed a contemptuous look at him at which Langford winced, but he went on. He was determined to make an absolutely clean breast of the whole affair.

"It is true I was a married man, but I was under the spell of Miss Brenton's eloquence and of her beauty."

"I can well understand that," said the officer, gravely, as a matter of course.

"I thought that marriage meant nothing, and that the old tie might be disregarded. I hated the woman who bore my name, and so as Miss Brenton's disciple, as her devotee, for I loved her, I will admit," she smiled drearily, "more than her philosophy, I proposed that we should trample upon the conventions she had taught me to believe she despised, and go away together."

"But you were not free," said the woman, "to enter upon such an undertaking."

"No, by heaven!" cried Whittaker. Now, this conversation had been carried on with three auditors, or groups of auditors, besides those participating; Langford's yachtsmen, the marines and seamen from the Cheyenne, for the boat was against the shore, and the man of the island. Whittaker first awoke to the situation.

"I beg your pardon," he said, "but would it not be better to continue this conversation privately?"

"I think so," returned Langford.

"No," said the man of the island, addressing the lieutenant commander for the first time, "you and these men are the world. I want the story told where all the world may hear."

Whittaker's surprise at this remark was scarcely less than he had experienced when the woman addressed him. Who was this splendid, godlike form of man standing glooming by the woman's side, a silent, eager listener to all that transpired? What had he to do with the question that he assumed this tone and manner of authority? The officer turned toward the woman.

"I think," said he quietly, "that the lady should be allowed to decide."

"My wish is my friend's wish," said the woman laying her hand softly upon the man's arm.

Whittaker observed that the man shook it off nervously, but the point being settled, there was no further appeal.

"Pray proceed with your story, Mr. Langford," he continued.

"No, let me take up the tale," cried the woman. "Believing that I was right, believing that the education and training which had made me what I was were sound, believing that this man was as free as I to choose his course and order his life, knowing nothing of his wife, I yielded to his pleadings. I thought it was a noble and splendid opportunity vouchsafed me and, in a measure, vouchsafed him to show the world that we did really believe what we said. Had I believed in God then I should have said his meeting with me, his conversion to my theories, his passion for me, his willingness to abide by my decision were Providential. I was glad to consecrate my life to the truth with his aid to take the final step in attestation of my belief, to convince the world that one woman at least had the courage of her convictions. It was a mistake, a frightful mistake, an irreparable mistake, for which I suppose that I must suffer to the end of time."

"No," cried Langford, "I am here to repair the blunder."

"There is no power on earth," said the woman, passionately, "that can put me where I was, that can give me back that I have lost."

"Kate, Kate!" cried Langford, "you don't understand!"

"I understand too well. Why continue the sorry story? Mr. Whittaker, and you that are men beyond, that have wives and children and sweethearts, that have been taught to love God, to believe in him, and to observe his laws, that have submitted yourselves gladly to the conventions of society—or if any be among you who have outraged these and gone against them, taken the law into your own hands—you will understand sooner or later what came to me. I discovered that there was nothing high or holy in this man's regard for me; that he persuaded himself that he believed as I simply to get possession of me. I awoke to a dreaded realization, alone with him on that yacht. He was not kind to me. He acted according to his lights."

"I will confess it," said Langford. "I was a brute to her. I drank; I acknowledged that I had a wife; I said she was in my power; I called her vile names."

There was a low growl, a muttered roar from the men behind Whittaker. Even Langford's own men, in his own pay, shrank back from him. The man was frightfully pale, yet he went on resolutely, Whittaker stilling the tumult with upraised hand.

"No one," he cried, "can think more hatefully of a human being than I think of myself now. I have not learned her philosophy; I have learned another and a better. In some sort of a way at least I know that I can never be happy until I have made her happy. I know that I love her now as I should have loved her then; that I have hunted these seas for her without ceasing since she left me in a drunken stupor one night."

"Left you how?" asked the lieutenant commander.

"I am not quite clear. I must have descended very low," said Langford. "I remember some sort of a scene at supper, and when I awoke in the morning, or I didn't wake for six months, they found me in the morning with a fractured skull on the cabin floor, and they took me back to the United States. It was a year or more before I could begin the search for her."

"He said things to me that night," said the woman, "that no woman could endure or forgive. He came toward me. I threw him from me with such force and violence—I am a strong woman—that he lay senseless in the cabin. The motor launch had been got overboard for a trial and was trailing astern. I got in it, drifted away, started the motor and ran it until the gasoline was gone. I brought food and water from the cabin table. I lived a week in the boat, bearing southward all the time by means of a sail which I improvised from a boat cloak. One night there was a storm. At the height of it I was thrown upon this island. The—"

"I Know That I Love Her Now."

"I hoped," said Langford, taking up the tale, "that that might be the case, and with that end in view I have searched the Pacific. I have landed upon many uncharted islands. I have explored others little, if ever, visited, praying to God that she might be alive, that I might find her and make reparation, and now I have found her at last when I had given up all hope, abandoned all expectation. And I stand here confessing my fault before men, ready to do anything and everything that a man can do to make amends for the past."

"But you have a wife," said Whittaker, coldly.

JERSEY'S REPUBLIC SOON TO BE OPENED

That the New Jersey George Junior Republic at Flemington Junction will be opened on March 22 was announced as a certainty at a meeting of the Clio Club, of Roselle, yesterday afternoon. Although the new superintendent has not been definitely named, his appointment is sure to come within a very few days, and following that will be the immediate commencement of work in the institution, which will be ready for "citizens" at once.

William R. George, founder of the George Junior Republic system was to have addressed the Clio Club yesterday, but owing to illness in his family was unable to be present, and sent in his place William Gute, a former "citizen," to speak on the Freeville Republic, after which the republic at Flemington Junction is to be directly modeled. Mr. Gute was for eight years a "citizen" in Freeville, and then entered the law school at Cornell University, ten miles from Freeville, where he studied for two and one-half years, after which he returned to the republic as an assistant to Mr. Gorge.

He told of the conditions which first brought about this remarkable organization. The George Junior Republic is not the result of any cut and dried plan; it "just grew." In 1889 William George took to the village of Freeville fifty "fresh air" boys and girls. Within the next five years this number grew to 250. There these little people spent a joyous two weeks, at the end of which one squad was returned and another was sent on all through the summer months. A tract of land consisting of 200 acres, on which had been situated the camp of these fresh air children, was deeded to Mr. George by the Lehigh Valley Railroad, which has given the land for the New Jersey Republic, with the understanding that he should establish thereon a permanent home for incorrigible boys and girls, such as he had been laboring with in his work through the summer months.

New System Established.

In the summer of 1894, when the fresh air youngsters arrived, they found a changed program. In other years the two weeks spent there had been one long holiday, but not so now. Every boy who was strong and able was given a pick or a shovel and put to work. Certain hours of every day were devoted to work and a few hours to sports invariably followed. Out of this first work, done by unaccustomed and, at first, only too often unwilling hands, has grown the present republic, a little community on the east hill of the village of Freeville.

At the present time the republic owns 350 acres of land and comprises thirty buildings with several being erected and a plan to have forty buildings before another winter. Among these are ten cottages, a chapel, schoolhouse, jail buildings, printing shop, plumbing shop, carpenter and furniture shop, bakery, steam laundry, hospital, general store and farm building.

The purpose of the institution is "to prevent crime, to develop charcter and to promote good citizenship." When the republic was first organized it consisted only of boys and girls taken from slum districts, but gradually it has undergone much change and of the 135 "citizens" at Freeville today, seventy of whom are boys, there are many who come from homes of wealth, culture and refinement; children who have been indulged to the extent of becoming ungovernable, and to whom the motto of the republic "Nothing Without Labor" is the hardest proposition of the institution. The "citizens" have a currency of their own—aluminum—equivalent in value at the republic to United States money. Every coin bears the words "Nothing Without Labor," and the prevailing principle of the institution is kept constantly before the "citizens."

On entering the institution a citizen is permitted to choose his own boarding house, boys and girls having separate cottages. He then chooses the work he prefers to do. Every citizen must work five hours and attend school five hours on five days of the week with a Saturday holiday.

One very important step for the "citizen" is to become familiar with the laws which govern the republic. Step by step the idea of self government was established, and it has worked like a charm. The first ruling officers were adults, hired for the work, but the boys and girls rebelled, and in 1895 the edict went forth that they should elect their officers from among themselves.

Officers Who Rule Republic.

From that time all laws have been made by the "citizens" and passed upon at the town meetings, held monthly. The laws are strictly enforced by officers elected from their number. The government officers consist of a president, vice-president, secretary of state, secretary of the treasury, a boy district attorney, (these officers comprising the president's cabinet), a girl district attorney, boys' judge, girls' judge, police officers, prison keepers and a board of health. Having equal privileges both boys and girls pay poll taxes.

No court or public officer can commit a boy or girl to the republic, as it is a private institution, receiving no State funds excepting for the school. But there are cases where boys or girls are received through suspended sentence or on probation. In these cases contracts are usually made with city or county officers, in which they agree to pay a certain portion of the expense. Where children's parents are unable to pay board the Republic Association assumes the responsibility and draws its funds from voluntary subscriptions.

There have been many instances where boys, unruly and seemingly incorrigible at home, have gone to the republic and developed into the best citizens and excelled in their trade. The trades pay from $2.75 to $4 a week.

The largest department of work for the boys is that of the farm, 175 acres being under cultivation at present. The work of the printery is publishing their odwn weekly paper and a monthly paper for a high school in a nearby city. They handle quite and amount of job work for outsiders.

The carpentry department works in erecting the buildings of the republic, and also makes mission furniture. The plumbing department has installed the heating apparatus in all buildings heated. Boys are taught the work thoroughly.

The bakery department has a well-equipped building where they make crackers, cookies, bread, pies and cakes, having a big trade in nearby cities.

OFFICE BOY'S PHILOSOPHY.

"If you save money, you're a grouch;
If you spend it, you're a loafer;
If you get it, you're a grafter;
If you don't get it, you're a bum—
So what t'ell's the use."

The final quintrain tells the whole story—it is the querulous refrain of thousands of persons who are continually sitting in judgment upon their neighbors, and who complain that the world is hard and are likely always to find it so. What if a few cowardly, discontented people or a few riters who ought to have nobler ambitions, and who might well place their views of life and of human wisdom on a higher plane mumble this thought? It is true that we must have the evil with the good, pain with pleasure, danger with victory, weariness and exposure with enterprising and successful adventure. Who cares for water when he is not thirsty, or what is more precious than the crystal spring when the lips are parched and the heart fainting with thirst? How one remembers the rough fare that came after deprivation and fatigue, and the dreamless delicious sleep that followed upon utter weariness of body?

Wake up, O dolorous office boy! Tear up your bogus philosophy and "forget it." It will never bring you courage, manliness, truth, honesty, love, cheerfulness, health or success. It is of the breed of half-truths which are ten times more dangerous than whole-cloth lies—"a lie that is half a truth is ever the worst of lies."

There are great evils, misfortunes, dangers, injustice, oppression, in this mortal life, which we are bound to do our part to lessen and abolish if we can and to endure manfully if we must. Many more and much greater calamities and sufferings have been endured for us by men and women whose very names are forgotten—those who but died that we might be free in body and mind, in word and deed. Only an office boy, who can never hope to rise to the full measure of a man, can accept your moping inconsolate "philosophy of life," and saying, "So what t'ell's the use," stroke the "tresses of the cypress slender minister of wine," which delighted our old poet Omar Khayyam, or strike the Dutch bartender for "lager and pretzels," and become a mere cipher in the splendid sum of human achievement in our day and generation.—National Magazine.

CHILD'S SUCCESS IN PLAY.

The child that is constantly disappointed in his play enterprises, making a failure of his cherished play dreams day after day, receiving no sympathy from those responsible for his welfare and no help in overcoming obstacles too great for him, soon loses confidence in himself; the spirit of venture dies out and he falls into the habit of making a failure of what he undertakes, and thus prepares the way for abortive efforts in the more serious ventures of later life. To succeed in building snow forts, in making kites, sleds and wagons, in coasting the hill, in skating, swimming, and climbing trees, in dressing dolls and training pets—all such achievements prophesy success in the important endeavors of later life. The culture power of the adult is measured by the play experienced of the child. The boy is father to the man.

Pretty Curtains.

The prettiest curtains imaginable may be made from unbleached cotton or muslin. They may be simply be feather stitched or cat stitched at the hems, or if you have time buy some plain colored gingham and cut a pretty conventional design from it and stitch it on the cutoin at the bottom. A design of generniums in bright red gingham would be effective, especially if a pretty red tablecloth is spread on the table when it is not in use.

GIRLS AFTER "TOWN POET"

Fair Sex of Dunellen Aroused Over Posting of Effusion in Postoffice.

"5:15 TRAIN" IS MENTIONED.

Joker, Whoever He Is, Having a Lot of Fun—Tar and Feathers Will Be His Fate If Apprehended.

The staid old village of Dunellen, which has occupied a prominent part in the newspapers in recent years, because of its many pretty girls, and its large number of estimable spinsters, is again in the throes of gossip over the posting of an original poem in the postoffice recently by the "town poet."

That some young women in the town are after the scalp of the "poet" is no secret, and if his identity is discovered there is sure to be a tar and feather tragedy to record.

The Dunellen postoffice is well known as the gossip clearing house for that village, New Market and Piscataway township. 'Tis the general understanding if you want to know anything all that is necessary is to go to the Dunellen stamp headquarters "when the 5:15 train comes in every day."

It is also the trysting place for the town's lovers, and according to history, Dan Cupid has made many conquests within its walls. At any rate the town poet got busy and penned the following lines. The effusion was posted in a prominent place where is remained for twelve hours, or until it was hauled down by an indignant young woman. The poem which stirred up a hornet's nest among the young folk of the village read as follows:

At the Postoffice.

"Where are the skirts a likin' to?"
Asked Files on parade.
"The postoffice—the postoffice."
A wise guy sweetly said
"And will they all get letters?"
Asked simple Files again.
"There ain't a chance—there ain't a chance."
The wise guy answered then.
"But they can all get together
In the window by the street
In their glad rags, each one thinking
She is sweet enough to eat.
Little beauties—let 'em tell it—
You would have hard work to beat
In the postoffice at 5:15 each evening.

"What will they all be doing there"
Old Files asked bye and bye.
"Oh nothing much—just gossiping."
The other made reply
"But, do their mamma's know they're out?"
Asked Files so very soft.
"It doesn't make much difference,"
His friend discreetly coughed.
"For you know each girl is looking
For the handsomest young man,
Just to cast her eyes upon him
And annex him if she can.
Oh, the lamps are trimmed and burning,
On a most attractive plan.
And Dan Cupid's there at 5:15 each evening."

"And do the fellows fall for it?"
Asked poor Files in affright.
"You bet your bloomin' life they do,"
His pal replied, polite.
"I thought Dunellen boys were shy"
Remarked Files in surprise.
"Of course they are—of course they are,"
The other man replies.
"But when one sees a friendly grin
Upon some lovely mush,
And hearkens a few minutes
Unto some fair maiden's gush
Then his wits begin to leave him
And his talk is most mush.
In the postoffice at 5:15 each evening."

WE WERE SNOW BOUND TWENTY-TWO YEARS AGO

Today is the twenty-second anniversary of the great blizzard which swept over the Eastern States on March 12, 1888, and hundreds of Plainfielders recall scenes and incidents of that memorable occasion. In this connection it is interesting to note that a disturbance similar to that of 1888 was central on the Atlantic Coast this morning and was pursuing apparently the same track as that of the storm which caused the blizzard.

Twenty-two years ago, for three days, this whole section was completely tied up by the worst snow storm in the memory of the oldest inhabitant. Hundreds of Plainfielders in New York were caught on their way home and got no further than Elizabeth, where they remained for a couple of days. Dr. Smiley, a well-known physician, started out to visit relatives in North Plainfield, and was found frozen to death not far from his home on Plainfield avenue.

There were no newspapers, no deliveries of milk, groceries, etc., and no telephone or telegraphs communication and no railroad trains were operated for two or three days. There was absolute congestion and countless incidents of hardship, privation and other troubles are remembered by many residents.

JUNIORS CONDUCT A PROGRESSIVE EUCHRE

The progressive euchre given in Jr. O. U. A. M. hall last night under the joint auspices of Franklin and Somerset councils was an enjoyable affair. About 150 members of the two councils, their wives, sisters and sweethearts participated in the prize competition which was productive of much pleasure.

Mrs. Harry K. Lister carried off first prize among the women which was a handsome sofa pillow. Mrs. P. H. Latourette was the winner of the second prize, a box of choice imported perfumery. Oscar Sweitzer excelled among the men and captured first prize, which was a mounted inkstand. James McInnes took second honours, a collar and cuff box.

Refreshments were served at 11 o'clock. The joint committee in charge was Louis Hall, Joseph Englund, George Watts, George D. Wilson, Charles Wilson, Joseph Martin and Harry Nolte.

WANTS MOVING PICTURES AND PIANOS FOR SCHOOL

Because of the interest shown by the pupils of the Maple Avenue Public School, in Morristown, in a recent illustrated lecture, City Superintendent Ira W. Travell said yesterday that he hoped some kindly disposed citizens would some day donate about $200 for the purchase of a picture machine. He had no intentions of running a moving picture show in the school, he said, but a picture machine that would reproduce photographs, postal cards and the movements in a watch would be of great educational value. In this way, he said, scenes in history, and demonstrations of the working of intricate machinery could be shown and easily explained to the pupils.

"In Plainfield," Mr. Travell stated, "such a machine had been purchased and had proved a success." The superintendent is also appealing for pianos for class rooms in the grades. The donation of a piano or two, he said, would be gratefully received.

"I am sure there are some people in Morristown who have old pianos that they wouldn't mind giving away for a worthy purpose," said Mr. Travell, last night, "and I believe in letting my wants known."

Y.M.C.A. BOYS GIVE A BENEFIT EXHIBITION

For the purpose of raising funds for Y. M. C. A. work among the boys in Sanitago de Chili the members of the boys' department of the local Y. M. C. A. gave an athletic and gymnastic exhibition last night. A large audience was present and a substantial sum was realized for the project. The events were ably conducted by Charles H. RECEIVE NO TIDINGS OF MISS BLOODGOOD

No news has as yet been received by the parents of Miss Helen Bloodgood, who disappeared from her home in Lakewood last Wednesday morning. It is not believed by her parents that she is dead, but that she is being cared for somewhere remote from Lakewood by those who know nothing of the story of her disappearance. In order to trace the young woman private detectives from New York are making a thorough search of places where it is possible for her to have hidden.

The story that Miss Bloodgood had been seen by a Jersey Central Railroad conductor is not believed, as the ground has been thoroughly gone over and absolutely no trace has ben found. Nothing is being left undone that will restore the daughter to her parents and the entrance of the New York detectives on the quest has given the encouragement that something will soon be heard from the missing young woman. Yesterday in spite of the fact that neither Mr. or Mrs. Bloodgood believe that their daughter has taken her life, Lake Carasaljo was was dragged by the Lakewood police, but without result. Miss Bloodgood has many friends in this city who await with anxiety word that she has been found.

VALUE OF A HEN IS $30

So Says J. Harvey Wolseifer, of Dunellen, Who is a Noted Chicken Expert.

TO SOUTH JERSEY FARMERS.

New Jersey Ranks Second Among States in Chicken Raising—Pointers on the Raising of Fowl.

J. Harvey Wolseifer, the Dunellen chicken expert, has gone on record as declaring that every barn-yard hen is worth $30. Mr. Wolseifer gave this advice yesterday to South Jersey farmers and chicken raisers, in addresses given in that section of the State under the auspices of the faculty of the New Jersey Agricultural College, which traveled on a special train by courtesy of the Pennsylvania Railroad.

The train was run under the direction of Dr. E. B. Voorhees, of New Brunswick, and made stops at Salem Elmer, Daretown, Quenton and other places. E. R. Collins, of Westfield, was a member of the party.

Mr. Wolsiefer, who spoke on poultry raising, astonished his hearers with the statement that $10,000,000 was invested in poultry in New Jersey, and that this State has larger poultry farms than any other State in the Union, with the exception of California.

Mr. Wolseifer said the little American hen, if capitalized according to its production of wealth, would be worth $30, and that Lakewood residents are the banner chicken raisers in the State. He urged the farmer to keep dry mixture before the fowl all the time in a hopper, which mixture should be prepared as follows:

One hundred pounds of bran, 100 pounds of middlings, 100 pounds of alfalfa meal and seventy-five pounds of beef scraps; that the chickens should be fed morning and afternoon from four to six quarts of grain per one hundred fowls; equal parts of corn, oats, barley and wheat.

As to the construction of t he chicken buildings, the three sides should be tightly weatherboarded and the front facing the morning sun be open, and that the size should be regulated to give each fowl five square feet of floor space. The chickens should have plenty of fresh water and grit oyster shells or charcoal.

MISS KELLY LOST PURSE AND FOUND A $20 BILL

Miss Annette Kelly, of West Fourth street, had an experience yesterday which probably doesn't come to many young women who have occasion to go to New York on shopping tours for their Easter gowns and bonnets. In a nutshell, it was necessary for Miss Kelly to find a twenty dollar bill on Sixth avenue for her to come to a realization that she had lost twenty-two dollars and her commutation ticket.

This is the tale. Miss Kelly, who is employed as a stenographer in New York, visited several of the large department stores and made a number of purchases and then started on her way to a Sixth avenue restaurant for lunch.

While walking between Thirty-first and Thirty-second streets, on Sixth avenue, Miss Kelly's eye chanced to see a peculiar bit of paper on the pavement. She stopped and picked up what looked to be a piece of crumpled paper. It was a twenty dollar bill.

It is needless to state that Miss Kelly's breath was nearly taken away and visions of an extra Easter bonnet shot through her mind. She held tight to her "find" and continued at a merry clip on to the restaurant. Soon as she regained her equilibrium she decided to place the bill in her pocketbook.

It was at this moment that she made the sad discovery that she had lost, or left behind in one of the stores, her handbag which contained her purse, which stored a twenty dollar bill, about two dollars in change and her commutation ticket. Miss Kelly hurriedly turned around and retraced her steps to the different stores she had visited, but she failed to find her handbag.

"Well it could have been worse," said Miss Kelly to a friend last night on her return, "but the twenty dollar bill I found came in very handy and looked as big as $1,000 when I realized that I had lost the remainder of my shopping funds."

Incorporates Doll Concern.

Mrs. C. W. Foote yesterday filed papers with the Union County Clerk for the incorporation of the Fairyland Doll Toy and Specialty Co., whose principal office is on East Fourth street.

APOPLEXY FATAL TO MRS. DANIEL E. DAVIS

Mrs. Daniel E. Davis died at 7 o'clock last night at her home, 935 Union stret, following a stroke of apoplexy suffered Thursday morning while she was dressing. She was unconscious all the time, passing peacefully away.

Mrs. Davis was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alvah S. Mulford, of Brooklyn. Her father was cashier of the Mechanics' National Bank, of that city, for many years. Mrs. Davis was born in Brooklyn, where she spent the early years of her life. She was married at Southold, L. I., and came to this city in 1871.

Soon after coming here Mrs. Davis identified herself with the First M. E. church and was active in all departments of church work, being a faithful attendant at the services. She lived an exemplary Christian life and was held in high esteem for her many excellent qualities.

Mrs. Davis is survived by a husband, of the Plainfield Trust Company; two sons, Robert W. Davis, of this city; Alvah Davis, of Nutley, and one daughter, Mrs. Wilfrid Houghton, of Nutley.

The funeral services will be held from the First M. E. church Monday morning at 11 o'clock and Rev. Dr. Charles M. Anderson, pastor, will officiate. The burial will be in the M. E. cemetery on Plainfield avenue.

HAD VETERAN'S LICENSE; COST HIM THREE DOLLARS

Giuseppe Pacini is a slick individual, but he found his match in Patrolman Charles Flynn yesterday when he tried to pass off on the bluecoat a pedding license issued to Daniel Keleher, of Newark, a veteran of Company I, Ninth New Jersey Volunteers, for which the wily Giuseppe had "loaned" Mr. Keleher $5.00. The transaction took place in a saloon in Newark, according to the Italian, and he said he did not know the veteran's address.

Giuseppe speaks English tolerably well and tried in every way to convince Judge Runyon that he was ignorant of the law regarding licenses and said that Keleher had told him he need have no fear of the police as long as he could produce the slip of paper bearing the signature of County Clerk J. B. Woolston, of Essex. Judge Runyon imposed a fine of $3 and confiscated the license. It is quite possible that Mr. Keleher will get into trouble for disposing of his privilege to peddle when the Newark authorities are acquainted with the facts.

F. O. DUNNING NAMED FOR SCHOOL BOARD

Frank O. Dunning, of Mountain avenue, has given consent to his friends to nominate him for the one-year term of the borough school board at the annual school meeting which will be held on Tuesday night in the Somerset Street School. The names already mentioned for the three-year terms are the Rev. George A. Warner, Allen B. Laing, and Robert Clark, Jr.

According to outside indications little interest is being taken in the election, but the entry of Mr. Dunning in the race, making four candidates for the three vacancies, may precipitate a keen fight for honors among the friends of the respective candidates.

Ladies Auxiliary Elect.

The Ladies Auxiliary of the Gesang and Turn Verein has elected and installed the following officers: President, Mrs. Jacob Schlick; vice-president, Mrs. Rudolph Speigel; secretary, Mrs. John Retzer; treasurer, Mrs. Frick. Arrangements are progressing for the annual dance of the society, which will be held April 5.

Announce Official Visitation.

HEYL'S PROFANITY AN EXPENSIVE OUTBURST

For using abusive and profane language to an officer while in the discharge of his duties, George Heyl, of Somerville, was fined eight dollars by City Judge William Runyon this morning. Heyl came voluntarily to court when he learned that he was wanted and this mitigated his sentence, but it is safe to say he will not repeat the offense in this city.

Heyl came to Plainfield on February 13, and after a few rounds of drinks lost his equilibrium and his senses went wool gathering. At 1 o'clock of the morning of the 14th he in company with a crowd of other young men were creating a disturbance in the North avenue station when Patrolman Saffron entered. The patrolman requested the crowd to be quiet, but the silence lasted only until the train for Somerville came along. Then Heyl boarded the train and leaning off the steps reviled Patrolman Saffron, and it is alleged he continued to speak of him in such terms that the conductor was asked to have him put off the train at Dunellen. This was not done.

In explaining his conduct to Judge Runyon this morning Heyl declared that he must have been intoxicated, as he remembered nothing of what he had done. After paying his fine Heyl apologized to the officer he had insulted.

WOMEN'S RELIEF CORPS SURPRISES MRS. MATTOX

A feature of the meeting of the Women's Relief Corps at Reform Hall, last night, was an informal reception tendered to Mrs. Sarah Mattox, who today is celebrating the anniversary of her birthday. The affair was in the nature of a surprise. After the business session Mrs. Emma Frazee took the chair, and then announced to the members that Mrs. Mattox would celebrate on the morrow.

The affair then resolved itself into a birthday party and Mrs Mattox received a suitable gift from each member and in addition the best wishes of all for many happy returns of the day. Another feature was the presentation of a birthday cake to Mrs. Mattox by Mrs. Kitchell, it being her own make. Refreshments were served during the social hour.

BEEF NOT SCARCE, RETAILERS REPORT

Elizabethans may be having difficulty in getting all the meat they want, but the retailers of this city find no scarcity of edible flesh. On the contrary there is repletion reported at all the places visited in the city this morning by a reporter for The Daily Press.

According to an Elizabeth newspaper the butchers of that city are up against the wholesalers who are refusing to supply all the demand, giving as an excuse that cattle are scarce. The retail dealers, however, declare that there is no actual famine in beef, but that the trust is holding on to their supply in revenge for the action taken against it in this State. The excuse of "scarce cattle" will hardly be believed by any butcher who knows that the cold storage warehouses are filled to the limit with beef and other meats and which it is to their interests to dispose of.

One of the retailers in this city when shown the Elizabeth paper containing the alarming story of the beef famine in that burg laughed. "Say," he said, "there is more meat to be bought from the wholesalers now than ever before. They don't want this present investigation to put them in bad and they are willing to 'cover up' past actions by letting go the cold storage stuff that will sooner or later have to be part of the trials if they ever come up. Take it from me that if Elizabeth is shy of meat it must be that they are also shy of the 'long green' to pay for it. That would be the only obstacle in the way of procuring carloads of any kind of meat."

Another retailer said practically the same thing, but added that he thought it a good suggestion that all meats whether on the hoof or in refrigerating vesels or cars should be on the free list. The duty on foreign meats is a sin, he said.

Mr. and Mrs. Luther Sheppard, of Brooklyn, are spending the week-end with Mr. Sheppard's parents, Mr. and Mrs. L. C. Sheppard, of Somerset place.

BANNER FOR ST. MARY'S

Parochial School Contributes Largest Amount to Muhlenberg Hospital.

SELF-DENIAL FUND $552.43.

Drake Business College Comes Second, Franklin School Third—Cups Were Awarded.

St. Mary's parochial school easily won the banner for its contribution towards the hospital in the contest which has just closed as a self-denial week under the auspices of the local branch of the Patrolmen's Benevolent Association. This school contributed $95.42, thus winning the banner, and grade 4B won the cup in this school with a contribution of $15.43. The boxes were opened by a committe from the P. B. A. in the presence of Mayor Charles J. Fisk with Ralph T. Willis counting the coin and William Causebrook, local manager of the Public Service Corporation as custodian of the boxes. The grand total was $552.43.

The other city schools contributed the following amounts: Drake Business College, $50.37; Franklin, $44.17; Bryant, $41.63; Irving, $41.11; Stillman, $39.15; Hartridge, $26.98; Washington, $22.98; Whittier, $20.70; Lincoln, $20.04; High School, $13.82; Plainfield Business College, $5.13; Clinton Avenue, $3.29; Leal's, $7.31.

North Plainfield and Scotch Plains contributed as follows: Somerset School, $48.74; Watchung, $16.26; and Scotch Plains, $12.83. From miscellaneous boxes distributed throughout the city $41.59 was collected.

The task of opening the boxes and counting the money was no light operation and it was early this morning when the count was ended and the prizes awarded. St. Mary's class Grade 4B gets the cup in that school, while the others were awarded by Mayor Fisk as follows: Drake College, short-hand department, $29.17; Franklin School, grade 5B, $12.17; Bryant School, grade 5B, $6.06; Irving, grade 3A, $7.06; Stillman, grade 7E, $7.49; Hartridge, $26.98; Washington, grade 3A, $3.86; Whittier, grade 6F, $8.95; Lincoln, class B, $20.04; High School, class of 1913, $7.08; Plainfield Business College, $5.13, and Clinton avenue, $3.29 Somerset School, grade 7B, $3.34; Watchung Kindergarten, $3.37. Scotch Plains School gets a cup for its contribution of $12.83.

It is the intention of Mayor Fisk to deliver the banner and the cups in person on Monday, provided he can so arrange the matter. One of the pleasant experiences of opening the hundreds of envelopes was the thrill which one would experience when a nice fat one came along and when opened disclosed a packet of cigarette papers in place of dollar bills. A few of the other articles contained in the boxes were tobacco, matchs, checks from John D Rockefeller and Andrew Carnegie for fabulous amounts, lead quarters, French coins of ancient date, the collateral used by actors on the stage and other imitations of the real thing. Several nice round buttons also were found.

REV. DR. SHIPMAN AT HOLY CROSS TOMORROW.

One of the most celebrated clergymen in the Episcopal communion, the Rev. Herbert Shipman, LL. D., D. C. L. (Oxon), will give a Lenten talk at the Church of the Holy Cross tomorrow night. The rector and vestry, it is considered, have been extremely fortunate in getting the distinguished successor of the late Rev. Dr. Morgan at the Church of the Heavenly Rest, Fifth avenue, New York, to spare his time during the Lenten season to address the local Episcopalians.

Dr. Shipman, who was formerly chaplain at the United States Military Academy, West Point, is one of the noted practical preachers and his discourses are considered intensely interesting. The service tomorrow night will begin at 7:45. There will be special music by the excellent boy choir.

LOCAL AMUSEMENTS

For the first time in the history of American theatricals, a play showing the workings of the detective department of a large city, is vividly shown and faithfully portrayed in Charles Klein's latest contribution, "The Third Degree," which comes to Plainfield theatre on March 18, for one performance under the management of Henry B. Harris, who also produced Mr. Klein's former success, "The Lion and the Mouse." In "The Third Degree" Mr. Klein attempts to show the methods used by ambitious police heads, who in their efforts to produce a perpetrator for every crime, resort to the sweating process of the third degree and in many instances, one of which provoked Mr. Klein into writing this vital drama, by reason of their liberties, never endowed by law, succeed in convicting an innocent man.

CASE AFTER CASE.

Plenty More Like This in Plainfield.

Scores of Plainfield people can tell you about Doan's Kidney Pills. Many a happy citizen makes a public statement of his experience. Here is a case of it. What better proof of merit can be had than such endorsement?

Robert Love, 44 Duer street, Plainfield, N. J. says: "For eight or nine years I wasy a victim of kidney complaint. Every cold I contracted settled in my kidneys and caused my back to ache severely. Any heavy lifting or much standing gave me additional pain. In the morning upon arising, my back was very lame and this did not disappear until I exercised for some time. I doctored and used several so-called kidney cures, but it was only a waste of money. Seeing Doan's Kidney Pills highly recommended in the the newspapers, I procured a box at Randolph's Pharmacy and began their use. When I had taken about half the contents of the box my condition was greatly improved and before long the pain left me entirely. I will always stand ready to speak a good word for Doan's Kidney Pills."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

N. J. AND PA. R. R. OUT OF RECEIVER'S HANDS.

Morristown, March 12.—After being in the hands of a receiver, Frederick V. Pitney, of Morristown, for four years the New Jersey and Pennsylvania Railroad Company has been reorganized. The road was turned over to its new owners on Wednesday, just after the reorganization. New blood has been infused into the company and it is the plan of the new owners to start at once to extend the road to Morristown. It now runs from Whitehouse Station to Watnong, a distance of about twenty-five miles. Watnong is three miles from Morristown. At present passengers are conveyed to and from the Lackawanna station and other points in Morristown by stage.

The right of way from Watnong to Morristown has been secured and it is said to be only a question of a few months when the railroad will enter this city. This completed, the new company expects that the road will be a money-making proposition.

George E. Fisher, of New York, owned the greater part of the stock of the road and it is said that he is also interested in the new management.

WANTS BILLBOARD CENSORS.

Rahway, March 12.—At the meeting of the Rahway Civic Commission, held Thursday night, a communication regarding billboard censorship recently presented to Common Council by Mrs. James A. Macclary, fourth vice-president of the State Federation of Women's Clubs, was referred to them for their consideration. The communication asks that an effort be made to have all billboards displayed in Union County placed under censorship; that the municipal officers and Civic Commission cooperate with the women's clubs in the moral betterment and artistic development of Rahway, and asks that one member of the Common Council and one representative of the Civic Commission be empowered to report at each meeting of the council, billposters whose signs are vulgar, or whose pictures representing crime are likely to pollute the minds of the young. Also that action be taken looking to the creation of a license law in regard to those who use the billboards in Rahway, that a more artistic appearance may be given to what ordinarily constitutes an eyesore in our city.

Resolutions were passed to urge all citizens interested in the matter of a tuberculosis pavilion to attend a meeting of the Board of Freeholders at Elizabeth March 18, in the afternoon.

Camden, March 12.—Charlotte Stewart, widow of George Stewart, the negro who was electrocuted for murdering William Snell during a row in the Camden County jail, where both were prisoners, on November 26, 1907, was Thursday held under $500 bail on a charge of having threatened to kill Rose Mitchell. The latter alleged that the pistol with which Mrs. Stewart threatened her was given the accused by one of the special negro policemen doing strike duty in Philadelphia.

HALLEY'S A TWILIGHT COMET.

Look for It Now as Sun Sets—Prof. Pickering Says It Is Harmless.

Cambridge, Mass., March 12.—Halley's comet may now be seen on nights when conditions are favorable with the aid of an ordinary field glass. The most favorable time to look for it is between 6:30 and 7:30 p. m., with the glass elevated somewhat above where the sun sets. The Harvard Observatory forces have the wanderer focused nightly on their big telescopes, and some interesting photographs of its development are being made.

Prof. E. C. Pickering, director of the Harvard Observatory, says:

"The comet is at present in the twilight region. It is in the line of the sun, and its brightness is dimmed by the lustre of the great centre of the solar system. Besides, it has not yet attained its greatest size. When it makes its transverse of the sun it will have attained its maximum brilliancy. That will be on May 18. It will be visible all through April, but at its brightest in May.

"About that time if clouds no dot obscure it, it will be a dazzling sight. About a third of the heavens will be colored with a fiery gold, its great flashes of light will play from one part of the heavens to another, and the scenes will be remembered for generations. Halley's comet has been noted for its brilliant displays.

"There is absolutely no danger to the earth from the comet. The earth is going to shoot through its tail like a cannon ball through our atmosphere. And we shall not notice the fact that we are traveling through a comet's tail. The idea that any harm will come from the poisonous gases is ridiculous. The gas in the tail is cyanogen. In order to become dangerous it would have to come into contact with a large mass of hydrogen, and that is practically all locked up in the water.

"When the comet is nearest the earth we shall be 14,000,000 miles away, and that is far enough to be out of mischief. Of course, the tail will reach us, and we shall pass through it. But we have done that before without any damage, and we shall do that again."

Woman Suddenly Stricken.

CHURCH BURGLAR WRITES TO PASTOR.

Hackensack, March 12.—The burglar who last Saturday night broke into the handsome new building of the Second Reformed church, Hackensack, has written to the Rev. Arthur Johnson making full confession of the crime. The burglar signs himself "Pratt," and the letter is postmarked Passaic.

"This was certainly the theif, for he described my every movement while I was in the library and church up to 10 o'clock Saturday night," said the Rev. Mr. Johnson.

The thief also stated that he almost collided with the janitor in the darkness. About $300 worth of damage was done to locks, lockers and desks in the church, and the pastor's library gown, a Christmas present, was stolen.

The Telephone
Aids the Traveler

WE all make journeys now and then. No matter how frequently or infrequently these journeys are made, the time for starting usually finds us not quite ready. In such an emergency the telephone is invaluable.

Ordering the expressman is only one way in which it may be used. Orders to disconnect plumbing and lights, and final good-byes to friends, may be given. If the trip is to be long, arrangements may be made also to disconnect a telephone in a residence temporarily, and an allowance is made by the Company for the time the telephone is not in use.

Have you a Telephone?

N. Y. AMUSEMENTS.

"The Lily," which David Belasco is producing at his splendid Belasco-Stuyvesant theatre, in New York, in many ways represent the most notable of all the notable undertakings for which this distinguished dramatist-manager-producer has become famed throughout the last decade. The play itself, which is from the French, is Mr. Belasco's own work, and the first he has written since that phenomenal success, "The Girl of the Golden West." The company which is producing it has been universally acclaimed as the greatest aggregation of players ever assembled on the English speaking stage. This all-star cast is known as the David Belasco Company, and numbers fourteen members in all.

Donald Brian, who finally marries "The Dollar Princess," in the popular musical comedy, has been really married in real life to Mrs. Charles H. Pope, formerly Miss Florence Meagher Gleason. They will live at 40 South Washington Square, New York. One of the wedding gifts was a huge floral horse-shoe from "The Dollar Princess Company" on which was inscribed in forget-me-nots, the words "Love's a Race," the title of Mr. Brian's principal song which he sings as Freddy Smythe in the piece. Mrs. Pope's brother, Joseph J. Gleason, recently married Marjorie Wood of William Collier's, "A Lucky Star" Company. The Gleasons though not connected to the Frohman organization by business ties are rapidly marrying into it. Charles Frohman cabled his congratulations to Mr. and Mrs. Brian from Paris.

STATE ASSESSOR UPON RAILROAD REVALUATION.

Jersey City March 12.—State Assessor Charles E. Hendrickson, when asked yesterday morning if he desired to make a statement concerning the report of the Railroad Revaluation Commission, which shows that over $20,000,000 of the floating equipment of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company has escaped taxation by either State or local taxing board, said:

All I can say is that the report shows the need of the commission. It is a good that that I was appointed, and I am glad that its labors have borne fruit. If the commission says that the floating equipment has not been assessed I can't dispute it. I suppose it must be so. Why it has not I cannot say. I did not have personal experience with the floating equipment of the Pennsylvania Railroad, but I did that of the Lehigh Valley.

I investigated the Lehigh Valley, which is not assessed for its floating equipment, and found out that the reason was that all the floating equipment was owned by the Lehigh Transportation Company and not by the railroad corporation and that it was assessed to the Transportation company at Perth Amboy.

BURGLARY FORCED A WEDDING ANNOUNCEMENT.

Bayonne, March 12.—A burglary was responsible for the announcement of the secret wedding Saturday of Miss Emma Cohen and Samuel Goldstein. They were married by Justice of the Peace Boylan and decided to defer announcement for a few months. The bride hid her wedding ring and $30 which her husband gave her in the bureau drawer in her room at her parents' house 80 West Twentieth street. Wednesday night she went with her father and mother to the thatre. In the absence of the family the house was robbed.

Running to her room the young woman found the bureau drawers torn out and upset and the room in confusion. Forgetting the need of caution, she shrieked out, "And they have taken my wedding ring." Then there were more sensations, but the formal announcement of the wedding was made yesterday morning.

Diamond Jubilee of Hoboken Church

Hoboken, March 12.—The diamond jubilee of St. Paul's Episcopal church of this city will be celebrated next Sunday. Rev. Dr. William R. Jenvey, the rector, has been busy preparing for the seventy-fifth anniversary for several weeks. Dr. Jenvey has arranged for elaborate services, decorations and music, and will deliver an anniversary sermon. He assumed charge of the church June 2, 1883. Every obligation of the church was paid in 1888, when it was consecrated by the Right Rev. Thomas A. Starkey, assisted by Bishop Whitaker, of Pennsylvania; Bishop Scarborough, of New Jersey; Bishop Leonard, of Nevada, and one hundred clergymen. The rector has expended $50,000 in improvements but every dollar has been paid.

Westfield Kirmess Plans.

The proceeds of the kirmess to be held at the Westfield Casino on the evenings of March 17, 18 and 19 and the afternoon of March 19, will be for the benefit of Westfield's leading charitable institution, the Children's well known Westfield people are in the cast, and the various pantomimes cast, and the various pantomimes, dances, marches and pictures will all be attractive.

The local council, Sr. O. U. A. M., will meet on Wednesday night to take action on the by-laws, and to receive applications for membership.

SPORTS HERE AND THERE

GOLF.

At the annual meeting of the Brooklyn Forest Park Golf Club Thursday night, J. A. Nicholls, I. McKenzie and J. W. Kent were elected to the board of governors. Nicholls and Kent were already on the board, but McKenzie succeeded Samuel Peace. Another meeting will be held next Tuesday, when the full board, which consists of twelve members, will elect officers and appoint committees for the season.

Quite a discussion took place at the meeting relative to the erection of a new clubhouse, but no definite decision was reached. A dinner at the old clubhouse followed Thursday night's meeting.

"Ring the bell." Another hole has been made in a single stroke. This time it happened at Van Cortlandt Park, where the enthusiastic duffers struggle whenever permitted. A modest individual stood on the sixth tee and looked downward. Far below him rested the green, a temporary affair, some two hundred yards away. He hit a straight one, and saw the ball trickle on toward the hole. Suddenly the caddie started to do a war dance, and one more member had joined the famous band of "oners." There is a penalty for making a hole in one. The "nineteenth" at Van Cortlandt is hard by No. 6 green.

According to Robert C. Watson, secretary of the United States Golf Association, who is also secretary of the new national golf course near Shinnecock Hills, Long Island, there is no truth in the rumor that Braid, Taylor and other prominent foreign professionals would be invited to formally open the links. Furthermore, Watson said it was doubtful if anything like an opening would be attempted before next fall.

Fred McLeod, national open champion in 1908, has been engaged to succeed Willie Anderson as professional at the St. Louis Country Club. Last week McLeod won the South Florida open championship tournament at Palm Beach, again supplanting Anderson.

TO RUN FOR SENATOR AS ANTI-STOKES MAN.

Bridgeton March 12.—"You can say for me that I propose to go before the Republicans of Cumberland county next fall as a candidate for the Republican nomination as State Senator, and you can add that I have no doubt of my ability to not only capture the nomination, but to win the election for the office," said Assemblyman Isaac P. Nichols yesterday.

"You can say, also, if you wish," continued Mr. Nichols, "that I will make my canvass for the nomination as a man opposed to Edward C. Stokes, either as a candidate for Governor or United States Senator, whichever office he may finally seek. If I am nominated I shall tell the people of Cumberland county during the campaign that I would rather be defeated than to cast a vote as a member of the Legislature for Mr. Stokes as a candidate for United States Senator."

"But suppose as a candidate for United States Senator Mr. Stokes is indorsed my a majority of the people of the State under the law permitting an expression of opinion in such a case," was suggested.

"I don't believe the people of New Jersey will vote to send Mr. Stokes to the United States Senate," exclaimed Mr. Nichols, and he added: "If I read the election returns rightly in Cumberland county last fall Mr. Stokes won't get the backing of his home folks. If his neighbors and old acquaintances in the community in which he has lived almost all of his life, and where he still holds his legal and voting residence, repudiate his further political ambitions and this they have done in an emphatic manner, I don't think he will stand well with strangers in other parts of the State."

A CURE FOR CANCER.

J. P. Morgan Said to Be Interested in Italian Discovery.

A special cable to The Chicago News from Rome says Professor Rampoldi, of the University of Pavia, asserts that he has discovered a cure for cancer and other malignant skin diseases and growths. His remedy consists of local applications with a special ointment made from the juice of a pod bearing Indian plant, resembling licorice, the native name of which is jaquerry. In bad cases when the ointment is insufficient, subcutaneous injections are used.

The discoverer says he has experimented successfully on hundreds of patients, but is unwilling to give the cure wide publicity until experiments on a large scale are completed. It is said that J. Piermont Morgan, who is there, is greatly interested in the discovery, and may contribute financial aid toward the continuation of the experiments.

Plain Field Notes and Queeries

By Druid

Already the sound of the Hunter's horn is heard in the land. The heralds are blowing their triumpets, the tin whistle brigade are tooting in Newspaper Row, and a thundering row it will be when Hero comes galloping home. How we thrilled when Bill was billed to bring us his Indian show! It was great in every way, but the Wild West will was tame despite its brilliant boss's Buffalo Billity when the mighty Pot Shot scatterer returns to exhibit his mammoth trophies from the Still Wilder East.

"Say, what went ye forth to see?"
"The glories of Nature in Afrikee."
"With what sweet thoughts your heart must thrill."
"O pshaw! I went for a jolly good kill."

* * *

Talking of the Wild West circus recalls a delicious hour in the company of a Wild Man of the Woolly West when this kind of show was new. His private entertainment surpassed the tented scenes in hair-raising power; he might have made a modest fortune if he had built a hall for bald-headed audiences who had tried all the advertised restorers in vain. One feels sprouts even at this distance of time when thinking of that glorious recital of adventures. This is how it shaped itself in the note book which records memorable interviews.

King o' the Cowboys am I!
Heroic and tough, but shy;
When I draw the long bow
You may bet it's just so,
For I can't tell a lie if I try.

Do you know how I got my long hair?
I just scalped the tail of my mare,
Stuck 'em in by the root,
Manured 'em with soot,
And they grew like wild oats, I swear.

When the buffaloes see me around,
They lay their backs flat on the ground
And say, "Come on, Bill,
Have a deelightful kill,
As it's you we won't make any sound."

I once shot a rattletail rat,
As big as a bullock and fat,
I landed him dead
As he leapt o'er my head;
I'd a narrow escape at that.

I was swimming across a small creek,
It took me more than a week,
One evening near dark
Out popped a great shark,
It popped back when it saw my cheek.

A thunderstorm burst from the sky,
My horse wouldn't shelter so I
Made a hole in his hide,
Crept right inside,
And ever since then I've been dry.

Once I got fifty shots in my breast,
They all dropped down in my chest,
When I sneeze they all rattle
And scare all the cattle—
But that's nothing to us in the West!

* * *

We noticed the giving of a reception in honour of a coloured cook the other day. A pretty turn of the table is just reported from somewhere unnamed (after the slovenly fashion of so much reporting in the Gothamite journals). Anna Grey had been employed in the family of the Rev. Thornton M. Niven for thirty-two years, and had saved $15,000 She died, and leaves $5,000 to members of the family, besides bequests of $1,000 each to these Presbyterian societies: For the relief of Destitue Ministers, for the Women's Foreign Mission Board, and for Home Missions work. Brethren and sistern, the text shows, firstly, that it pays to be kind to our masters and missisis; secondly, that it pays morally to be kinder to our servants, whether they work in the kitchen or pulpit; thirdly, that it sometimes pays in ready cash. Blessed thought!

* * *

A trifle, but worth a passing note. The Dramatic Mirror of this week uses as a headline, "Answers to 'Queer-ies'" quoting the split word, but not the Plainfield Press. This half way acknowledgment is, however, exceptionally magnanimous and deserves this tribute. Among queeries of this kind is this one, "Things to Think About," a heading this pen wrote offhand some dozen or more years ago over a weekly chat in a paper read only by one section of the public. By and by it appeared in the Chicago Journal or American then in a New York daily; for a few years the Sunday Tribune has used it, and now it has the honour of being adopted by the New York Evening Post for regular use. Thus may a modest bee, the Plainfield Press, make honey which its predatory neighbours delight to eat, without price or a condescending nod. And not honey headings only.

* * *

In the good old days which many good young folk believe never were, there was one distinctly good and useful custom which it would be well to revive. Churches had what were called Young Men's Mutual Improvement societies. Youths in their teens and men in their forties formed these weekly gatherings in one of the church rooms, and occasionally in a hall for the outer public, on the model of a debating society but not to encourage speaking so much as thinking. They were young fellows in the main who were now out of school and in the world, who scanned the daily paper not for "comic" or police or dress fashion stuff, but to get just enough general understanding of the subjects they heard discussed by men and women of intelligence, at table in the home, in their places of business, in public meetings of every kind, in the pulpit, in the cars, in the streets, and in their country walks. They wanted to keep up to date.

* * *

Officers and committees were chosen from all ages impartially. Topics were listed, all free to suggest one, and each week the subject for the next meeting was decided by the majority. A member was appointed to read a fifteen or twenty minutes essay on the subject, which would be, say, the national policy of the day in its larger aspect, not party politics; or the book of the hour, or a theological or ecclesiastical question, in fact no subject was excluded which opened up various points of view and the discussion of which would enlarge our own views and inspire us to do our own thinking. We found it easy to make fools of ourselves on any subject if we rashly trotted out our shallowness in our eagerness to "speak." But these blunders are the making of a sincere and plucky youngster. There is nothing to be ashamed of in honest failures.

* * *

Where young fellows grow up on this food it is noticeable that the general talk overheard in cars is of the solid questions which everyone simply must be able to converse upon with strangers if he pretends to be intelligent and wide awake. The habit makes for a stronger type of manhood than the talk which seems tied to faction politics, sports, jokes, styles, trials and childish twaddle.

Dry Cleaning Talk

Gentlemen's clothes cleaned by a Cleanery with the ability and equipments to produce first-class work, will stay clean longer, as when done by an ordinary suit presser who only brushes the surface dust off and removes the most prominent spots from the surface.

With our process the garments are thoroughly cleaned and disinfected, the linings are cleaned and spots that are removed will stay removed and do not appear again the first time the garments are exposed to the dust and grim of the street.

In the beginning it may cost a little more, but will pay at the end, as the clothes don't have to be at the cleaners every two weeks.

Phone us and our wagon will call.

Re-printed from The Weekly Constitutionalist

November 23, 1871.

We acknowledge the receipt of a huge bundle of wedding cake, from our worthy friend and landlord, A. Vanderbeek, Esq., his charming daughter having been united in the holy bonds of matrimony to our esteemed young townsman, John J. Shotwell, today (Wednesday). We trust that their wedded life may be one of unalloyed bliss, and the pathway of their declining years be made smooth by the loving hands of a numerous family.

Telegraphic.

November, 22, 1871.

Messrs. Force Bros.:

In the great boat race for the championship of the Tyne, England, the Taylor crew won, beating the Renforth crew by three lengths.

R. & S.

Trenton is infested with resurrectionists. The grave of a Mr. Harrington, who was killed in a paper mill, at Easton, Pa., some months since, was broken open during the severe storm of Tuesday night last, but the remains were not disturbed, the desecraters undoubtedly being frightened away before completing their operations.

Shotwell—Vanderbeek. In this city Wednesday, November 22, at the residence of the bride's parents, by the Rev. D. J. Yerkes, D D., Mr. John J. Shotwell to Miss Bella W. Vanderbeek. No cards.

All persons who have not as yet laid in their corn and cornstalks should attend the sale on Friday at 3 o'clock, opposite the "Old Halfway House," near Dunellen, when 500 shocks of corn will be sold.

We learn that Mr. George Force, presented private watchman Schuney with a handsome present in acknowledgement of his services rendered in extinguishing the fire found in the rear of Mr. Force's store Sunday morning.

Decmeber 7, 1871.

In the First National Bank, of this city is suspended a life-size portrait of Zachariah Webster, Esq., lately deceased. It is an accurate likeness, and is the work of an Elizabeth gentleman.

We learn that the Central Railroad Company propose erecting a depot and making a new station at Cornell's crossing, between this city and Dunellen to be completed by spring. This station will be the means of enhancing property in that section of the city. We wish we could chronicle the prospect of a new depot being erected at this city.

December 14, 1871.

We are glad to announce that our worthy friend and fellow townsman, John VanWinkle, Esq., who for some weeks past has been confined to a sick bed, is out and attending to his regular business.

The attention of our readers is called to the advertisement of Shotwell & Staats, grocers, in another column. S. & S. have done exceedingly well, having established their business but a year ago, they have now as fine a trade as any of our grocers can boast of. Their stock is of the best, and they always have a full assortment of everything in their line. Call and see them.

December 21, 1871.

We understand that Mr. John Tire is confined to his house with severe illness.

We learn that Mr. George Vermuele, whose residence on Second stret, was badly damaged by fire at the time his carpenter shop was burned November 7th, is about to erect a handsome and substantial residence in its stead. His carpenter shop will be built in another locality. He does not believe in having his house burn again if he should unfortunately ever again have his shop burned.

We note the arrival in our city of our young friend, Wm. Corey, from Prescott, Arizona Territory.

Tape Measure Cases.

Never have tape measures been offered in greater variety or in more attractive cass than now. As a result the wise woman is making a selection and putting these trifles away for Christmas gifts One may find the line tape measures coiled in gilt cases representing a cat, an owl, a watering pot, a lighthouse, a bird cage, a piano and a slipper.

A Chicken Suggestion.

Fricasseed chicken, or chicken to be used as salad, is much better if cooked a day before it is to be served. Let the meat remain in the liquor until ready to use. The chicken will absorb much of the flavor of the juice and will be that much tastier.

Isaac Hoffman, of New Germantown, has been visiting relatives here.

Breaking the Fast in Ramazan.

The Arabs say Ramadan; the Persians and Turks say Ramazan. They all observe throughout the month a species of fast that has no precise counterpart in the west. So long as the sun is in the sky food or drink of any kind may not pass the true believer's lips. He is not even allowed the sweet solace of a cigarette. But from the firing of the sunset guns until it is light enough to distinguish a black hair from a white he may feast to surfeiting. Watchmen will patrol the streets with drums to warn him that his moments of grace are numbered, and cannon once more announce their end.

Nothing is more characteristic of late afternoons in Ramazan than the preparations for the evening meal which preoccupy all Moslems, particularly those who work with their hands. As the sun nears the horizon fires are lighted, tables are spread, bread is broken, water is poured out, cigarettes are rolled, and hands are lifted halfway to the mouth in expectation of the signal that gives liberty to eat. This breaking of the daytime fast is called iftar and is an institution in itself. To be invited to iftar is a particular mark of friendship.—Scribner's Magazine.

Skeleton in the Closet.

The original of the singular saying "A skeleton in the closet," which is found in almost every language in Europe, is found in one of those curious collections of stories that have come down from the middle ages. In one of these collections, compiled by an unknown hand about the middle of the tenth century, there is a story of a wealthy lady who, having a secret grief, confided it to a friend who was apparently a perfectly happy woman. She was the wife of a nobleman who lived in his castle in the south of France. She and her husband were outwardly on the most loving terms. Not a care cloud seemed to cast a shadow on her path.

After hearing the story of her afflicted friend the noble lady took her by the hand and led her to a secret chamber adjoining her bedroom, there opened the door of a closet and exposed a skeleton. "Know, my friend," she said, "no one is happy. Every day I am forced by my husband to kiss this grinning death head, which is that of a gentleman who was my husband's rival and whom I would have married had not my parents willed otherwise."

The End of the Ride.

Coming out of one of the large department stores two well dressed women saw a group of street urchins gazing at their automobile, and one little girl was heard to say, "Wish I could have a ride in it." The women smiled, and then the child was asked if she would really like a ride and was helped into the machine after assuring the women that she would not be missed at home. Her companions set up a cheer as the machine started, and some of them were still on the spot when it returned half an hour later, bringing back the little girl. The women congratulated themselves on having given the little one an extraordinary treat, but were disenchanted when she told them that her father was a chauffeur and that she liked his machine "a great deal better."—New York Tribune.

A Compliment to the Minister.

In Albert Dawson's work, "Joseph Parker—His Life and Ministry," there are some anecdotes of the famous minister of the City temple. We are told that what Dr. Parker regarded as, in its own peculiar way, the best compliment he ever received came from an omnibus conductor. The vehicle was crossing Holborn viaduct, and when it came to the City temple a passenger alighted.

"That's the man, and that's the place," said the conductor, indicating Dr. Parker's church. "I went there once, and I enjoyed myself so much that I'm going again the first night off I have. We laughed, and we cried, and we had a rare time. You see," the conductor continued, "he doesn't make religion so —— serious."

Seeds Planted in Eggshells.

Fill half an eggshell with good rich earth, stick in a seed or two, stand the shell up in a box of earth, keep it warm and moist, and then, when you think you can trust the weather out of doors and the seeds have sprouted, you knock the shell off and put the little ball of earth into Mother Earth, and there you are. Not a root has been disturbed, and if you choose a favorable time for transplanting there will not be a wilted leaf to retard the growing of the plant.

Painted Lips.

The "Personal Recollections of Sutherland Edwards," English music critic, records that after the peace of 1815 it used to be the rule for every hussar to wear a black mustache, and those who had neither a black mustache nor a fair one which they could dye were required to paint the semblance of a black mustache on their upper lip.

The Quick Witted Sharp.

Mrs. Sharp—So you told Mr. Jones you wished you was single once more, did you? Sharp (with quick wit)—Only that I might have the happiness of marrying you over again, darling.—Boston Transcript.

Domestic Bliss.

Madame—I don't know where our son gets all his faults from. I'm sure he doesn't get them from me. Monsieur—No, you're right there; you haven't lost any of yours.

Trust men and they will be true to you. Treat them greatly and they will show themselves great.—Emerson.

TRAVELERS' TALES.

The Blunders In Books That Describe Foreign Countries.

A lively article on the amusing mistakes to be found in books appears in the London Academy. The author in referring to the blunders often made in books that describe foreign countries notes that a traveler's ignorance of the manners and customs of strange peoples or deliberate imposition by his informants are both supposed to have given a somewhat fabulous character to some parts of the writings of Herodotus. He quotes these lines, which he found written on his desk when he was attending lectures at Oxford:

Herodotus, Herodotus,
You could not spell, you ancient cuss
The priests in Egypt gammoned you,
It was not very hard to do
But don't you think you'll gammon us,
Herodotus, Herodotus.

The author adds: "The second line is presumably a reference to the spelling of Ionic Greek. What follows alludes to the story of the Nile issuing from between the mountains Crophi and Mophi, which certainly sounds like a nursery tale. In justice, however, to the historian we must remember that recent investigations have discovered that many of his narratives once regarded as mythical have been found to have some foundation in fact.

"This is more than can be said of most mediaeval travelers' tales. Some, however, admit of explanation, as, for instance, Othello's account of 'men whose heads do grow beneath their shoulders.' Raleigh is convinced that the wonder 'is true, because every child in the provinces of Arromaia and Canuri affirms the same.' The origin of the belief in such prodigies has been found in the account given by Olearius of the Samojeds of northern Muscovy, whose 'garments are made like those that are called cosaques, open only at the necks. When the cold is extraordinary they put their cosaques over their heads and let the sleeves hang down, their faces being not to be seen but at the cleft which is at the neck. Whence some have taken occasion to write that in these northern countries there are people without heads, having their faces in their breasts.'"

FREAK CATALOGUING.

British Museum Has a System That Few Can Fathom.

It may seem ungrateful in an old reader who has reaped so many benefits from the great library in Bloomsbury to find fault with the arrangements, and if I stood alone in this complaint I would retain my isolation, but the grievance is ventilated by many.

In the first place, I and J are treated as the same letter, as U and V are. That was all right when the catalogue was begun and was in manuscript, but now that printing has superseded handwriting the obsolete fashion of cataloguing Jones and Ives under the same letter or Vale and Unwin as having the same initial might be discontinued and the modern usage adopted.

In the second place, anonymous works are catalogued according to a bewildering system, the object of which seems to be to hide the identity of the work.

Take the case of the valuable little book with the following title: "An Account of the Origin of Steamboats, in Spain, Great Britain and America and of Their Introduction and Employment Upon the River Thames Between Loudon and Gravesend to the Present Time"—i. e., 1831. One would think that it would be catalogued under "Steamboats," that being the main subject, but no—it is catalogued under "Spain." I am told the rule is to take the first proper name.

That rule, however, is not applied in the next case. A well written little book published in 1907 is entitled "Devon, the Shire of the Sea Kings." "Devon" would seem to be the natural heading, but no—in the catalogue it will be found under "Great Western Railway."—London Notes and Queries.

Broke the Combination.

The father of Judge W. H. Wadhams had a chicken coop and a dog and a stable hand. It began to look to Mr. Wadhams as though some one had discovered the combination. So he kept the coop and the stable hand, but he got a new dog. Next day the bent old negro who groomed the Wadhams horses came to him.

"You los' you affection foh me, boss?" he asked.

"No, Scipio," said Mr. Wadhams. "I like you as well as ever."

"Then," asked Scipio peevishly, "w'yn't you tie old Rover in de chicken coop stid of dat new dorg?"—Argonaut.

Psalms Not Barred.

The other evening Miss Y., a maiden lady of uncertain years, suspecting the cook was entertaining her beau downstairs, called Martha and inquired whether she did not hear some one talking with her.

"Oh, no, ma'am!" cried the quick witted Martha. "It was only me singing a psalm."

"Very good," returned Miss Y. significantly. "You may amuse yourself with psalms, but let's have no hims."

The Bland One.

Lady—What! You've just come out of prison! I wonder you are not ashamed to own it! Ne'er-do-well—I don't own it, lady—wish I did. I was only a lodger.—New York Journal.

Lively Lazaruses.

Startled Visitor—Gracious! What's that? Must be an earthquake! The plaster is falling too! Mild Mater—Oh, no! It's just the boys. Two of them are sick in bed today.—Puck.

"No, she's dead these two years, thank God. I never loved her. It was a boyish infatuation for a designing adventuress who wanted a hold upon my father's money. I am free, free to make her my wife. I ask her, I beg her to take me, to give me a chance to show that I feel what I have done, to devote my life to expiation."

He stopped, wiped the moisture from his forehead, stood for a moment in the silence that followed his words, his face downcast. Then he lifted it haggard, worn, sad, the humiliation of the last few moments having entered into his soul.

"Kate," he said, softly; "your answer!"

CHAPTER XVII.

The Woman's Plea.

"Miss Brenton," said Whittaker, with the deepest gravity he could infuse in voice and manner, "you have been a most unfortunate, a most unhappy woman. Allow me to assure you of my sincerest commiseration, my deepest respect, my most profound admiration. You have suffered, but innocently. If I may speak the voice of society, if I may stand for the world as your companion has said, I can only express my reverence for you and my homage to you in this way."

He stepped nearer to her, he seized her hand. He was an old-fashioned, humble-minded, quixotic sort of a sailor, if you will, for before anybody realized what he was about, he bent his head low over it and kissed it. And the sailors behind him and the marines in rank broke into a hearty cheer.

"There, madam," said Whittaker, "you have the approbation of society for my act. As for you, sir," he turned toward Langford, "I should be untrue to manhood if I did not say what you yourself have said; that you acted not only like a brute and a coward, but, sir, when I look at the lady, I am constrained to add like a fool."

Langford started forward, but the lieutenant checked him.

"Having said all that, I must admit that you have conducted yourself since that time as a man of honor and as a gentleman. I have no doubt that your offer will be accepted; that the world will forgive you as it will admire and respect your wife."

"No!" cried the man of the island, suddenly.

He had kept silence, resolved to hear it all out without interruption. He had suffered as the miserable story had been unfolded to such an extent that all that he had gone through with before seemed like child's play. He had heard Langford's noble confession, his generous offer to repair his wrong, but without the appreciation of it which the circumstances and its intrinsic quality might have evoked. He had heard the woman's defense, her splendid justification of her course, the bitter repentance that had followed it, but without that appreciation of what justification there was for her and the value of her remorse which the account should have brought to him. He had observed Whittaker's prompt and touching expression of confidence and reverence, but without understanding its force and power. Indeed, he had instinctive shrewdness enough to realize that even though the sailors, touched by the act of gallantry and moved with pity for the young woman who stood there lovely in her sadness, had cheered, yet the world would be very slow to the same expression. He saw that the woman was face to face with a crisis: that she would either have to accept or decline Langford's offer to marry her at once.

His heart was filled with bitter rage. He knew that he loved the woman; that he never would love any person but the woman, but nevertheless the resentment against fate which had placed him in so awful a position, of whose malign purposes he had been the blind, ignoble victim, was so great that for the time being his love was in abeyance. He pitied himself, he loathed Langford, he was contemptuously indifferent to the world, and for the moment he almost hated the woman. The sub-consciousness that he had that this was as ungrateful as it was unwarranted added to his wretchedness and misery.

"No," he cried, "before any answer is made, let me speak!"

"Your pardon," said Whittaker, "may I ask who you are?"

"Sir," returned the man, "as to who I am and what I am, I do not know, nor does it greatly matter."

"Your pardon again," retorted the lieutenant commander, coolly, "but it matters very much. Unless you have some right to interfere, I do not concede that any suggestion from you in this crisis which seems to concern these two people, this lady and this gentleman, is at all in order."

"But it does concern me," returned the man, impatient of this checking, "for I love this woman myself, and she has done me the honor to say that she loved me. I had intended to make her my wife should Providence ever bring us to civilization again."

"Had intended!" exclaimed the woman, under her breath, but no one noticed her words, and the lieutenant spoke again.

"That being the case, some information as to who you are and how you came here is the more evidently in order."

"I can answer that," said the woman. "When I landed on this island, I found this man here. He had been here a long time. I believe he had been cast away here as a child and had grown up alone. He had no speech or language. He had no memory of the past. His mind was a blank. I was glad to find him here. He gave me occupation, companionship. I had been well educated. I determined to teach him. I knew that his ignorance was the result of his environment. I believed him to be naturally acute. I found my beliefs warranted. I taught him all that I could of life and letters from memory. For three years my sole and only occupation has been to teach him what I knew. No preceptor ever had apter or more docile pupil."

"No learner ever sat at the feet of such a teacher," cried the man, touched by the recollection. "Think, men, all that I knew was a childish babble of prayers which had remained in my memory. I was ignorant of everything, even that I myself existed; that there was any difference between me and the palm tree or yonder bird; that man was made in the image of his God; that there was such a thing as a woman upon earth. I had no ideas of honor or honesty, or purity, or sweetness, or truth, or life, or God, until she taught me. I believed in her as I believed in God, and I loved her as I love sunlight and fresh air and the sweet wind. I loved her, as I learned to love under her teaching, goodness and truth and every virtue. And to think, to think, to think—" he threw up his hands in a wild gesture—"that it has come to this."

"And he taught me something, Mr. Whittaker," said the woman. "He gave me back my faith in manhood which you—" she swept Langford with a bitter glance—"had destroyed. He gave me back, I think, my faith in God. He taught me many things. And when two days ago an earthquake buried me within the cave I call my home, and he tore the rocks asunder and freed me and caught me in his arms, I knew that he had taught me what love was, and as he confessed before you all that he loved me, that he did love me, I will confess the same, and say that I at least have not changed in this hour."

"Kate, Kate!" cried Langford, "for God's sake, think of what you say and do!"

"Sir," said Whittaker, turning to the man of the island, "you are a very fortunate man."

"Of all on earth," was the bitter answer, "I cannot think there are any more miserable than I."

"Did you learn nothing of his past, Miss Brenton?" asked Whittaker, uncomfortably, unable to answer this strange yet natural assertion. "Could the man remember nothing?"

"I learned a great deal," returned the woman. "In the cave which he had made his home and which he has since yielded up to me—"

"Where is this cave?"

"On the other side of the island. You shall see it presently. I found a Bible. There was a date in it some 30 years back and a name in it."

"What is the name?"

"John Ravell Charnock."

"Of Virginia?" asked Whittaker, eagerly.

"I think so, although there was nothing but the name and the date in the Bible."

"I know Charnocks in Virginia. They come from Nansemond county."

"It is a further confirmation," said the woman. "With the Bible there was a little silver box containing a flint and steel by means of which—" she turned to Langford—"we lighted that beacon which brought you here this morning."

"It was my own eye caught the signal," answered Langford.

"Would God I had died ere I gave it up to her!" interposed the man.

"I insisted upon it. So soon as I realized this man loved me, I told him I had a story to tell. I knew it would bring sadness to his heart. I wanted him to hear the voice of the world in comment upon my relation, and I knew he would find it on yonder ship."

"I was happy," said the man, "to go on as we were. I should not have lighted that fire."

"Pray continue with your story, Miss Brenton," said the lieutenant commander. "I am deeply interested in it. There is a great Charnock estate in Virginia which has been held for 30 years or more by the last survivor of the ancient family. And I remember some romantic story connected with it, too."

"The silver box that inclosed the flint and steel," continued the woman, "was marked 'J. R. C.' Exploring the island I came upon the remains of a boat, and any of you may examine it. Near the boat in yonder coppice there were two skeletons, one of a woman and the other of a dog. I excavated the boat, found that it had belonged to the ship Nansemond of Virginia. I have the stern pieces with the name painted on it in my cave. I put the skeletons of the dog and the woman in the boat and filled it up again with sand. There they lie waiting Christian burial. The place where they had died, the woman and her dog, I carefully inspected. Everything but metal, and most of that, had rusted away, but I found two rings." She stretched forth her hand. "They are here." She stripped them off. "One of them is a wedding ring. You see it is marked." She read the markings off, "J. R. C. to M. P. T. September 10, 1869. II. Cor. xii, 15. The verse of Scripture to which reference is made is 'I will very gladly spend and be spent for you, though the more abundantly I love you, the less I be loved.' There was a piece of silver, also, which had evidently been part of a dog's collar. It, too, was marked: 'John Revell Charnock—His Dog, July 22-1875.' And that was all."

"Do you remember nothing of your early life, nothing whatever, sir?" asked Whittaker, turning to the man.

"I have a dim recollection of some sort of a sea happening, of a long voyage with a woman and some kind of an animal in an open boat, of horrible sufferings, of a few words of prayer; that is all."

"I think that this man, then a child," resumed the woman, "and his mother must in some way have been involved in a shipwreck, and that she and her son and a dog must have been cast away on this island; that the woman died and the child survived. There is nothing here that would in any way harm him and his life and growth under such circumstances and conditions are quite possible. He had probably seen his mother read that Bible. He carried it with him, put it in that cave and forgot it with the flint and steel in the silver box of which he would have no knowledge and which he could not use. The dog probably lived some time and when he died crawled back to where his mistress lay and gave up his life at her feet. And therefore I believe this man's name to be John Revell Charnock; that he is an American, and that he came from Virginia. I know him to be a Christian and a gentleman. In all the days that we have been together on this island he has done me no wrong. He has been gentleness, kindness, docility itself, and despite ourselves we have learned to love each other. Until yesterday we did not know it. Now it is for him to say what we will do."

"Kate, Kate," cried Langford, "you cannot let this untutored savage—"

"Not that," said the woman, "for I have taught him all I know and all I believe."

"You cannot let him decide this question," continued the man, passing over her interruption.

"Yes," said the woman, "he must decide, but whatever he decides, whatever the relationship between this man and this woman is to be, I can never be anything on earth to you."

"Don't say that," said Whittaker. "Think, my dear lady, what you do, what this man offers you, the position in which—God forgive me!—you stand."

"Sir," said the woman, addressing the lieutenant commander, "this man wronged me grievously, terribly. He deceived me. He broke my heart. He killed ambition, aspiration and respect for my own kind within my soul. I know him through and through. The fact that he failed quickened his passion; the fact that men say I am beautiful made him the more eager; the fact that he was away and that he could not lay his hands upon me made him the more insistent; the fact that I had flaunted him and said him nay and struck him down made him the more determined."

"Kate, Kate, you wrong me. Before God you wrong me!" interrupted Langford.

"And indeed, madam, I believe you do," commented Whittaker.

"Let her speak on," said the man of the island.

"It may be that you are right," continued the woman. "It may be that he is higher, nobler, truer than I have fancied. I should be glad to be able to think so. I am willing to take your view of it, his assertion of it, but I do not love him. Should I marry him, I would bring to him a heart, a soul, a body that turns to some one else. He could never be anything to me. As I am a Christian woman, a lover of my God and a follower of his Son, I cannot see but that I would be adding one wrong to another to come to this man in compliance with any suggestion of the world, following any dictate of society, subservient to any convention. I cannot see but that I would be doing as great or a greater wrong than I did before in flaunting all of these forces. I have learned what love is and what marriage should be. I will not give my hand and yield up my person where I cannot yield my heart. And there is no expiation or reparation that requires it of me, no voice that can coerce me into it. I will not marry you, Valentine Langford. I will accept your expressions as evidenced by your words, by your presence here, as testimony to your regret. Indeed, I realize that your confession was itself a great humiliation to a man like you. And perhaps I have spoken harshly of it. But the bare fact remains, I do not love you, I could not love you, I don't even want to love you. My heart, my soul goes to this man," she turned to her companion of the island, "whom up to to-day I have made and fashioned and taught and trained until these hours when he has broken away from me. I love this man who stands silent, who thinks of me as a thing spotted, polluted, damned. Him I love, though he slay me, yet will I love him. Him I trust, though he disobey me, yet will I love him. Him I will serve, though he cast me off, yet will I love him. And with this in my heart in which I glory and which I confess as openly and with as little hesitation as you confessed your shame, I give you my final, absolute, utterly irrevocable decision. I will not marry you. I will not go back with you. No, not for anything that you can proffer, nor for any reason that you can urge, will I come to you when in my soul I belong to another. There may be no end to this but my despair. This man may cast me off. This man may trample me under foot

"No Christian Ever Believed in His God as I Believed in Her."

The spots upon my soul may loom larger in his view and hide what else is there. I know I have been forgiven by God. I will not be forgiven by men, but I tell you here and now, again and again, that I will not be your wife. I will be his wife or no man's."

Langford turned away and hid his face in his hands. Whittaker stepped forward and laid his hand upon the shoulder of the man of the island. He shook him for a moment.

"You stand immobile," he cried, sharply, "after such a confession as that, after such an appeal? What have you to say, man? You ought to get down on your knees and thank God for the love of such a woman."

"Aye, aye," burst out the deep tones of the old coxswain of the cutter. "So say all of us."

"God help me," cried the man, lifting his hand and releasing his shoulder from the grasp of the officer, "I did love this woman. Think how it was, think how I believed in her. No Christian ever believed in his god as I believed in her. She told me what purity was, what innocence was, what sweetness was, what light was, what truth was, and I looked at her and saw them."

"And you can look at her and see them now," cried the officer.

"No," said the man, "I can never look at her and see her the same."

"Oh, Man! Man!" cried the woman.

The test was upon him. He was failing. Her sorrow, her grief were more for him than for herself.

"Don't mistake me," said the man. "I can't help loving you, whatever you are. If you had been as guilty as, when he began to speak and when you corroborated him, I fancied that you were, I should have loved you just the same and I should have married you, and I shall marry you. This . . . this awful thing has come between us, but we will try in some way to live it down, to forget it, to go on as we were."

He stepped toward the woman.

She drew herself up to her full height and looked him unflinchingly in the face.

"No," she said, "we are not going on as we thought. We will not marry and live together. We will not bury this wretched happening in the past in any oblivion. I will marry no man, although he may have my whole heart, who is not proud and glad to take me, who does not realize that I am as pure and as innocent of wrong and shame as he would fain think his mother, as he would absolutely know his wife must be. I told you that your manhood must be put to the test. I told you that your love must be tried by fire. What I loved in you was the assurance that you would survive the test, that you would triumph in the trial. It is not I that have been before the great judge this morning, but you, and you have failed."

"Kate," said Langford, "he casts you off; take me. I swear to you that were I in his place, I would not have hesitated a moment."

"I respect you more than ever," said the woman; "but I don't love you and I cannot, I will not take you!"

"Charnock," said Whittaker, "if that's your name, permit me to say here, saving the lady's presence, that you are behaving like a damned fool."

The man looked at him dumbly, uncomprehendingly, and made no reply. It was the woman who spoke, coldly, impartially. She had seemingly dismissed the whole affair, though at what a cost to herself no one could know.

"Sir," she said, "is there anyone on your ship empowered to administer an oath?"

"I have that power," answered the lieutenant-commander. "Why do you ask?"

"I wish you would bring some of your officers here with paper and ink. I wish to make a deposition as to the facts that I have learned concerning this man which may be of service to him in establishing his identity and discovering his history when he returns to the United States."

"But are you not going back with us, Miss Brenton?" asked the officer in amazement. "We are sailing for Honolulu and thence for San Francisco as directly as we can go."

"No," said the girl, "I will not leave the island. You can take my friend here."

"The Southern Cross," said Langford, "is at your disposal, Kate."

"I have had one voyage upon her," said the woman bitterly. "I want never to see her again."

"Woman," said the man of the island suddenly, "if you stay here, I stay here. Without you I will not go."

"Not so," said the woman scornfully. "I would not be upon the same island alone with you again. You have failed me."

MORRISTOWN NO MATCH FOR THE P.H.S. GIRLS

The Plainfield High School girls' basketball team defeated the girls' team form the Morristown High School, at Morristown yesterday afternoon by a score of 28 to 1. It was a clean sweep for the Plainfield girls and in consequence all were jubilant. The defeat of Marristown was almost entirely due to the inexperience of the players, although they did the best they could to win out.

The shooting of the home team was poor, while Plainfield played a strong and steady game, the former making twenty-two points. Miss Helen Woolley put up a fast game at guard, breaking up her opponents' shots. There were very few fouls called.

At the end of the first half the score stood 12 to 1. All through the second half P. H. S. had everything its own way.

Annoyed a Blind Man.

Louis Sprague and Frank Smith, two young boys residents of the East End, received a lecture at the hands of Judge William Runyon this morning for tormenting Percy Cannon, the blind storekeeper of East Second street. They defaced some of Mr. Cannon's advertising signs and cut up generally about the place. The boys apologized to Mr. Cannon and promised to behave in the future as well as to help Mr. Cannon in keeping order in the store. Mr. Cannon did not want the boys punished, but he does want the protection he needs. This was promised to him by the Judge. Henry Chatel and Robert Cartwright were witnesses for Mr. Cannon.

Senator Ackerman Ill.

State Senator Ernest R. Ackerman, leaer of the Upper House of the State Legislature, is suffering from a nervous break-down, and doubtless will be obliged to absent himself from Trenton temporarily. Just how serious Senator Ackerman's illness is cannot be learned.

HERE AND THERE.

This is the tale of a cat, but not the tail nor has it any reference to a recent trial in New York in which a feline was a central figure. This has to do with the pretty angora which lives in a house adjoining the First Presbyterian church on East Front street. Tabby went exploring yesterday afternoon and it is not certain whether she was trying to emulate Dr. Frederick Cook or Commander Robert E. Peary, but in any case she was on the ice Tier's pond was the scene of the almost tragedy and a plank and two women and considerable coaxing were the elements contributing to pussy's safe landing shore after fighting her way almost half way across the dreary waste. Whether Pussy had had dreams of glory or whether she was just hunting mice on the opposite shore will never be known, as she cannot explain the trip herself, but she will always be remembered as the most courageous feline that ever lived near the church mentioned.

Coming down to actual facts, one of a pair of valuable Angoras, belonging to the Underwood family started across the thin ice on Tier's pond yesterday afternoon and had not gone very far when she was floundering about in the icy water. The animal tried hard to get a foot hold on the ice but it was too thin to bear her weight. Her strength was fast ebbing when her pitiful meouws for help where heard by the two women mentioned who pushed a plank out to the nearly exhausted feline. She just managed to crawl onto the plank where she lay exhausted while her rescuers gently pulled the plank to shore.

Pussy was taken to the kitchen and thawed out and dried and as far as is known today is suffering no ill effects from her immersion.

COW DIES, SOLD FOR MEAT; TWO MEN FINED.

Ferillo admitted selling the cascass. He professed to see nothing wrong in the action. Garluchi admitted buying the carcass, but swore that he had been told that the cow had been slaughtered for beef.

Ferillo was fined $50 for keeping cows within the city limits and $25 for removing a carcass without a permit. Garluchi was fined $30 for offering diseased meat for sale and $25 for assisting in removing a dead animal without a permit. The Recorder expressed regret that he could not make the punishment heavier.

Young Inventor Goes Insane.

Washington, N. J., March 12.—Harvey Duckworth, only twenty-two years old, went insane yesterday and was taken to the State Hospital for the Insane at Morris Plains. He had spent years in the study of railroad matters, and air brakes in particular.

The Watchungs Won.

The Watchung bowling team of this city wound up its schedule in the New Jersey National tourney on the Tuxedo alleys at Newark last night by losing two games. BISHOP SPELLMEYER DEAD

Suddenly Passes Away on Saturday Morning After a Few Hours' Illness.

WAS BISHOP SINCE 1904.

Presided at Conference in This City Two Years Ago—Funeral to Be Held on Wednesday.

The news of the sudden death of Bishop Spellmeyer, of Newark, at Atlantic City, where he was presiding at the annual conference of the New Jersey District M. E. church, shocked many of the bishop's friends in this city. Bishop Spellmeyer was taken suddenly ill on Friday afternoon, but it was not thought serious at the time. He was found dead on Saturday morning by a maid who went to call him. When the conference, which had just resumed the session, was notified of the bishop's death it was immediately adjourned.

Bishop Spellmeyer presided at the conference held in the First Methodist church, of this city, two years ago and the pastor, Rev. Dr. Charles M. Anderson, was presiding elder. Dr. Anderson was intimately associated with Bishop Spellmeyer having been a member of the bishop's cabinet during the conference.

Dr. Anderson said this morning that Bishop Spellmeyer was one of the most lovable of men and had won the love of all the members of the conference by his thoroughly good and wholesome character. Dr. Spellmeyer was elevated to the bishopric at Los Angeles, California, in 1904.

The funeral, which will be attended by all the bishops now at Atlantic City, will be held on Wednesday afternoon at 2 o'clock in the Centenary M. E. church at Newark. Bishop Neeley, of New Orleans, will preside at the funeral services assisted by the following special committee: Rev. Dr. John Handley, of New Brunswick; Rev. Dr. N. J. Wright, of Bridgeton; Rev. Dr. S. M. Nichols, of Camden; Rev. Dr. Alfred Wagg, of Trenton; Rev. Dr. J. W. Marshall, of New Brunswick, and Rev. Dr. E. E. Snyder, of Atlantic City. The interment will take place in Elizabeth.

Bishop Neeley, of New Orleans, will preside over the remaining sessions of the conference.

He had been ill with the disease and suffered a partial paralysis of the legs for the past six months. Five months ago he went to Alma, New York, where it was thought the change would be beneficial. He did not improve and early in February returned to Plainfield and since that time had been at the home of Mrs. Jennie Vollmer, a nurse at 320 Somerset street.

DEFENDANT ON TRIAL CALLED A BIGAMIST

The domestic troubles of Mr. and Mrs. George Rennie were aired in the borough court this morning. The wife had her hubby arrested on a triple charge of drunkenness, wife beating and failure to properly support her and the children While the hearing was being conducted, John Cator, known as "Happy Jack," caused a ripple of excitement by interrupting the proceedings in shouting to Recorder Dolliver that "Rennie is a bigamist and has another wife living." Mrs. Rennie is Cator's niece. Recorder Dolliver admonished Cator to be silent.

After receiving a sharp lecture, Rennie promised to do better in the future, and he was released on probation. He will report at the Saturday night sessions of Chief Weiss' probation class for a period of six months.

POLICE COURT NOTES CULLED FROM BLOTTER

William J. Sanderson got ten days this morning from Judge Runyon for being drunk and unable to take care of himself on Saturday night on West Front street. He had the alternative of paying a fine of three dollars.

William Mullen, another drunk, was allowed to go on his promise to go to work and make something of himself. Judge Runyon has been lenient with Mullen on other occasions and this chance is given him to make good his promises of reform.

MONDAY MORNING IN THE BOROUGH COURT

Recorder Dolliver had his hands full in the borough court this morning in disposing of several cases, the borough treasury being enriched to the extent of two dollars. When the bill of Chief Weiss, for feeding the prisoners is presented, however, the day's results will show a deficit.

Charles Messler, a regular in the "D and D brigade," fell by the wayside on Saturday night. The frolic cost him $2.

Henry Rosenbaum, who was charged with peddling without a license, explained the situation satisfactorily to Recorder Dolliver. Sentence was suspended.

Frank Pinn, who pleaded not guilty last week to the charge of collecting junk without a license, retracted the pleas to one of guilty. As it was his first offense sentence was suspended.

Thomas Brennan, of Dunellen, loaded down with a good-sized jag, with a gallon jug of whiskey for ballast, was arrested on Saturday night. Sentence in Brennan's case was suspended.

PASTOR BROEK TELLS OF THE ANGELS IN HEAVEN

"Angels in Heaven," was the theme of an interesting discourse given by Rev. J. Y. Broek, at Trinity Reformed church, last night. It was the last in a series of sermons on "Heaven," and made a fitting close to these talks. The text was taken from Psalm 34:7: "The Angel of the Lord Encampeth Around About That Fear Him, and Delivereth Them." In part Mr. Broek said:

"We believe that there is a body of spirits called angels. We cannot tell when they were created, but we infer from Scripture that they were in existence before man and were witnesses to the creation. The appearance of angels is always represented as very glorious. They are clothed with perennial youth.

"Celebrated painters and most people imagine that angels have wings. We cannot find any authority for saying that the Bible teaches this fact. No mention of wings is related in the Bible. Two passages state that angels 'fly swiftly.' These passages simply imply that angels travel very rapidly.

"The number of angels must be very great. They are represented in Scripture as being 'thousand thousands, and ten thousand times ten thousand.' Jesus speaks of calling twelve legion of angels.

"Angels are the servants of God, who do errands of God. One of their duties is to take care of God's children. They are the instruments of good to God's people. It is a most blessed thought that whether we wake or sleep angels are continually watching and guarding us. Some maintain that there is a guardian angel for each believer We have often been puzzled how to account for good impulses which come to us. They may be the work of the attending angel who speaks to us and influences us for good.

"Angels are especially present in the house of prayer and they are our ministers at death. When the soul of the believer leaves the body to go to be with God, the angels take charge of it, and bear it away to God."

Miss Kelly Is Happy.

The story appearing in The Daily Press on Saturday telling how Miss Annette Kelly, of West Fourth street, lost her purse containing about twenty-two dollars and a commutation ticket, and then found a twenty dollar bill on Sixth avenue, New York, resulted in scores of expressions of regret among the friends of the young woman. Congratulations, however, are now in order. Miss Kelly's handbag, which contained her purse, was found in a department store and returned to her yesterday.

Sang at Trinity on Trial.

Mrs. Bayard Hawthorne, formerly of this city, but now of Dunellen, a contralto, sang on trial at Trinity Reformed church, last night, and made a favorable impression. She has a rich, mellow voice which harmonizes well with the other voices of the quartet. During the service she sang as an offertory, "O, Salutaris," and everyone was well pleased with her singing. Mrs. Hawthorne has been singing in the Presbyterian church, Cranford.

Dead Bishop Their Old Pastor.

Two Plainfielders, who were attendants and members of the Methodist church at Bloomfield, when Bishop Henry L. Spellmeyer was its pastor in the early 70's, are Mrs. I. P. Larue, of West Seventh street, and Mrs. M. E. Firstbrook, of Grant avenue.

SAVONAROLA EULOGIZED

Rev. Ernest O. Brown, of Dunellen, Tells of the Spanish Priest's Work.

STOOD FOR RIGHTEOUSNESS.

Clergy Arrayed Against Legislators Must Present Solid Front, Mr. Brown Says.

"The Church today needs more Gideons and Savonarolas to combat the forces of unrighteousness," declared the Rev. Ernest O. Brown in his sermon in the Presbyterian church at Dunellen last night. Mr. Brown took the life and character of Gideon as the theme for his discourse, and in the course of his remarks he made reference to the local option and open Sunday measures now before the Legislature.

In referring to the latter measure Mr. Brown said in part: "The church today is confronted with a big problem. There are people who are at work trying to destroy the Sabbath, the greatest of all American institutions. I was amazed on my visit to the State House at Trenton a couple of weeks ago to see on one side a large delegation of representatives of the churches advocating the cause of righteousness, and on the other side an equally large delegation of advocates representing the cause of unrighteousness.

"It is up to the church people to unite and present a solid front at all times and if we do that the cause of righteousness will always prevail.

"When one enters the Catholic church, one of the first heroes of that faith he becomes acquainted with is Savonarola, the Spanish priest of centuries ago. This great man was born in knighthood; when he was taken ill he consecrated himself to the church and promised his Maker that if his life was spared he would do all in his power to advance the cause of Christianity.

"Savonarola's life was spared and he kept his pledge. He made good by visiting the city of Florence and transforming it from a place of sin to a city of righteousness. Savonarola was a noble man, a true Christian, and the Church today needs more Savonarolas and Gideons."

FUNERAL SERVICES OF MRS. DANIEL C. DAVIS

The funeral of Mrs. Daniel C. Davis was held at 11 o'clock this morning from the First M. E. church, of which she was a member for many years. There was a large attendance of relatives and friends, including many members of the church who had known Mrs. Davis for years.

Rev. Dr. C. M. Anderson, pastor of the church, officiated and he spoke words of eulogy concerning the exemplary Christian life of Mrs. Davis; of her devotion to her home and family and her church. During the service a quartet comprising Miss Etta Raybert, soprano; Miss Grace Carroll, contralto; Elmer E. Runyon, tenor, and David E. Titsworth, sang "Lead, Kindly Light," "He Giveth His Beloved Sleep," and "Crossing the Bar."

There were many beautiful floral tributes from relatives and friends; also from the women's societies of the church with which Mrs. Davis was identified and a tribute from the employes of the Plainfield Trust Company, where Mr. Davis is a bookkeepr. The burial was in the Methodist cemetery, and the pallbearers were: George R. Cornwell, Calvin H. Rugg, John Cory, George M. Rittenhouse and Oscar S. Teale, the last named a former resident here, but now of Newark.

Township School Election.

The annual school election in North Plainfield township will be held at the Watchung schoolhouse tomorrow night. Three new members will be elected and a $3,500 budget voted on. The outgoing members are Francis E. Bodin, John Fox and John Clark. Mr. Clark is not a candidate for re-election as he has removed from the township. Messrs. Bodin and Fox will probably be re-elected and Justice George Hughes selected as the third member.

Local Soloist in Concert.

Miss Anna L. Case, soprano, and Miss Grace Carroll, contralto, the latter of this city, will be among the soloists at the concert to be given at Bound Brook on either April 15 or 22, by the Choral Society of that place. The society will sing the "Rose Maiden."

Adjutant-General Sadler has received word to that effect.

All branches of the regular army will be represented in the encampment, including cavalry, infantry, artillery, engineers, signal corps and hospital corps. Brigadier-General Dennis F. Collins will be in command of the two New Jersey regiments. Colonel John A. Mather, of Camden, will have charge of the Third Regiment and Colonel Nelson Y. Dungan, of Somerville, will lead the Second Regiment. It is expected that the National Guard of Pennsylvania, Maryland and Virginia will also be represented.

MISS BLOODGOOD'S BODY WAS FOUND IN A LAKE

The finding of the body of Miss Helen Bloodgood in Lake Carasaljo, Lakewood on Saturday came as a great shock to the friends of the young woman in this city. Up until the time of the finding of the corpse the family had been hoping against hope that Miss Bloodgood had been sheltered by some kindly farmer's wife and that she would soon be found She was the granddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. George W. Van Boskerck, of West Seventh street, and had many warm friends here.

The long search and suspense have resulted in the prostration of Mrs. Bloodgood and it is said she is on the verge of nervous collapse. The body was found by Herbert Doughty and William Rendel, who had been dragging the lake for hours. The two men believed that the bloodhounds who had traced the scent to the borders of the lake and then lost it had solved the problem of the disappearance of Miss Bloodgood. This theory proved correct. The funeral will be private.

COMPANY K'S FAIR NETTED OVER $500.

Company K's fair and bazaar came to a close Saturday night in a blaze of glory and with the largest attendance that ever gathered in the armory. It is estimated that over 800 people were in the hall at 10 o'clock. In fact the crowd made dancing rather uncomfortable in the early part of the evening.

From a financial standpoint the fair was the most successful in the company's history, more than five hundred dollars being added to the treasury.

One of the things demonstrated by this fair is the absolute need of an armory in this city where the company will have ample room for its various functions. Social life is one of the very necessary adjuncts of a military organization such as we have here, so the men say, and for lack of conveniences there is likely to be a diminution rather than an increase in the interests of the organization. Every member of Company K would like to see a building of suitable proportions erected for their use.

JOHN BECKER'S WILL HAS BEEN PROBATED.

Surrogate DuMond, of the Somerset County Court, at Somerville on Saturday admitted to probate the will of the late John Becker, of Watchung avenue, who died on February 17. Harry C. Runyon, Esq., appeared at the proceedings as attorney for the estate.

The estate consists of $10,000 in bonds and mortgages and is equally divided among four children and one grandson. The children are Mrs. Henry Eggerding, Mrs. Newton B. Smalley, John Becker and Fred Becker. George Becker, the grandson, is bequeathed the share of his father, who died about five years ago.

Auto Strikes Bike.

A collision between an automobile and a bicycle in which the damage was slight and the blame was mutual occurred Saturday afternoon at 5:40 near the corner of Park and North avenues. Alexander Grosset, of Woodland avenue, in an automobile, and J. Herbert Freeman, of 1280 Park avenue, on a bicycle, were the men involved. Apologies mended all the damage.

MISS MAY STRYKER GOES TO HER REWARD

Miss May Stryker, aged nineteen years, died at 2:45 o'clock yesterday afternoon at the home of her cousin, Mrs. Harvey VanPelt, of Morris street, after a lingering illness. A year ago she underwent treatment in Muhlenberg Hospital and apparently was much improved. A few months ago she suffered a relapse and grew rapidly worse.

Miss Stryker was born at Harrison, N. J., June, 30, 1891. Her mother died when she was an infant and she was adopted by her uncle, Isaac B. Stryker, formerly of this city, but later of Centreville and now of Somerville. She was a member of the Monroe Avenue M. E. church, and possessed a sweet Christian character.

The funeral service will be held at the late home tomorrow afternoon at 2 o'clock, and Rev. C. S. Kemble, pastor of the Monroe Avenue church will officiate. The burial will be at Somerville.

DRUNKEN MAN PUT WIFE OUT OF HOME

Robert Moore, of 244 East Third street, was arrested yesterday morning on complaint of his wife who accused him of puting her out of the house. Moore was drunk on Saturday night and brought home with him a pal named Kelly, a resident of Dunellen. Moore and Kelly began drinking again early yesterday morning, having brought rum home the night before. While Mrs Moore was engaged getting breakfast, her husband threw a cigarette stump into the pot of boiling potatoes and when Mrs. Moore objected Moore ejected her from the house

She went to police headquarters and complained to Chief Kiely, who had Moore brought in and locked up.

This morning Moore said he had no recollection of what had transpired the previous night, and as a matter of fact hardly remembered putting his wife out doors yesterday. The couple have four children and have been married ten years and their only trouble during their married life has been the husband's drinking habits. After hearing the story, Judge Runyon with the wife's consent gave Moore a chance to go out and behave himself as a man and exacted a promise from him of future abstinence from liquor.

Dr. Shipman, in his address, held out Christ as an example to follow in all the walks of life. He called attention to the fact that the people nowadays, generally speaking, did not live up to their opportunities He made a general plea for all to take advantage of every opportunity offered to do good.

YEGGMEN ARE THWARTED

Drill Safe in Leo Slonim's Jewelry Store, But Attempt at Burglary Discovered.

SIX HOLES IN STRONG BOX.

Mode of Access to Store a Mystery —$10,000 in Money and Jewelry in Jeopardy.

Just too late to work their plan and a carelessness in leaving a mark on the side made the robbing of Leo Slonim, a West Front street jeweler, an impossibility Saturday night. But it was a close squeeze. Mr. Slonim had just closed the door of the safe, when he noticed a long scratch on the side that had escaped previous notice. Closer examination showed six holes drilled into the side of the big iron box, five of which had penetrated clear through, and it was evident that preparations had been made to dynamite the safe for the purpose of robbery.

Mr. Slonim notified the police and upon their arrival a thorough search of the premises was made. No burglars were discovered. It is quite likely that they forced an entrance through the trap door from the cellar as there is no possible place of ingress except through the front door Mr. Slonim thinks the work of the wouldbe yeggmen was accomplished sometime during the previous night and that before the safe tappers could make their final preparations they were frightened away.

Two or three years ago Mr. Slonim was held up by a couple of men at the point of a revolver and at that time was robbed of several hundred dollars worth of jewelry and diamonds. He was made doubly nervous from the fact that one of his friends in Syracuse, N. Y., was recently robbed and in consequence was ruined and went crazy. Extra precautions will be taken in the future to guard this store as well as others in the city since it has become known that yeggmen are giving their attention to our business houses.

GAVE AN OBJECT LESSON ON SABBATH OBSERVANCE

Rev. Charles L. Goodrich, pastor of the Congregational church, introduced an attractive method in the education of the children of the congregation yesterday morning, impressing the boys and girls the value and holiness of the Sabbath by means of object lessons. A five minutes' talk immediately after the sermon especially for the children served the purpose of interesting them as well as the adult members of the church.

Taking a spiral spring, some books two handkerchiefs and a disabled clock Pastor Goodrich showed the children what each one stood for in his talk. The spring illustrated the wear on man with the week's work and how the Sabbath was especially designed to put new life in everyone who is busy during the six working days. The handkerchiefs one soiled and the other spotlessly clean served to illustrate how the soul may be cleansed on the Sabbath. The clock was used to show how necessary it is for one to be regulated every so often, making the Sabbath the day for the purpose.

In the evening some excellent stereopticon views were shown and a short talk given on the various nationalities which come to this country.

On Friday last the Junior Endeavor Society of this church enjoyed a sociable in which the Japanese game of troka-troka was played. Other games helped to pass a very pleasant afternoon. Ruth Fuller won the spoon contest and Henry Brandt the peanut hunt. Refreshments were served by the following committee: Helen Weseman, Florence Neilsen and Elizabeth Martin. To Carter L. Goodrich, the president of the junior society is due great credit for its flourishing condition.

DUNELLEN AND VICINITY.

The Romph boys of the borough will have no more escapades. They have been leading their father, an honest laborer, a merry chase for months. They are little chaps, steps, from eight to eleven years old, but the public schools have barred them and Dunellen police officers have handed them up as incorrigible. Recently the boys ran away and in due time arrived at New York. They were collecting a harvest of dimes and nickles at the ferry from sympathetic people who believed the fairy tales they were telling, but their career there was short as a children's society sent them home. Their lastest prank was throwing stones at passing passenger trains of the Central Railroad at Lincoln. After a number of windows had been broken the boys were taken to New Brunswick. Former Assemblyman R. F. von Minden called the attention of Judge Adrian Lyon to the boys Friday in the Middlesex County Court and the judge committed the oldest boy to the State Home for Boys at Trenton and turned the other two over to the New Jersey Children's Home Society.

Adjudged guilty of selling liquor without a license, William Laute, of 701 Fairview street, Camden, who failed to have his saloon license renewed, was Saturday sentenced to six months in jail by Judge Joline, in Camden.

Many prominent men were present Friday night at the banquet of the Bordentown Board of Trade and Improvement Association at the Bordentown House. Frederick W. Donnelly, of Trenton, spoke on the "Deeper Waterway."

For allowing his horse to stand on a corner in the cold, without feed or blanket for many hours, John Carter, thirty-five years old, of Third and Pine streets, was fined $5 and costs by Justice of the Peace Hyatt, in Camden, yesterday.

Wilmer Allen, night foreman at the Gibbstown Powder Works, with James Jefferson, an assistant, were nearly suffocated by an ammonia tank overflowing. When found by John Johnson they were unconscious, and Johnson was also overcome. When the fumes passed off all regained consciousness.

After the president of the organization to which the funds belonged and the attorney for the bonding company which made good the loss had asked for leniency for the aged defendant, Frank A. Buren, who pleaded guilty to embezzling $1,000 from the William Penn Hook-and-Ladder Company, of which he was the treasurer, was let off with a fine of $100 by Judge Joline in the Camden Criminal Court yesterday.

Spring Opening

The Magic Wand of Spring

Has Transformed Our Millinery Department Into a Medley of Color and Beauty

You are cordially invited to attend the formal showing of original creations in smart styles designed for Spring Wearing on Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday

March the 15th, 16th and 17th

We have endeavored to gather from Fashion Centres, as well as originate in our own workrooms, the best millinery styles designed for this season; and, while it has been a difficult task to excel our past efforts—we believe we can consistently state that our Spring stocks are the best we have ever had the good fortune to offer you.

Here you find a picturesque model bedecked with a mass of bright hued flowers, there a handsome design of feathers and maline, there an exquisite creation of maline and flowers,—it is an interest-compelling, desire-creating exhibit of stylish headgear.

Now—a word about prices—it is NOT our policy to charge for style—if we did—our hats would cost a great deal more than the prices at which they are marked. This is well worth remembering.

We again bid you welcome to the store, its stocks, its attractions and its economies. COME.

Barnaby Zephyrs

Scotch Process Ginghams

286 Distinctly Different Weavings,

At 15c a Yard

Barnaby Zephyrs are the most widely advertised wash fabrics in the country. The current magazines teem with messages heralding their beauty and excellence. Everybody has heard of Barnaby Zephyrs—not everybody knows them as well as they should, the show and sale planned by us for this week, beginning tomorrow, is intended to bring these superior products of the American loom—these triumphs of American ingenuity and art—into the foreground where they rightly belong.

Barnaby Zephyrs are as light and even and beautiful as the best 35c and 45c foreign ginghams, towards which most folks have looked for beauty and quality in the past, and tho made in America, as Barnaby Zephyrs are, they are made by spinners, weavers and finishers transplanted from dear old Scotland to the Baranby Mills in New England, thus these charming fabrics embody

Scotch Ideas, Scotch Designs, Scotch Colorings

There is a wonderful profusion of checks, plaids, stripes and plain colors in the stupendous stocks we have gathered for this big event. They are woven from separately dyed, scoured and sun-dried cotton yarns, and are undoubtedly the clearest washing ginghams money can buy.

There are all of 286 weaves, designs and color combinations ready for those who come tomorrow—a bewildering variety to choose from, such as no other store would attempt to show—and the price right thru the whole line of beautiful pieces all this week will be only..... .15

Come and see the Barnaby Model Gowns in the latest tunic and overskirt effects.

See also the Banaby Gingham Parasols, and, perhaps, the most charming of all, the dear little girls with Barnaby Sunbonnets on their heads.

Extra Feature---Arnold's Percales

4,400 Yards Arnold's Best Yard Wide Percales—Priced solely for this sale, and only for those who come to the store for the goods, Tuesday, at..... .91/2

PLAINFIELD HAS GOT NEW BRUNSWICK'S GOAT

"Patsy" Vanderveer, the genial sporting editor of the New Brunswick Times, is a scrapper. We admire him for that trait. After wiping the dust from his fighting togs following a two months controversy with Harold O'Neill, the sporting critic of the Home News, of that city, Mr. Vanderveer seeks new fields. In Friday's issue of the Times he takes exception to a truthful squib printed in the baseball column of The Daily Press a few days ago. This is what he says:

"Sporting scribes in New Brunswick are doing a lot of shouting against 'bush' league ball. It is because they are educated up to teaman game, a la VanCleef, maybe—Plainfield Press.

"It is possible that the Press man remembers the raw deal meted out to New Brunswick in Plainfield and wilfully attempts to mislead his readers? Of course we don't blame him for being sore because New Brunswick refused to join the league and therfore made its success impressible. It would have meant much for the national game in Plainfield.

"Nevertheless we will be tickled to death to entertain the Plainfield fans in this city any time and just by way of giving the Brunswick's a little practice, will drub the Plainfield bunch any old time they like. We'll be glad to have an umpire who is known in neither city."

All we care to add is that when Plainfield meets the "imported" New Brunswick team on the diamond this season that the fur will surely fly. And it will be done by a team composed of local boys. A strictly local team trimmed the $200 semi-pro aggregation that represented Westfield a few years ago, and the same broom will be used in the coming battles with New Brunswick. So, "Patsy" be sure you place your money on the winner.

Manager Dorflinger, up to date has not signed a pitcher. He has several applications and it is probable he will select a curve dispenser in the next two weeks.

Manager Dorflinger and Adam Shott represented Plainfield at the meeting of the New Jersey State League at Perth Amboy yesterday afternoon.

"Hub" Conover announces that he is going to re-organize the Somersets which was one of the crack teams of Plainfield two years ago.

The South River Gun Club team won Wednesday in the three team race which was held at Brantingham's Club grounds, on Park avenue, breaking 83 blue rocks. The New Brunswick team was second with 81, and Plainfield third with 80. In the shoot last week at New Brunswick, South River was first and Plainfield second. The next match will take place next Wednesday at South River.

As it is practically certain that Scotch Plains will not have a team this season there is some available timber in that burg which will be available to fill any vacancies in the local lineup.

Willie Keeler is wanted by so many clubs in the big leagues and the minors that he is at a loss just what to do. After everything had been practically settled that "Wee Willie" was going to Toronto, Brooklyn and Cincinnati came along with offers for the little fellow. Manager Dahlen, of the Infants, and Clark Griffith, of the Reds, are after him and both expect to land the clever hitter in their net.

King Brockett, of the Highlanders, will probably never pitch another game of ball. He has notified Manager Stallings that he will not join the New York Americans at Athens, Ga., for the reason that he has decided to leave the diamond forever. It is not a salary grievance that has caused Brockett's refusal to play, but it is a well known fact that he suffered from a strain last year from which he cannot recover without submitting to an operation.

Brooklyn fans are pulling for Manager Bill Dahlen to get Willie Keeler back on the Superba team. Keeler was a member of the Brooklyn team in 1900, when the representatives of the City of Spires captured the championship of the National League.

Owner Charles T. Chapin, of the Rochester Club, declares that he spent $17,500 to win the Eastern League pennant last year, and he will spend more to cop it again this season if necessary.

Announcement was made on Saturday that the American League baseball park at Broadway and 168th street will be offered at once for private sale. It is intended to cut it up into 150 city lots. The ground is valued at $1,700,000.

Joseph C. Martin has been engaged for another year as soloist at Grace church.

A poverty social will be held at the Netherwood Reformed church Thursday night, under the auspices of the Ladies' Aid Society.
